2. THE COOK: "Oh, Miss Lulu, the water pipe has bursted in the kitchen, and th' water is floodin' th' floor. It's Sunday and I can't get no plumber, either."
CHARLEY: "Pooh! I can fix that in a jiffy."
LEANDER: "Onthespot, I'll fix it. That is MY privilege."
LULU: "Yes, Leander, YOU can fix it."

3. LEANDER: "Bosh! This is nothing at all. Just get me a hammer, Lulu. That's it. Thanks."
CHARLEY: "Better let me do it, old man."
LULU: "Perhaps you had better let Charley do it, Leander."

4. CHARLEY: "Let me show you how to do it, Leander. I lived next door to a plumber when I was a boy."
LEANDER: "You can't rattle me, Onthespot. I have it fixed now and"——
LULU: "Hurry up, Leander. We will be late for church."

5. LEANDER: "Ye gods! It has burst in another place."
CHARLEY: Sputter! Sputter! Sputter! Sputter!
LULU: "Oh, Charley!"

6. LULU: "Yes, Charley, as you are so thoroughly drenched now and can't go to church, you will be so kind as to stay and repair that new leak, I know. Thank you, Charley. Come, Leander, we will be late."
LEANDER: "Yes, Charley, you know all about it. We will expect a good job, too, old man. You lived next to a plumber when you were a boy, you know."

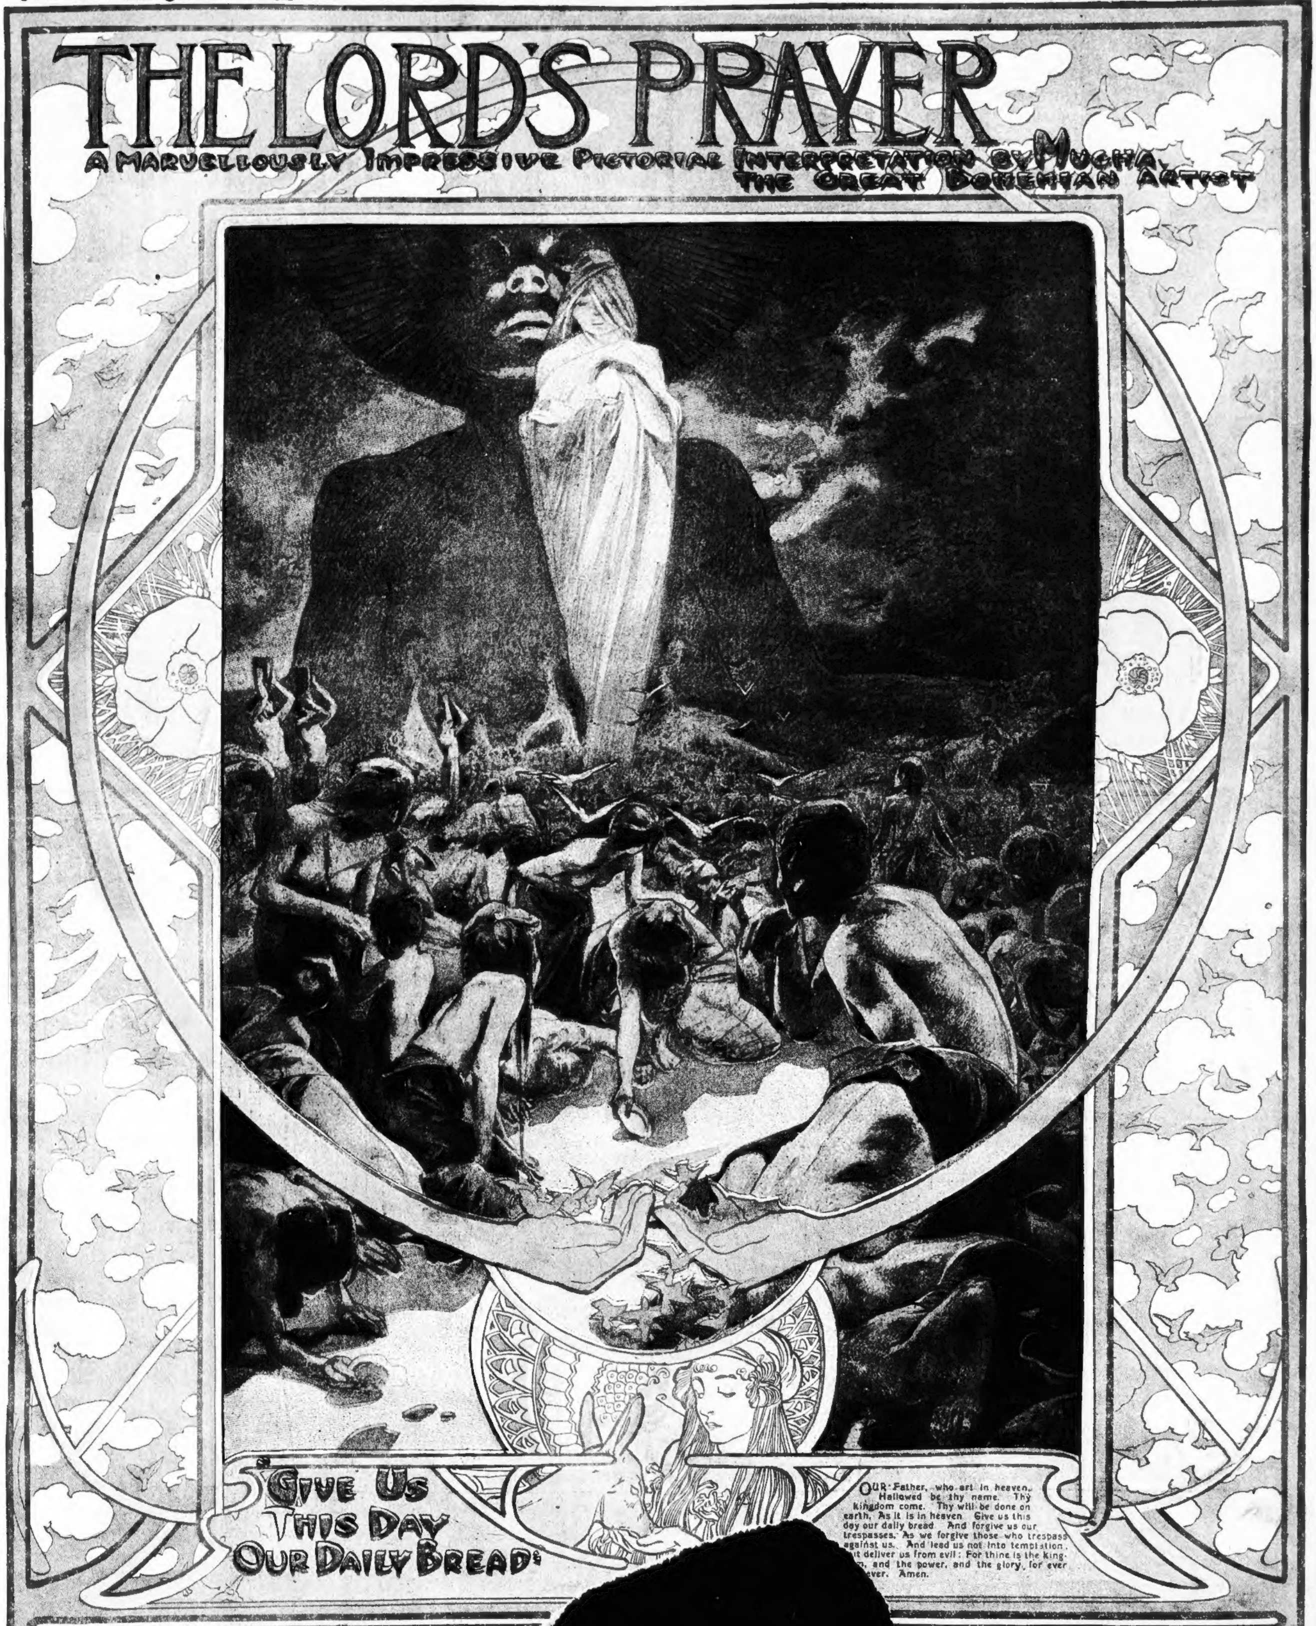
THE LORD'S PRAYER

A MARVELLOUSLY IMPRESSIVE PICTORIAL INTERPRETATION BY MUCHA,
THE GREAT BOHEMIAN ARTIST



"GIVE US THIS DAY OUR DAILY BREAD"

OUR Father, who art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, As it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, ut deliver us from evil: For thine is the king m, and the power, and the glory, for ever ever. Amen.

SON of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Rosh, Mesech and Tubal, and prophesy against him.---
Ezekiel 38:2.

[illegible] Bible, and Russia's Defeat

By Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur
Pastor of Calvary Baptist Church,
New York City.

ATTEMPTS to explain unfulfilled prophecies are usually fruitless speculations. It is not easy always to identify prophecies after their fulfilment has occurred; but it is almost impossible to identify them before their fulfilment has taken place.

The question has arisen frequently of late as to whether or not Russia has a place in these mysterious prophecies. There are interpreters who affirm that Russia is mentioned in at least two passages of Scripture—Ezekiel, xxxviii., and Ezekiel, xxxix., 1. The first passage reads, in the King James version:

"Son of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him

"Thus saith the Lord God; behold I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal."

The second passage is virtually a reproduction of the first. This is confessedly a difficult passage of Scripture. The difficulty arises from the fact that we do not know with certainty who are the rulers and peoples intended by the prophecy. The words translated chief prince of Magog, etc., ought to be translated:

Does "Rosh" Mean Russia?

"Magog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal." The word translated prince is the term usually employed for the head of a nomad tribe.

The meaning in this passage is that Magog is the head of the three great Scythian tribes, of which "Rosh" is the first. Scholarly interpreters, among whom is the learned Gesenius, consider it beyond doubt that by "Rosh" is intended the tribe on the north of the Taurus—this tribe taking its name from its neighborhood to the Rha, which is the Volga, and so, these interpreters affirm, we have in this name and tribe the first trace of the Rus or Russian nation.

HOW JAPAN'S VICTORIES WERE FORETOLD IN THE BIBLE BY PROPHET EZEKIEL

THE COST OF AMBITION. Drawn by A. Michael.

And thou shalt come from thy place out of the North parts, thou and many people with thee, all of them riding on horses, a great company and a mighty army.
—Ezekiel 38:15.

Other learned interpreters, however, identify the word "Rosh" with the word "Rass" in the Koran. In a Latin chronicle, A. D. 839, we have the first certain mention of the Russians by this name. These interpreters make Meshech stand for Muscovy, and Rosh for Russia. If this interpretation be correct, it certainly is marvellously interesting.

This early Biblical notice of a great empire profoundly stirs the imagination. It is the solitary instance in Scripture of the mention of a great modern nation.

It is most unfortunate that in the King James version the word "Rosh" does not appear; it does appear, however, in the Revised Version, in the American standard edition.

Its omission from the older version is an illustration of the unfortunate variations of that version from the meaning of the sacred text of the Old Testament.

There are, of course, various explanations of the words Gog and Magog. The common opinion, however, is that they refer to a people who were to come from the north, to invade the land of Israel and to suffer defeat in that land. The names were generally understood to be symbolical expressions for the heathen natives of Asia, or more particularly for the Scythians or Sarmatians, who, it is believed, are in part at least the ancestors of the Russians of to-day.

Some vague knowledge of these mysterious peoples had reached Palestine at the time of Ezekiel's prophecy. The words Gog and Magog are found in Revelation, xx., 8. Interpreters of this passage also believe that the terms refer to the Scythians who reside between the Caspian and the Euxine seas, or in the region of Mount Caucasus.

Acording to Hebrew custom, the name Magog might include all the unknown barbarous tribes about the Caucasian Mountains.

—Revelation 16:16.

The Meaning of Armageddon.

The question now arises as to what is meant by this battle, or series of battles. We know that the Russians are partly descended from Scythian and Tartar tribes. Napoleon was entirely right when he said: "Scratch a Russian and you find a Tartar."

The Russians were overcome in 1222 by the invasion of Mongol tribes. In the battle on the banks of the Kalka, a tributary of the Sea of Azov, in 1224, the Russians were totally routed by the world-renowned conqueror, Genghis Khan.

The Mongol invasion arrested the progress of Russian civilization and almost blotted out the nation. Russians intermarried with the Mongols; thus the Mongol strain came into Russian blood.

Not until the time of Ivan III., who took his crown in 1462, did Russia throw off allegiance to the Mongol Khans. The Russians thus, both through the Sarmatian, Scythian and distinctively Tartar tribes, are the descendants of the peoples understood by Gog and Magog, Rosh, Meshech and Tubal.

All these interpretations look forward to a great battle in "a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." These interpreters find another identification for the Russians in Jeremiah, i., 14:

"Out of the north an evil shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land.'"

Russia is nominally a Christian nation; and Japan is nominally a heathen nation. Russia, however, never fully abandoned its early idolatry. When Christianity was introduced in the tenth century by Prince Vladimir, the names of heathen idols were changed to Christian saints; but the people kept on with practically the same heathen worship.

There is a vast amount of virtual heathenism in Russia to-day. I defy any man to make an appreciable philosophic or religious distinction between a Russian ikon and a Japanese idol. The great Master gave us this infallible test for men and nations:

Ho, ho, come forth and flee from the land of the North, saith the Lord; for I have spread you abroad as the four winds of heaven, saith the Lord.—Zachariah 2:6.

"By their fruits shall ye know them."

Japan More Christian Than Russia.

Judged by their fruits in education, in liberty, in humanitarianism and in all the nobler elements of civilization, Japan is to-day more Christian than Russia. The true name for the "Yellow Peril," so far as Japan is concerned, is the "Golden Opportunity."

All our missionaries in China dread the dominance of Russia vastly more than the dominance of any heathen nation. Wherever Russia plants her foot the flowers of liberty, intelligence and true religion wither and die. Whether Russia be intended or not in Jeremiah's prophecy, she certainly is the evil breaking forth out of the north. Whether Manchuria be Armageddon or not, the overthrow of Russia there may well stand as a fulfilment of prophecies representing the overthrow of evil from what ever quarter it may come.

The word Armageddon properly means "The Mountain of Megiddo," a city on the west of the River Jordan; but in the mystical language of prophecy the word mountain represents the church, and the stirring historical events which took place at Megiddo have a typical reference to the sorrows and triumphs of the people of God under the Gospel.

There have been many interpretations of the passage in the Book of Revelations. Some have referred the battle of Armageddon to the defeat of the Turkish power, or Mohammedanism. It certainly has been a great hindrance to the spread of the Gospel.

"Rosh," in the Original Hebrew Text of the Prophecy, the Nation to be Vanquished in the Last Great War, is Identified by Scholars as the Russia of To-day.

NEW YORK'S MOST INTERESTING ROMANCE

"My love for this woman whom I will make my wife is so holy and pure that the marriage ceremony is needed only to legalize a union that has existed between ourselves since the beginning."

—J. G. Phelps Stokes.

How J. G. Phelps Stokes, Millionaire Philanthropist, Found His Affinity In a Working Girl, Who Is a Jewess

OF all the love romances which have involved members of old or celebrated or wealthy American families, none has offered such novel and interesting features as that of J. G. Phelps Stokes and Miss Rose Harriet Pastor—he a millionaire whose family has been Episcopalian for generations, and she a poor working girl and a Jewess.

On this page both tell in glowing language how they recognized almost at their first meeting that their souls had been "one from the beginning of all things."

This child of the London Ghetto, transplanted in America to become a poetess and a worker among the poor of her race in the intervals of labor at cigarmaking, and this son of Anson Phelps Stokes and brother of Caroline Phelps Stokes—wife of Robert Hunter, the settlement worker—declare that they will spend their lives as co-workers among the "other half" of New York's Ghetto, living in a three-room flat and giving no heed to the exalted social position to which Mr. Stokes's wealth and name entitle them.

Even so, when first I saw you, seemed it love,
That among souls allied to mine was yet
One nearer kindred than life hinted of.
O born with me somewhere that men forget,
And tho' in years of sight and sound we met,
Known for my soul's birth-partner well enough!
—Dante Gabriel Rosetti.

"SEE, this poem of Rosetti's so fully expresses what my future husband and I have always been to each other!"

Miss Rose Harriet Pastor had recited the poem from memory in a full and melodious, yet soft, voice. Her eyes lighted as she went on to apply it to her own love experience.

"Long, long before time began it seems that I first knew the man I am to marry. When I first met Mr. Stokes at the University Settlement I knew in my inmost soul that I had been one with him from the beginning of all things. We are one in spirit and in the love that has glorified my life.

"You ask me when Mr. Stokes and I pledged our troth. There never has been an engagement. Since I first met and knew my fiance there has been only a reunion of spirit. We both realized that we were again united, and no word of formal engagement was ever uttered by either of us. Marriage will merely give legal sanction to a spiritual life that has always made us one.

Love That Has Always Been.

"This poem I have quoted, and that of 'Marpessa,' in which Stephen Phillips sings the story of a love that was in some far-off time, and is recognized in the present, perfectly epitomize the story of how Mr. Stokes and I met again just two years ago and both intuitively knew that we had been of and for each other since the beginning.

"You tell me that Mr. Stokes has spoken of our love as something which has always been. Is it not splendid to have the love of such a man! Never were two people on this earth more identical in thought, desires and purposes.

Even Their Thoughts the Same.

"I shall never forget one day that he had taken me for a walk on Riverside Drive. We were leaning on the stone balustrade silently contemplating the beauty of the Palisades. I spoke to him of three paintings at the Metropolitan Museum to which I always had recourse when I felt depressed or unhappy. He asked me what they were, and when I told him of two in which spiritual beauty and sadness were the prevailing characteristics, he interrupted me eagerly and said that those two paintings were his own favorites, with the exception of one other—that glorious canvas in which Jeanne d'Arc is depicted at her home in Brittany praying for spiritual aid to begin her work of the redemption of France, and about her the forms of angels.

"And that was the very painting which I was just about to tell him of!

"I have never attended schools since I was forced to enter a factory in Cleveland when twelve years of age. I was born in Russia, can talk Yiddish and make myself understood in German, but I most prefer the English tongue.

"To my dear friend, Mrs. Flora Mayer Rauh, of Indianapolis, formerly of Cleveland, I give credit for my yearning for culture. This rare and lovely woman, when I was but a slip of a girl, instilled into my soul longing for the good, the beautiful and the spiritual. Her influence had a marked effect upon my life, and it was through her that I determined to seek a livelihood in New York by writing.

"My father has been dead these many years, but mother, my little brother, Bernard, and I came to New York, and I sought and secured employment as a writer. We lived first on the East Side and later engaged this little apartment on Wendover avenue, and here we have been very happy.

"It was just about two years ago that I met Mr. Stokes at the University Settlement. I had been instructed by my editor to secure an interview with him, and he was infinitely courteous to me.

"I saw in him many of the characteristics of Abraham Lincoln. Like the great President, Mr. Stokes possesses that love and sympathy for the unfortunate that was the fairest trait of Lincoln's character.

"Mr. Stokes is very tall, and, I believe, six feet of the most thorough democracy. A thoroughbred gentleman, a scholar and a son of a millionaire, he is a man of the common people, even as Lincoln was. He is a plain man, and makes one feel perfectly at ease with him. Nor does he possess that one great fault that men of his kind generally possess—the pride of humility. He does not flaunt his democracy in one's face, but when his democracy is mentioned to him he appears as glad as a child who is told by an appreciative parent: 'You have been a good boy today.'

"The fact that I was born a Jewess and that my fiance is an Episcopalian never made the slightest difference to us. We both believe that Judaism is an inspired religion even as we so believe of Christianity. Our life will prove the depth of this wonderful love which has blessed us both and made us infinitely happy."

Never Formally Engaged.

Mr. Stokes is a tall, slender young man of thirty-five. His face is beardless, his forehead high, his eyes deep set and filled with the melancholy of one who suffers for the ills of others.

"My love for this woman whom I will make my wife," he said, "is so holy and pure that the marriage ceremony is needed only to legalize a union that has existed between our souls since the beginning. We have never been formally engaged. I do not believe the word 'engagement' was ever mentioned between us—yet we both knew and understood.

"Life to both of us means service—the full expression of the simple life. Neither of us cares for luxury, nor for the pomp and circumstance of society. Our aims and ideals are identical. They have always been so. They always will be.

"We shall be married in July and by an Episcopalian minister. Possibly my brother may marry us. We will go abroad for our honeymoon, and spend some time in Southern France, Italy or Switzerland—at some quiet, out-of-the-way place.

"On our return it is our desire to take a three-room flat in some clean tenement on the East Side, and there work out our purposes in life.

"We shall not seek happiness, for we have found that already, but we shall try to give happiness to others."

Miss Pastor has written and published numerous poems. Among them the following, entitled "No Sabbath!" is Mr. Stokes's favorite:

The world is tired because it hath no Sabbath,
Weary of all the work and all the play
In all the week; in all the long days seven,
It keepeth not one holy, quiet day.

The Sabbath! catcheth workday like a fever.
Or filled with play which leaves the very soul
A tattered, ragged garment that the Weaver
Gave and bade us keep it ever whole.

Pauseth ne'er to contemplate or pray.
Hies to ballet, ball and concert, never Heeds no Holy and no Sabbath Day.

World! thou resteth not nor knoweth quiet;
Soul and body suffereth quick decay.
O World, grown weary—keep the Sabbath Day.

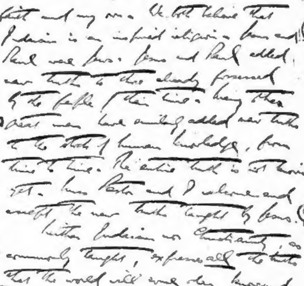
D. G. Rossetti

Rossetti Poem in Miss Pastor's hand writing which she says expresses her Love for Mr Stokes,



There is no difference between Miss Pastor's faith and my own. We both believe that Judaism is an inspired religion. Jesus and Paul were Jews. Jesus and Paul added new truths to those already possessed by the people of their time. Many other great men have similarly added new truths to the stock of human knowledge, from time to time. The entire truth is not known yet. Miss Pastor and I welcome and accept the new truths taught by Jesus. Neither Judaism nor Christianity, as commonly taught, expresses all the truths that the world will one day know and accept.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT'S OWN PHOTOGRAPHS OF FATHER'S INAUGURATION.

I SNAPPED papa all right at the inauguration. I told him I should, but I guess he thought I'd be too rattled.

It was dead easy. My camera was loaded for bear, and I warned him he'd better look pleasant. I was on the Capital steps only a little distance behind where the Chief Justice stood. When the time came for papa to make his spiel I got ready. The only trouble was the duffers that kept getting in the way.

Before he'd said a dozen words my chance came. Somebody in front of me got his elbow out of the way and I let he[illegible] go. I felt I'd got him dead and could harrly wait to de[illegible] the negative. — KERMIT ROOSEVELT'S AC-C[illegible] TO A SCHOOL CHUM.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT, who would be one of the most interesting boys in America even if he were not a son of the President, is represented in a very characteristic light on this page as an amateur photographer. The photographs of inauguration scenes reproduced here he took with his own snapshot camera and kindly contributed for use in this newspaper.

Kermit, as occasional Washington dispatches in the newspapers indicate, is an exceedingly versatile boy. Of late, however, his passion for amateur photography has made him and his camera well nigh inseparable. The inauguration of his father as President of the United States was an opportunity for snapshots that filled him with joy.

He did not confine his operations to the locations reserved for the Roosevelt family, but made use of every point of vantage that appealed to him—as is shown by the results achieved. He and his camera are such a familiar sight about Washington that the parade officers and the crowd readily made room for him whenever he and his camera turned up.

One signal proof of young Kermit's vocation as a snapshot artist is his success in catching the President's face at a critical moment during the inauguration speech. As the reproduction on this page shows, he and his camera were close behind the Chief Justice on the Capitol steps. People's elbows kept eclipsing his father's face, but he had his finger on the button, and the moment the elbows got out of the way he "let her go," as he triumphantly explained to a schoolboy chum.

Kermit's boy companions declare that "pushing the button" does not satisfy him—that he develops most of his own negatives.

THE SHATTERED ROMANCE OF POOR LITTLE NATHALIE SCHENCK

ONE YEAR AGO

She The most popular debutante of 1903 was happily married to Captain Glen Collins, of the Cameron Highlanders, with $50,000 a year.

AND TO-DAY

She Is on her way home alone to earn her own living after discovering that her husband is a fraudulent bankrupt.

CHAPTER I. Miss Nathalie Schenck, of New York and Newport, meets "Captain" Glen Collins of the British Army.

CHAPTER III. Confessing that he is a bankrupt, "Captain" Collins asks his wife for money.

WHEN Nathalie Schenck became Mrs. Glen Collins there were those who said she had no taste.

When, within less than five months, it was rumored that she had left him, people agreed that she had at least a little.

And now that she is about to abandon her matrimonial venture completely for one that will include high class millinery and dressmaking, they say she has the taste of genius.

It has been announced that this most attractive and charming of New York women, the most popular debutante of the season of 1903, finding her husband a bankrupt and forced to resign his commission in the army, has decided to return here from Paris and become milliner-in-chief to the "600."

"Do you think I can make a success of it?" she wrote over to one of her friends.

"A success?" the friend cabled back. "Why, my darling Nathalie, we'll buy your hats and wear them even if you line them yourself."

It is quite decided that the millinery shop of Mrs. Glen Collins is to be a success.

She has always had taste in trimming hats and a love for it, too. When she hadn't a fad for running about Newport with her hair hanging down her back, free to the breezes, and her head uncovered, regardless of tan or freckles, she had the prettiest collection of hats that one may imagine. They were simple, but they suited.

One of her friends after the other would appeal to her to fasten in a plume or a flower or to advise her what trimming to get. They never stopped short of anything except the lining. They never did dare to ask Nathalie to line a hat, for they knew she would refuse. But now, poor Nathalie, things are different.

The Coming Milliner.

She is coming over shortly from Paris, they say, with the very latest styles and a most excellent trimmer. Then she will send out cards to a number of New York's most select people, those who know a confection when they see it and are prepared to pay for it accordingly.

Imagine how charming it will be to be served by her!

"And imagine," said one of her intimates the other day, "what a good time she will have telling us good-naturedly what she really thinks of the way we clothe ourselves! Nathalie always had an idea about these things, as a good many women have, but she never had a chance to express it.

"Now she can look us over critically and say: 'My dear, I never could understand why you wear round hats off your face when big, droopy ones would be so much more becoming!

"'Now, you wont be offended if I tell you that you always overload your hats. Of course, it's good for the milliner, but as a friend'— Or 'those little turbans you wear look like pimples on the top of your head! Ah, don't be angry. Please don't—you know I want to make a success of millinery. I must if I am going to support my child, and if I make you look better, why your husband will want you to come to me Oh, I know men!'"

So she does, poor Nathalie, to her cost!

It will be a sort of honor to receive a card from Mrs. Glen Collins, for she is a woman of courage who is coming back to her native country after a terrible blow to fight for a livelihood.

You may say she ought to have known better than to accept a husband upon the bare presentation of a card and a few letters of introduction; you may say that those who had charge of her certainly should have known better. So they should, and now that they look back upon it all in the light of a bitter experience they probably think so, too. But Nathalie was in love and "Captain" Glen Collins, as he called himself, one of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, was received everywhere and considered a brilliant "alliance." He claimed to have an income of £10,000 a year, his card attested his rank in a crack regiment and that he was a member of the Naval and Military Club.

There was, apparently, nothing to hint that he was head over ears in debt, in America in search of an heiress to drag him out and redeem some of the dishonored checks that threatened him with exposure. He was evidently a gentleman as the word goes. His uncle, William Collins, who made his fortune in Bibles, is the Church of England's official publisher and King Edward's own special printer. He was a member of the Old World aristocracy sure enough, but members of that aristocracy have, as we have reason to know by the troubles of our American heiresses, proved rascals many a time ere now.

Captain Collins, as he called himself (it has since been learned that he had only a lieutenant's rank), had the outward semblance of a gentleman. He wore the clothes and the manners of one. He wore them so well that, although he came over here preceded by a cloud of rumors, which told of his extraordinary luck at the gaming tables of Monte Carlo and his extraordinary extravagance elsewhere, he was invited to the very best houses that are considered representative here of society.

At one of them he met the belle of the season. Nathalie Schenck's name was a synonyme for fascination and charm. She was blonde, big, and beautiful. She had golden hair and blue eyes and a skin of peaches and cream. She probably has all these characteristic beauties now, but they are surely dimmed by the ravages of trouble that have preyed upon her during the year of her married life.

No one in the fashionable set in which Nathalie Schenck moved wondered that the young Englishman should fall a victim to her charms. They were quite accustomed to that. It was an old story though Nathalie was one of the youngest of the debutantes. She and Natica Rives and Cynthia Roche were known as the "inseparables," also as the "originals." They created fashions of their own and dared to carry them out.

It was Nathalie Schenck who first announced that it was good for the hair to wear it hanging down one's back—"particularly," she added, "if one has good hair."

Of course they had and, of course, Nathalie's was especially beautiful. A mass of gold hanging to her waist, it was an exquisite setting for her radiant, happy face.

Captain Glen Collins came along one day when her fad for wearing her hair down was in its vogue.

"Well, no wonder," they said in Newport, and they watched the courtship with amused eyes. They had watched Nathalie before in what they believed was a similar game, a Summer flirtation with "Tommie" Tailer when Tommie let her win every round of tennis without so much as turning a hair or straining a muscle; and another flirtation—Summer or Winter, what's the difference?—with Eugene Higgins, of yachting fame, when he let her guide the tiller and row the boat Veruna where and when she willed. Oh, Newport was accustomed to see Nathalie Schenck amuse herself with hearts while her own remained calm and firm.

The Marriage That Led to Millinery.

So they looked upon the tempestuous wooing of Captain Collins as another of Nathalie's experiences. Wise as these Newporters are they acknowledge now that there wasn't one of them who fathomed the end.

There is no doubt that the bankrupt Englishman had it in view from the very first moment that he beheld the fair Nathalie.

She was too young to have much history, though she began at sixteen to make a world of philanthropists say, "Who is she?" Some one had told her that the soldiers in Cuba needed ice, and Nathalie, with the same determination that made her say "I will marry Captain Collins," set about to establish an endless chain that would shower dimes upon dimes into her lap and lumps upon lumps of ice into the American camps in Cuba.

Nathalie Schenck was victorious. This story was told to Captain Collins, and he pieced it out doubtless for himself with such bits of information as the following:

Nathalie Schenck is the granddaughter of the late Matthew Morgan, a wealthy New Orleans banker; she is a belle in the wealthiest set in the world, an intimate friend of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, of Mrs. George Gould, and of all the other millionaires; to introduce her her mother, Mrs. Spottswood D. Schenck, gave a dinner for one hundred people that was one of the smartest events of the season.

All these things had their effect, no doubt, upon the bankrupt Englishman. Then Nathalie Schenck, in tulle and gauze floated upon his vision to complete the picture as one it would be good to possess always till death do us part.

Only a year since Nathalie Schenck received a carload of congratulations upon becoming the bride of Captain Glen Collins! Just one year since, amid a glory of California Spring blossoms, in the little town of Monterey, Nathalie Schenck proudly relinquished the name of her honored grandfather, the Rev. Noah Schenck, a noted Episcopalian clergyman, to take one that she believed would lead her straight into the very innermost circles of the highest English aristocracy.

The wife, a girl who had been guarded all her life from anything that might mean sorrow or trouble, started out full of confidence, believing that she was adored for her charms alone, and that her husband had an income of ten thousands pounds a year.

What was in the captain's mind may only be guessed. Certain facts, however, are known, and they, alas! make guessing easy. The captain had but a beggarly income of sixteen pounds a month from an uncle, and so heavily was he in debt to his valet and his brother officers that he didn't even have that to claim as his own when he started with his bride for a trip to the Orient.

His wife, it is said, had some money, and with the proper sort of confidence that a wife naturally would have she turned it over to her husband. His habit of reckless extravagance, and perhaps his belief that there was more to follow, made heavy inroads into it, so that by the time they started for the Orient the husband began to get very nervous about their letter of credit.

We can imagine the scene. Every one of Nathalie's friends has imagined it. That poor child, a trifle over twenty, in the country of Honolulu with a man who she believed adored her, was suddenly informed that she'd better cable for more money.

"More money?" We can imagine the eyes of wonder that she turned upon her husband, blue eyes which he had filled with the light of confidence. "Why, what for?"

Millinery Becomes a Necessity.

"Well, if we want to continue our trip, or even if we want to stay here"—

"Ah, my dear, surely we ought to keep our expenses within your income. Ten thousand pounds really ought to be enough"—

"Ten thousands pounds! So it would be if"—

Well, somehow the frightful revelation was made. From the happiest of brides Nathalie Schenck became the most miserable. Just how soon she learned all the details of the ways that had enabled her husband to eke out his allowance of sixteen pounds a month so that it should appear a handsome income we do not know.

But the news that Nathalie Collins was miserable sped from Honolulu. The news that Captain Collins had believed he was married to an heiress came with it.

The Collinses returned to America, cutting their honeymoon short. Here hideous stories began to float about of how they had tried to raise money to tide them over tight places. The names of Vanderbilt, Gould, Ladenburg crept in, until at last young Mrs. Collins could stand it no longer, and last July the bride, whose eyes had been so cruelly opened, set sail for Europe with her uncle, Matthew Morgan.

Captain Collins followed shortly, and then from the other side came rumors of separation, which were denied, and now the rumor that Mrs. Glen Collins will return to America alone and establish a millinery shop follows. Her friends believe it. They say it is like Nathalie to rise superior to any blow.

The belle of Newport, the most popular debutante of the Summer of 1903, is to dispense hats. Just where she will establish herself, in what part of New York City, has not yet been decided. But when you see the sign, "Mrs. Glen Collins, Milliner," or "Purveyor of Hats," or whatever she may call herself, you are sure to encourage the grit of this American girl and patronize her shop if you can afford it.

St. Petersburg, March 31.

THE bomb that killed Grand Duke Sergius was thrown by the hand of a member of the princely Obolenski family, one of the most distinguished names in Russian aristocracy—a secret which has been desperately guarded by the Russian police, by the Czar's order. Prince Obolenski was personally known to Sergius, the murdered man, and to his widow, the Grand Duchess Elizabeth.

At the request of the Secret Police the Grand Duchess visited the assassin in his cell the day after the tragedy and succeeded in gathering information of such startling importance that the arrest of three hundred Terrorists has just followed. Many of these revolutionists are members of the Russian nobility, and one at least was a palace official in the Czar's own imperial household.

HIDDEN IN AN IRON MASK.

After the arrest of this man the Czar personally examined the evidence against him and ordered him brought to his library. What took place at this interview has not, of course, been told, but it is known that the Emperor personally named the punishment. Seeking to find something measurably worse than death, the Emperor directed an immovable iron mask to be rivetted over his face. Chained to a little window in the prison tower overlooking the palace, he will be kept in solitary confinement until he dies, ever reminded of the contrasted luxury and freedom of his former life in the imperial household.

It was 3 o'clock on the afternoon of February 17 when a sledge in which two men were seated shot out ahead of the Grand Duke's carriage as it was passing through Senate Square, Moscow, on the way from the Palace in the Kremlin. The sledge then slowed up, allowing the carriage to pass, while one of the men, dressed as a workman, peered earnestly into the Grand Duke's carriage. At this moment a bomb was thrown under the carriage, and Grand Duke Sergius was instantly killed, his head and limbs being torn from his body. In fact, so tremendous was the force of the explosion that an eyewitness says:

SCATTERED FRAGMENTS OF SERGIUS.

"The remains of the Grand Duke were assembled with difficulty, as the body had been frightfully mutilated. A gold watch and a diamond ring of the Grand Duke were found near the body. At some distance another ring was found from which the stones had been displaced by the shock. The handle of the carriage door had been thrown to a distance of 200 feet."

Sergius was, perhaps, the most universally hated official in all Russia; an arbitrary, cruel autocrat in his governorship of Moscow, and spending his salary of $1,500,000 a year in pursuit of his own pleasure. It was he who had charge of the great coronation ceremonies on the Khodinsky Plain on May 31, 1896, when 3,000 spectators were crushed and trampled to death. Although warned by the chief of police that the arrangements were manifestly inadequate and threatened disaster, the Grand Duke flatly refused to make any change, and after the Czar's indignation at the appalling calamity the Grand Duke calmly placed the blame on the police chief and imprisoned him.

Sergius, as well as his wife, was quite aware that his life was menaced. Every conceivable precaution had for a long time been taken to protect him, and he was surrounded by a network of police and detectives. From some discontented workman, some outraged citizen or some unknown agent of the revolutionists, the danger was expected—not from the hand of one of the Russian nobility.

When the police realized that their prisoner was Prince Obolenski they were stupefied. Finding that

BY A MAN WHO SAW THE MURDER.

THE Senate Square was deserted and presented a melancholy appearance at the moment when I entered it at a little before 3 o'clock. The snow was deep and the weather lowering; some men were engaged in clearing the sidewalks of the thick ice and snow which covered them. I had remarked nothing unusual and had not even noticed the Grand Duke's carriage, which must nevertheless have passed very close to me.

"All at once, as I was approaching the entrance, I was horrified and almost stunned by the most terrific explosion. The shock, which nearly threw me off my feet, lasted but the fraction of a second. As soon as I had recovered my presence of mind, I saw a yellowish column of smoke rising from the ground, while there reached my ears a great crash of broken glass in the direction of the arsenal. At the same moment several people ran out on to the Square. I saw them look and then run toward something in the snow.

"I hastened my steps and perceived a carriage drawn by a dying horse. The impression was like a frightful nightmare.

"The police had formed a circle around the debris of the carriage and kept away the public, after making a passage for the Grand Duchess, who came running without any hat, simply a fur wrap thrown over her shoulders. There she was kneeling in the deep snow beside the remains of her husband. She could just be seen through the encircling police. Very soon some officers and priests arrived to transport on a stretcher to the Monastery of Tchoudov, near Petit Palais, the remains of the Grand Duke, which were assembled with difficulty, as the body had been frightfully mutilated. The coachman had been wounded in the back and the head, but he was still in his seat and holding on to the reins when they took him down to remove him to the hospital.

"The handle of the carriage door had been thrown to a distance of two hundred feet. The following morning his cigar case was found in the snow."

heap methods of the bungling police failed, the finesse and adroitness of the widow of his victim succeeded. With sadness, but with no recriminations, the Grand Duchess approached the assassin. What had she done to him, she asked; why had he wished to strike her such a blow? In answer the prisoner protested his great regret that she had, perforce, been incidentally punished; he explained with earnestness the doctrines of the Terrorists; he protested that he had no personal grievance, but acted as an unselfish instrument of the revolutionists.

GRAND DUCHESS ELIZABETH FINDS OUT.

The Grand Duchess expressed surprise that the prisoner, himself a member of the aristocracy, should forget his rank and obligations and join with the misguided workingmen—an unnatural and perverted son of a noble family. Thrown off his guard for a moment by the sting of this reproach, Obolenski made haste to declare that he was by no means the only one in high official life who had sworn the oath of the Terrorists.

At this instant the Grand Duchess made a coup with great adroitness. Realizing that the man was forgetful of his surroundings and, perhaps, ready to unconsciously betray important facts in defence of his own acts, Elizabeth quickly arose and declined to listen to insinuations against the loyalty of men for whom she had every respect. "But stay, Madame! You shall listen to me and know that I am not alone among them!" the murderer insisted.

Still standing and with apparent reluctance, and disputing his words, the Grand Duchess rapidly drew from him amazing revelations showing how the very heart of Russian aristocracy was honeycombed with revolutionary adherents. Giving no names, but making it plain in many instances who were meant, the prisoner showed how the Terrorists were present even in the well guarded circle of the Emperor's own household.

TERRORISTS' HEADQUARTERS DISCOVERED.

The Grand Duchess withdrew and was met by the Chief of the Secret Police, who had overheard the interview and had had notes taken by a secretary concealed with him above the ventilator in the ceiling of the cell. Agents of police were detailed to watch every personage who had been indicated in the interview, and a search was made of the homes and personal papers of each. Finally the trail led to the headquarters of the Terrorists in Moscow, which was found to be acting in conjunction with the central revolutionary chiefs in London. On March 18 the police surrounded and raided the Moscow headquarters and found a store of infernal machines and explosive weapons, together with printing presses and revolutionary documents, included among the latter being a letter to the central committee and correspondence relating to the assassination of the Grand Duke Sergius.

Incidentally the police were able to clear up the mystery of the unknown man who was suddenly blown to pieces on the morning of March 11 by the accidental explosion of a bomb in his room in the Hotel Bristol in St. Petersburg. Although the passport carried by the dead Terrorist was issued in London, ostensibly to an Englishman, it was discovered that he was a Pole and spoke scarcely a dozen words of English.

The police, in tracing his movements prior to the explosion, found that he had two addresses here, and documents were found indicating that he was watching for members of the Imperial family and Ministers of State. He frequently visited the Government offices. The police learned that he was connected with the plotters who caused the death of Grand Duke Sergius.

THREE HUNDRED TERRORISTS CAPTURED.

From day to day since the raid on the revolutionary headquarters the police have made arrests as rapidly as the reports of the Secret Service agents warranted, until it is known that some three hundred prisoners have been taken. Every possible secrecy has been maintained, and not one word of official information has escaped from the authorities. It is, however, known that many of the prisoners are members of the Russian nobility, and the positive documentary evidence against several of them is beyond question. In the case of Prince Obolenski, the assassin of Grand Duke Sergius, in spite of the public excitement and the pressure to know the fullest details, the police have steadfastly pretended that they have been unable to identify their prisoner and that his name and history are unknown. And, later on, at the time of his execution, a fictitious name and record will be given out if the officials follow their custom in the case of offenders in high position. This policy is pursued out of consideration for the other members of the distinguished Obolenski family, and also to conceal the truth of the widespread cancerous growth of revolutionary recruits in official and aristocratic circles.

The Czar was panic stricken at the revelations of the spread of revolutionary converts into even the best-guarded imperial circles. If Terrorists existed in his own palace, what did the precautions of police and soldiery amount to? he inquired. But it was pointed out that the case of Prince Obolenski was an exception to the rule of the Terrorists, who employed unknown agents to carry out affairs of violence, making it a policy not to involve well-known personages, where the unavoidable publicity must necessarily set in motion the searching activity of the police.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Aside from the direct implication of many personages of influential and princely families, another extremely important discovery was made from the documents captured in the raid of March 18. It was found that the present widespread labor strikes—and, indeed, the popular uprisings throughout Russia had been carefully organized by the revolutionists. A branch organization of the Terrorists had this great work in charge. Agents had been sent into distant districts to find work in the Government sugar refineries and distilleries and in the private factories of the larger employers of labor. Here, under the guise of labor agitators, the agents of the Terrorists had planned the uprisings which have been spreading throughout the empire since the riots of the early part of the year in St. Petersburg set the signal. The far-reaching consequences of this propaganda no one can predict. The recent history of the outbreaks shows that at every point agents of the Terrorists are on hand with revolutionary posters, literature, arms and bombs to fan into bloody violence the first peaceful activities of the labor strikers.

Following in rapid succession the St. Petersburg riots have been strikes, uprisings and riots here and there all over the empire, and the murmurs of trouble to come are heard in every direction.

These real instigators of revolution came near accomplishing their purpose at a single blow when they incited the striking workmen of St. Petersburg to insist on presenting their petition to the Czar in person. These aristocratic conspirers knew perfectly well that the autocrat would not, indeed could not, receive the petitioners personally—in doing so he would be no longer an autocrat.

THE ST. PETERSBURG MASSACRE.

The whole matter was well planned. The petitioners, if their fanaticism should carry them far enough toward the Czar's palace, were bound to be shot down by hundreds. The very leadership that was needed was to materialize—Father Gapon, the priest, who was ready to be a martyr in the workingmen's cause.

When Father Gapon placed himself at the head of the petitioners, and announced that the Czar, and the Czar only, should hear their appeal, the massacre was already assured. If it were possible to precipitate a revolution, the spectacle of a thousand or a few hundreds of peaceable workingmen shot down in cold blood for no other offence than that of appealing for justice to their beloved "Little Father," the Czar, certainly ought to bring it about.

Everyone remembers what happened. On January 22 the peaceful army of strikers, including many women, with Father Gapon at their head holding aloft a sacred ikon, marched, 12,000 strong, toward the palace. They were hemmed about by mounted Cossacks. Several regiments of the Guards awaited them. These had been reinforced by 50,000 troops from imperial palaces in the country.

In front of the palace the petitioners faced a thousand levelled rifles. Father Gapon, with the ikon upraised, pressed on with his followers. A volley of blank cartridges did not stop them. Then came the bullets. The snow was red with blood. Then the petitioners became insurrectionists—the revolution was on.

But for the drastic methods of Trepoff probably the tide would not have been stopped. Evidently the aristocratic plotters had not counted on Trepoff. But outside of the capital the tide was still rising

After the riots at St. Petersburg and Moscow the first serious outbreak was on Feb. 17, when armed mobs throughout the Caucasus, especially at Oleum, stopped railway traffic, cut the telegraph lines and looted several arsenals. On the following day Armenians at Tiflis assassinated a district officer and escaped. At Kishineff, rioters gathered in the streets Prefect of Police Reichardt, while attempting to disperse them, was attacked, but made his escape in a cab.

The railway service between Warsaw and Vienna, and also between Warsaw and Kief, had to be suspended on Feb. 22, strikers seizing locomotives in the engine house at Warsaw. Two days later, Warsaw, already suffering from lack of provisions, suffered complete isolation from the rest of the world, telegraph and telephone lines being cut. Troops occupied the gas works, as the police were disaffected and threatened to strike. A policeman was shot and killed by a student upon whom he had drawn a sabre during a riot at the railway station

REVOLUTIONISTS ISOLATE WARSAW.

It was on this date that Maxim Gorky and sixteen other literary men were arrested in St. Petersburg because of their efforts to inaugurate a new government.

On Feb 27, forty-seven Jews were killed and many injured along the southeast coast of the Crimea, in an anti-Jewish rising like that at Kishineff as a result of a clash between Russian authorities and revolutionists.

At Lodz, in Russian Poland, on March 3, there was a serious riot at the Posnanski factory Troops were summoned and, in a fierce fight, three persons were killed and forty wounded

On March 6, three State and fifty-two private factories employing 60,000 hands had shut down. At the Putiloff iron works the strikers blew up two boilers. In the rioting which followed, twenty-two were killed and wounded

On the following day it was reported that fifteen persons had been killed in riots at Batoum, and that in the Western Caucasus 130,000 mountaineers were in open rebellion.

Near Prilopi, in the Government of Kursk, the peasants rose, on March 8, and looted the estate of Baron de Meyendorf, commander of the Czar's bodyguard On the following day, 3,000 peasants, accompanied by carts, looted and burned eighteen places, including the Michailoffsky sugar refinery.

In Warsaw, on the same day, Chief of Police Rastiegajeff was shot, while in the Bakhout district the troops fired on striking miners, killing five. In St. Petersburg, twenty workmen were killed at the Odukoff works. More factories were occupied by soldiers, as a result of further strikes and lockouts.

March 12 was the date of a mob rising incited by Russian officials against the Jews of Minsk. During three days of outrages more than two hundred Jews were killed and injured. Other similar outrages, supported by Orthodox priests in their pulpits in forty-eight towns in South Russia, resulted in more than seven hundred casualties.

CHIEF OF POLICE KILLED AT BORISKOE.

Up to March 14, the uprising of peasants had resulted in the slaughter of nine proprietors in the Province of Kursk In this Province alone more than 8,000 peasants were members of an organized mob for the intimidation of landholders. The estate of the late Grand Duke Sergius, in the Dmitroff District, was pillaged The peasant uprising was spreading North and West. The mob threatened to prevent further drafts of troops for the Far East.

On March 20 the chief of police and three of his assistants were killed by armed Jews at Boriskoe protecting themselves against mob violence winked at by the officials

In the Kutno District, on March 23, peasants who had gathered to resist an order to supply horses to the army were fired upon by a company of infantry; fifty fell, two being killed outright.

Baron von Nolken chief of police of Warsaw, was injured by the explosion of a bomb, which killed one detective and injured half a dozen policemen, on March 26, while trying to disperse a mob in Praga, a suburb. On the same day a policeman was killed in connection with the peasant rising in the Government of Praga

On March 27, the Town of Yalta was set on fire in five different places, and an attempt made to sack the municipal treasury. The chief of police was wounded, the prison burned, and the prisoners released. Three warships with troops were dispatched to the scene.

On this date, March 31, it is evident that the strength of the revolutionists throughout Russia is steadily increasing. There are rumors that another assassination of one of the members of the imperial family named in the list of the Terrorist Committee may be expected at any moment, and that this will be the signal for a concerted movement against the Government throughout the country

The Government is making every effort to discredit the news that it was Prince Obolenski who threw the bomb which killed Grand Duke Sergius. This accounts for several alleged identifications of the assassin recently made public.

How Women May Strengthen Weak Backs

By Miss May Dullere, the Well-Known Expert in Physical Culture.

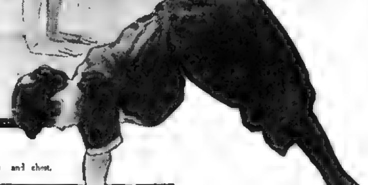
Exercise No. 8. For gaining control of the body there is no better exercise.



Exercise No. 6. Rock the body backward and forward as far as possible.

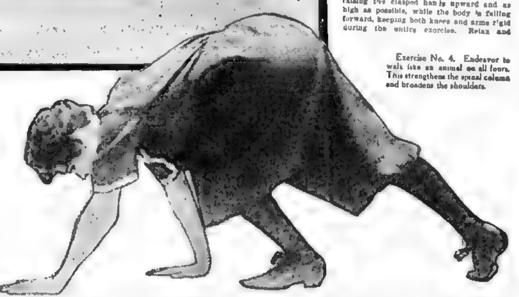
Exercise No. 7. This adds strength and expansion to the lungs and chest.



Exercise No. 4. Endeavor to walk like an animal on all fours. This strengthens the spinal column and broadens the shoulders.

Not Only a Graceful Carriage, but Practical Immunity from Colds May Be Attained by Developing the Weak and Flabby Muscles of the Neglected Back.

THE majority of women overlook the fact that the back contains [illegible] the most important [illegible] of the whole body, and fail to realize that [illegible] tenths of the colds taken [illegible] the back, and gain a hold upon the system that is often hard to shake, by reason of the weak spots and flabby [illegible].

Frequently the [illegible] back composed largely of [illegible] is the direct cause of a weakened [illegible] which in turn cramps the expansion of the lungs too necessary to good health, and weakens the entire constitution, paving the way for disease.

With flabby back muscles an erect, well poised or graceful carriage is impossible. Many women walk with cramped shoulders and bent arms, because the muscles in the back are not sufficiently strong to keep them in proper position, and a walk of six or eight blocks leaves them chilly and exhausted instead of refreshed and invigorated.

The law of the living body is action, and every organ demands use to preserve its full vigor. No one doubts the necessity of education for developing the mind, and what education does for the brain, hygienic exercise does for the muscles, without which perfect health is impossible.

Strength is the result of gradual growth, and to obtain the best results all exercise should be taken at regular hours and for a regular period of time. The general system becomes built up only after long perseverance in exercising. The first beneficial effect will manifest itself in the muscles themselves, which will become firm, rounded out and of greater strength, followed by increased weight, renewed vigor of the brain and general toning up of the system.

Exercise, whenever possible, should be taken in the open air, but as this is often impracticable, the room should be well ventilated, for exercising causes freer breathing, and the patient will use up a greater amount of oxygen, and the lungs will throw off more poisonous carbonic acid gas.

For strengthening the back as well as the general system the short, brisk constitutional should be taken regularly each day, with head well up, chin drawn slightly in toward the throat, shoulders back, and arms straight at the sides, while breathing deeply through the nose and keeping the mouth closed.

To Prevent Colds by Exercise.

The woman susceptible to colds should practise exercises for the strengthening of the back, and chest expansion with deep breathing, as the deep breathing strengthens the entire system and offers resistance to colds and exhaustion. Muscles hygienically developed will quickly thicken and gain in strength, thereby contributing their natural support, and the improvement will be at once noticeable in the general health and bearing.

It is important that the muscles in the small of the back should be kept in good condition, for on these the abdominal muscles depend largely for assistance in keeping the abdomen in place, and counteracting the ungainly, high-stomached appearance which is the bane of existence to any woman.

Water composes two-thirds of man's entire weight, and an authority on the subject has rather aptly remarked that "Organic beings might be described as organized water." This fact answers the question satisfactorily why so much water is necessary to good health. The woman who would be healthy should drink plenty of water. Eighty ounces of fluid a day (including that contained in the solid food) is considered a healthy proportion. Water should never be iced, for the sudden cold upsets the digestive powers of the stomach by lowering the temperature.

A wineglassful of iced water causes the temperature of the stomach to fall thirty degrees, and it takes a half hour to recover its natural warmth of about one hundred degrees, which is the best for digestion.

People of to-day drink too little water and eat too much, though many, while eating regularly, rarely take a sufficient amount of the really nourishing food which is necessary to replace that lost by waste. Nerves absorb the fat-forming tissues, frequently leaving the sufferer emaciated. A simple diet with a liberal proportion of fat, oil and starchy foods, with plenty of vegetables should be followed in these things.

The following exercises are designed for the strengthening and thickening of muscles in the back, chest, hips, arms, etc. Let [illegible] a few [illegible] suited to her [illegible] and adhere to them faithfully.

Exercise No. 1.

Stand erect, with heels together, toes [illegible] apart, chest up, shoulders drawn backward and downward, head raised. Grip the back of a chair firmly with both hands. Inhale through the nose, counting seven. Now while holding the breath for four counts, swing the right leg (held rigidly straight) backward and upward as far as possible, describing a backward turning semi-circle from the tip of the right leg toward the crown of the head. Now relax, and bring the leg back to the original position beside the other, while exhaling to the count of six.

Do this three times with each leg, increasing one each day until twenty has been reached. It stretches and brings into play all the muscles the entire length of the body from the neck down to the ankle, and gives to the patient grace, contour and carriage.

Exercise No. 2.

Lie flat on the floor, heels and toes together, arms extended full length at the sides. Inhale through the nose, counting seven. Now while holding the breath for four counts (bracing only on the hips) endeavor to raise the head, trunk, arms and legs from the floor with one effort. Relax and fall back gently to the original position while exhaling to the count of six.

Try this exercise five times to start with, increasing each day until twenty have been reached. It will strengthen the small of the back and reduce a high stomach.

Exercise No. 3.

Assume the correct standing position as described in Exercise No. 1, arms straight down at the sides. Inhale through the nose while counting seven. Now while holding the breath for four counts, step forward as far as possible with one foot (forming an arch) and sit on the floor, rising at once to the original standing position (without the aid of either hand) while exhaling through the mouth to the count of six. Do this three times with each foot to start with, and increase one daily until ten have been reached.

It will assist in attaining a graceful stride, and do away with the mincing step which is both trying and disfiguring, at the same time developing the muscles on the upper part of the legs and hips.

Exercise No. 4.

Get down on the floor on all fours. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts endeavor to walk like an animal, stepping with foot near to hand each time, leaving the foot and hand not used stretched at full length behind. Relax and lie flat face downward on the floor, exhaling through the mouth to the count of six.

Do this exercise six or seven times to start with, increasing daily as in others. It will strengthen the spinal column and broaden the shoulders, developing the muscles across the shoulder blades under the back of the lungs.

Exercise No. 5.

Get down on the floor on all fours as described in Exercise No. 4. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts, walk (with hips as high as possible) forward, backward and sideways. Relax and come back to the original position, exhaling through the mouth to the count of six. Do this five times to start with and increase one each day as in the others.

Exercise No. 6.

Assume position described in Exercise No. 8. Inhale and exhale the same, this time instead of walking while holding the breath for four counts, retain a firm position on the feet and hands, and rock the body forward and backward as far as possible each way, keeping the knees rigid as the weight shifts with the swing motion.

This will be found very difficult at first, and requires practice before the patient can swing very far in either direction; but is most excellent for the arms, wrists, elbows and knees, giving the patient absolute control of the body.

Exercise No. 7.

Lie full length on the floor, face downward, feet directly in front of a strong chair, hands the width of the chest apart. Now draw slowly back and brace the feet (across the insteps) on the edge of the chair, keeping the head well up. Inhale through the nose, counting seven. Now while holding the breath for four counts lift the body (braced on the insteps and hands) as high as possible from the floor. Relax and come gently back to the floor while exhaling through the mouth to the count of six.

With the strength gained by practice the patient will find herself able to raise the body two or three times while holding the one breath. [illegible] the muscles on the upper arms.

Exercise No. 8.

Lie straight across the foot of a bed, face downwards. Creep over to the edge and off of the bed on the hands, which are the width of the chest apart on the floor. Inhale through the nose counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts (when the creep has reached its fullest limit without taking the feet from the bed), swing the body to right and left and up and downwards as far as possible. Relax, and creep back on the bed to the original position, while exhaling through the mouth to the count of six, without having touched any part of the body to the floor except the hands.

For gaining perfect control of the body there is no better exercise; it thickens and brings into play nearly every muscle of the back, and around the ribs, thereby building a defence against cold or draught. Do this exercise five times to start with, increasing daily as in others.

Exercise No. 9.

Stand in the correct position as directed in Exercise No. 3. Reach down and clasp the hands tightly behind the knees (with head held well up and back). Inhale through the nose counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts, pull the body upward and backward, stretching the arms, but keeping the knees rigid. Now relax and exhale through the mouth, counting six.

The patient will soon find herself able to hold her breath for a space of ten counts, instead of four, as the exercise strengthens the expansion of the chest and powers of endurance almost at once. Do it only four or five times to start with, and increase one daily until fifteen has been reached. It will fill out a bony back, which so often prevents the wearing of evening gowns.

Exercise No. 10.

Assume the correct standing position as described in Exercise No. 1, this time with back straight against the wall. Inhale very deeply through the nose while counting seven, and step out with one foot a distance twice the length of your own foot, and while holding the breath for four counts let the trunk of the body fall straight forward and downward as far as possible, keeping the knees rigid. Now relax and rise to the original position, while exhaling through the mouth to the count of six.

Do this only twice with each foot to start with, and increase one each day until ten has been reached. It will give suppleness and grace to the waist line, and absolute control of the body.

Exercise No. 11.

Sit on a strong chair with heels and toes together, head well raised and back, shoulders drawn down and inclined backwards. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts, reach down under the seat of the chair and endeavor to raise the chair from the floor while sitting perfectly rigid. Relax the grip and exhale through the mouth while counting six.

This exercise may be done ten times daily and with splendid results. It will broaden the chest, back and shoulders, bringing graceful lines to the throat and base of the neck. The patient must be careful not to acquire a strained look in the face while doing this exercise, but rather cultivate a bright, pleasant countenance, that unfortunately many women lack.

Exercise No. 12.

Lie across a strong chair, resting the hips on the seat, the hands reaching backward and down, until both hands and feet rest upon the floor. Inhale through the nose, counting seven. Now, while holding the breath of four counts, lift the left limb (rigid and with toe pointed) high in the air as far as the reach will permit, keeping the right one and both hands firmly upon the floor. Relax and bring the limb down beside the other, to the original position while exhaling to the count of six.

Alternate this exercise with the right and the left foot three times each to start with and increase daily until ten has been reached. It will do away almost at once with a high stomach or a fallen chest.

Exercise No. 13.

Assume the correct standing position as described in Exercise No. 1. Reach backward and clasp the hands firmly at the back, arms extended to fullest length. Inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath for four counts bend the body from the waist only, forward and downward as far as possible, raising the clasped hands upward and as high as possible, while the body is falling forward, keeping both knees and arms rigid during the entire exercise. Relax and slowly raise the body to the original upright posture, while exhaling to the count of six.

Do this exercise only five times to start with, increasing daily until twelve has been reached. It will broaden the shoulders and reduce the waist line, which is to be the correct model for women of fashion during the ensuing season.

How English Is Driving Out Other Languages.

IN the United States millions of Germans have become merged with the English-speaking population in a single generation. Even the names are lost. Thus Schmidt becomes Smith, Müller Miller, and the children, in many cases, do not understand the father's language.

In Florida, California, Texas, and other States, French and Spanish speaking settlements have become Anglicized.

In other parts of the world the spread of English is scarcely less remarkable. The Republics of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State only twenty years ago were almost entirely Dutch in their speech, but English is now dominant in both countries, Boer Dutch being relegated to the country districts, where it is retreating year by year before the advance of its powerful rival, and this in spite of the determined resistance of the Boers themselves.

Though the English in their Colonies and offshoots have absorbed millions of aliens, there is no record of anybody of English speakers becoming absorbed by any other race.

One very good reason for the rapid spread of the English language is the simplicity of its grammar, which is less complicated than that of any other Western nation. Its poverty of inflections as distinguished from the German, for instance, is a great point in its favor; thus it is much easier for a German to learn English than for an Englishman or American to learn German. On the other hand, the extraordinary inconsistencies of the English language in its spelling are a decided drawback. There is little doubt that if English were written on phonetic principles, as Spanish or German, this would be a great boon to the Anglo-Saxons themselves, who spend years of unnecessary toil learning to read and write their own language.

The English language is spoken to-day by 135,000,000 of people. Three hundred years ago, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, the language was spoken by about 5,000,000 people, nearly all of whom lived in the British Isles. It was about this time that England began her colonization, to which the great spread of the tongue is mainly attributed.

The principal languages which enter into competition with English, and which are spoken by the greatest number of people—leaving out such languages as Chinese or Hindoostanee—are, in order, French, Spanish, Russian and German. French is practically stationary as regards the number of its adherents, and is distinctly on the decline. It is no longer the universal language of diplomacy and commerce; in both respects it had to give way to English.

How To Light Your House To Accent-uate Your Beauty

By Elsie De Wolfe.

The Great Importance of the Right Tint to Match Your Complexion Should Never Be Lost Sight Of.

It is news that Miss Elsie de Wolfe, the actress who has made of dress a specialty, is going to show Americans how to decorate their rooms. But it is news that, perhaps, surprises no one.

From dress to draperies is only a step.

"Indeed, not that!" exclaimed Miss De Wolfe, caressing lovingly a gown of shimmering pente that blended harmoniously into the tints of the pillows that hedged her in. "To be perfectly gowned one needs to be perfectly set. Imagine my costume, for instance, simple as it is, in a room that did not fit it, in one of those glaring overcrowded drawing rooms.

"Ah, those are the places," she cried, breaking off suddenly, "where I mean to carry reformation if I am permitted.

"Harmonious settings for the gowns of—er—of aristocrats."

"Where would you begin?" she was asked.

Miss De Wolfe sat upright, her fingers suddenly outspread with the eloquence of desire. Her face was delicately pink, her eyes glowed.

"Look at me!" she cried.

No one would have refused. She was radiant and charming.

"It's that," she cried, dramatically, pointing upward with fine effect to a light veiled in pink, folded, as it were, in rose leaves of pink satin.

"Under the wrong kind of light I should be—well, at least not as good looking as I am now. I should have shadows—even lines! I should look as hideous as I have seen many a woman look when badly lit, as hideous as the women of the '400' look in their splendid boxes on the grand tier of the Opera House! There, it is out!

"Heavens, what lighting! Take the prettiest of them, the fairest, the youngest even, and she can't maintain her good looks under it.

"Those awful lights are above her! Behind her is the terrible glare of a red background!

"Herr Conried may understand all about the direction of a grand opera, all about the management of the most difficult geniuses in the world, but he hasn't the faintest idea how to set a beautiful woman so as to make her more beautiful."

"Look at Me!" Cried Miss DeWolfe.

A Suggestion for Opera Beauties

"But there is the red and there are the lights."

"Yes, and my business," cried Miss De Wolfe, "is to remedy, to advise, to make the most of the impossible.

"Well, then—parasols!" she exclaimed, enigmatically.

"Parasols?"

"Yes. I should advise every woman who has the good fortune to occupy a seat in one of the grand tier boxes to carry a parasol of whatever tint that best suits her skin. These parasols might be as small as the old fashioned ones that were carried by our grandmothers, a mere shading for the face, just a filter for the light. They might be made exquisite with lace, festooned with flowers, mounted with jewels, anything one pleases, only let them be becoming.

"Yellow and pink being, perhaps, the best tints for the complexion, they might be in their various shadings the foundation of these beauty parasols.

"You see, my idea is this—let every woman carry her own lampshade. Let her make it a custom of the evening against the hideous lighting of most places, private as well as public, just as it is a custom of the daytime against the too glaring rays of the sun.

"Every woman knows how it feels to sit at a table where everything from the company to the service is charming, everything except the lights.

"We have all been there! You look around and say to yourself 'Heavens, how old Miss So-and-So looks! What shadows Mrs. This One has!' Then, suddenly you wonder how you look under those same white electric lights. You see the powder on your companion's face and you wonder about your own. Then and there you vow that in your dining room the lights shall be becoming, filtered if it costs you your last cent to accomplish it.

"Lights, then, shall be the first of my specialties," said Miss De Wolfe. "Comfort shall be the second.

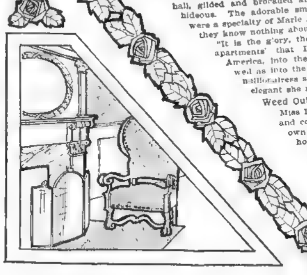
"No room in the world was ever beautiful that did not at a glance suggest the comfort of the occupant.

"Our millionaires are so apt to go over to the other side of the water, wander through the show rooms of the Galerie des Glaces or the Palais de Soubise and then come back to America and order learnedly a Louis XVI room.

"Finally they find themselves in a tremendous hall, gilded and brocaded and mirrored and—hideous. The adorable small apartments that were a specialty of Marie Antoinette and her day they know nothing about.

"It is the glory, the comfort of those 'petite apartments' that I want to introduce into America, into the skyscraper flat buildings as well as into the private houses. The American millionairess seems to think that in order to be elegant she must be uncomfortable."

"See the Bottom of Your Dress."



"Overcrowding Is a Mania."

Weed Out Your Houses.

Miss De Wolfe leaned back among her pillows and contemplated luxuriously the details of her own drawing room in the old Washington Irving house.

"I had much to contend against here, as much as the usual housekeeper has in the usual American house. The long narrow parlor, the bane of old-fashioned New York architecture, lighted at one end only, is what confronts one everywhere. However, even if one hasn't money enough to remodel it, build it over—one need still not despair.

"The first thing to be done in such a room is to break the line. Do as I have done in my room, put up pillars, or if you can't afford that break the line with a screen. Curtains are as a rule bad because they darken the back part of the room and they give a stuffy effect.

"That word stuffy brings me to another great fault of the American housewife.

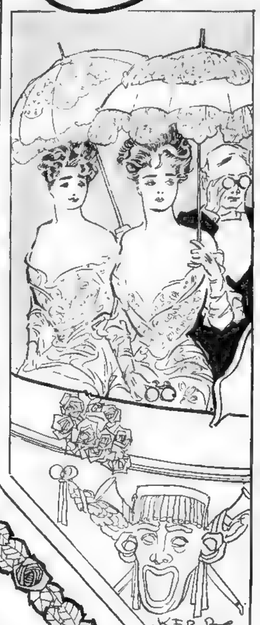
"'Now what shall I get?' she always asks when she begins to fix over her house.

"Nine times out of ten I answer, 'Get nothing. You have got too much!'

"Overcrowding is an American mania. People here want to fill every nook and corner of their rooms. An empty spot seems to them at once bare. Their tables and mantels are packed with bric-a-brac, so laden with it that you can't distinguish one bit from another. They like their pictures hung so near together that no wall shows. They don't consider their rooms furnished unless they have to pick their way through them. When there isn't a spot where one may lay a book or move a chair, then they are perfectly happy.

"'Weed out, weed out your rooms.' There are not many houses where I do not give this advice. It delights men, but women, as a rule, complain that a room that is not overcrowded looks bare.

"To the man or woman who wants to spend money I would say: Put it into the foundations of your houses, into the mantelpieces, which should be works of art, not to be covered by bric-a-brac, but set off and display one perfect bit; into the doors, which in most houses are put anywhere in the wrong places as though their only object were to open and shut. Yet there they are when closed, before your eyes, to be looked at.



The Secret of Comfort.

"To return to my pet hobby, comfort," said Miss De Wolfe. "How little one sees of it! One would think that to carry it to its perfection only money is needed, but I find that experience, study, imagination are absolutely necessary.

"Look at our hotels, the great ones where they are supposed to have every luxury; comfort is at a discount.

"You come into the room assigned you as your bedroom. You are going to a ball or a dinner. You want to rest first. There is absolutely no place but the bed. Not one hotel bedroom in a thousand has a lounge that is comfortable enough to lie on.

"It is time for you to dress. You begin to do your hair in front of the looking glass. Impossible to see. The lights are up in the ceiling or high up in the wall in most inconvenient places where the bureau can't be moved. You try to see the bottom of your dress, but there is no pier glass.

"Now in the Woman's Colony Club, which is to be the fashionable athletic club of the most fashionable women in New York, and which is my first very big order, I am going to study the comfort of every woman who may be a member. She will find her lights just right, as comfortably placed for her eyes as she may have them in her own house; she will find a couch with some light covering thrown over it for her to lie upon; she will find her closets with the hooks high enough up for her gowns not to trail on the floor; there will be light, even a window, in every closet if possible, and I promise she shall be able to see the tip of her skirt as well as the top of her waist."

Uses Doll House as Model.

In beginning her business Miss De Wolfe has connected herself with some of the best known art dealers and furnishing houses in Europe.

"But," she said, in speaking of this connection, "one of the most difficult things I have to contend against is making people understand how their rooms will look when they are done. Now to obviate this I have hit upon the plan of models. They are expensive but satisfactory."

"There, you see—there is a perfect sample, a doll's room. There is the color of the draperies against the wall, the style of the furniture, the number of pieces, just where the doors will be—an exact miniature. There can be no misunderstanding that will lead to disputes afterward.

"By going into the art of decorating," said Miss De Wolfe, finally, "I hope to set the most beautiful women in the world most beautifully."

"I should advise every woman who has the good fortune to occupy a seat in one of the grand tier boxes at the opera to carry a parasol of whatever tint best suits her skin. These parasols might be as small as the old-fashioned ones that were carried by our grandmothers, a mere shading for the face, just a filter for the light. They might be made exquisite with lace, festooned with flowers, mounted with jewels—anything one pleases."

COMMON SENSE OF MOTHER LOVE IN BRINGING UP BABY.

A Valuable and Timely Lesson by Florence Stackpoole, Lecturer to the British National Health Society.

"You cannot rear rosy-cheeked children in a nursery facing north. Let the room face south, or southwest, and let it be as sunny and as airy as possible."

BABIES have a lot to contend with when mothers without any previous study of the subject try their "'prentice hand" on their first-born.

And yet there is nothing so difficult in this work—the rearing of healthy, happy babies—that it need alarm you.

Be you never so timid, or ignorant, or nervous, you may succeed as well as the best by simply taking the trouble to learn in time what are the principal things necessary for the little one's well being.

No complicated knowledge is needed, nor a long apprenticeship, nor costly appliances. If you have common sense, added to that greatest of all gifts, which Nature sends so lavishly when babies come—mother love—very little theoretical knowledge will enable you to avoid pitfalls and rear a flourishing flock.

Common sense will probably make you avoid a pitfall into which many young mothers fall, namely, that of thinking that the chief thing needing care, when the advent of a baby is looked for, is the preparation of its "layette." Clothing for the "little stranger" is undoubtedly necessary; but, after all, a baby may grow up into a fine, healthy specimen of humanity, even though the first weeks of its infancy have been passed wrapped in nothing better than a woollen shawl.

I am not advocating such a toilet—far from it. A proper outfit for the baby is a necessary matter for careful consideration; but the point to remember is that it is not the most important matter for its ultimate welfare. The thing paramount above all others is care for the mother's health.

You can do this much better by thinking at this particular time more of your own health, and less of its frocks and frills. Isn't a rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed baby infinitely more attractive than the laces and embroideries of an elaborate layette? And that it may grow rosy and bright-eyed depends to a considerable extent on the justice you now do to yourself.

Think, for instance, how much better for your health to be out of doors in fine weather, instead of indoors, straining your eyes and stooping your shoulders (and, therefore, compressing your lungs and limiting their oxygen containing capacity), while you run myriads of little tucks and gather countless yards of infinitesimal frills?

I don't say that the work of "foundation laying" wont entail on you the practice of some self denial, for it undoubtedly will.

It will drive you from the fireside on a cold, blowy morning because you will remember that there is no finer tonic for the nerves, and no better purifier for the blood, than fresh air, and that you can never get as much of it indoors as out.

It will drive you to bed early instead of letting you accept invitations to parties where you will be kept up late.

If you are a "society woman" it will oblige you to forego the hundred and one distractions of life led in a whirl of fashionable engagements.

I am going now to suggest another particular in which your self-sacrifice may perhaps be called for.

I shall introduce the subject gently by asking a question: "Which rooms are you going to use for a nursery?" or rather "Which rooms?" for there should, if it can possibly be managed, always be two rooms set aside for the nurse and her little charge.

You may not at the first blush see why

"Babies want fresh air in unlimited quantities and they need it even more urgently than grown people."

I should preface the subject with a hint of self sacrifice. What on earth has it to do with the choice of a nursery?

You shall see—if you are mistress of a small house—for I may be going to make of you the audacious demand that you should relinquish some room which you specially prize—your cherished "spare room," most likely—and offer it up to the use of King Baby!

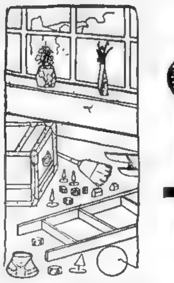
Why not—if it is for his good? Is he not going to be a welcome guest? The fact that his stay is to be a permanent one makes the necessity that the best room should be given up to him all the greater.

Babies want fresh air in unlimited quantities, and they need it even more urgently than grown people; for you must know that babies and young children are much more easily affected by unhealthy surroundings than grown people are.

It will do the baby a great deal more harm to sleep in a stuffy room than it will do you or your husband. I am not saying it will do you and him no harm, quite the contrary. But what I do want to impress upon you is that it will do more harm to the baby than to you who have reached your full development. Therefore, if you have but small choice of rooms choose one with plenty of sun and air.

The essentials of a healthy nursery are that it should be a sunny room, an airy room, and that it should have as much window space as possible.

I cannot too earnestly impress upon you the value of sunshine for the furtherance of the growth and development of children. Sunlight kills the germs of disease, it gives color to plants, and vitality to everything that lives. You cannot rear rosy-cheeked children in a gloomy nursery facing north. If you can in any way manage it, let the babies' room face south or southwest.



"A healthy nursery should have as much window space as possible. Never use the nursery as a lumber room."

You may have no choice as to size—if you have, let the nursery be large—but whether it is large or not you can always insure its being airy by taking care that the chimney register is never closed, that the windows open top and bottom, and that the room is not cumbered with large pieces of furniture.

Many people don't recollect that they make small rooms much smaller by cramming them with big pieces of furniture. Each article, though it does not consume air as a living being does, takes up the space that ought to be occupied by air, and so makes the room airless more quickly than it would otherwise become.

It is for this reason that I would urgently recommend you not to allow—as is unfortunately the habit in some houses—the nursery to be turned into a kind of lumber room. "Oh, we don't want it here; send it up to the nursery," is often said when the disposition of cumbrous articles is desired.

Don't allow this. Remember that, of all rooms in the house, the one that needs the most air-space is the nursery.

HOW YOU CAN GIVE A SMART, UP-TO-DATE EASTER BREAKFAST.

By Mrs. Linda Hull Larned, Author of "The Hostess of To-Day."

AS we have had more than nineteen hundred Easter days in the Christian world, it would seem that the stock of ideas for celebrating them had long since become exhausted. But a recent trip through "Ideal Town," our shops—and a glance or two upon "Functionville," our social calendar, convinces us that the novelty makers will last as long as imagination has room to grow.

Easter day and the following Monday and Tuesday, and, in fact, all of Easter week, are now filled by society with all sorts of social doings. The really smart social function for Easter day is the breakfast, and this takes place at any hour after 9 and before 1. After 1 o'clock it is called a luncheon, even if it breaks the fast of many of the partakers thereof. Many conscientious entertainers prefer to do their entertaining on Monday or Tuesday rather than on Sunday, these being holidays rather than holy days, although mass is celebrated on these days by good Catholics.

The sacredness of this Sunday appeals to Christian folk as a day for spiritual rejoicing at church service rather than for holiday feasting, so perhaps it is better form to celebrate socially any day in Easter week rather than Sunday.

"The proper thing to do," then, especially this year, is the breakfast on Easter Monday, or on Sunday, if there are to be men guests; nevertheless, it is said that Easter teas are to be extremely popular and there will be at least one for somebody to go to every afternoon in the week. One Easter afternoon function this year is to be a sewing bee, each guest bringing her own sewing in the daintiest of silk bags. It is quite fashionable for women to sew this year, for all women, young and old, are now putting their own handiwork on the dozens of lingerie waists the feminine world will appear in on all occasions.

At this affair the women will assemble at 3 o'clock, and at 5 tea or coffee or chocolate with savory sandwiches will be served. Guessing games of a literary nature, with prizes, or music or story telling will furnish the amusement for the afternoon. But the function par excellence will be the breakfast, and we have gleaned enough ideas, with some original suggestions, to evolve the following scheme.

Served at a Round Table

For a breakfast for women guests—and I see no reason why men should not be there, too, if they can be captured—we would have a round table covered with a white cloth. There would be no centrepiece of embroidered linen or lace, for these have gone out except for the bare table, and few have round tables large enough for the dozen which usually make the number for a sit-down function. We use for this purpose a hard wood top, which is put together in sections, and is therefore not quite handsome enough to appear undressed.

The centrepiece, when a cloth is used, is a looking glass plateau or a silver tray of elaborate workmanship. Upon this we will place a large, low, round pot of growing tulips, the pot covered by some extremely fine yellow straw cloth slightly fringed at the top. Or, if we would like to give flowers to our lady guests, we will have a low bowl of tulips, the bowl being of silver or glass; in the centre of the bowl we will place a tall glass vase, on the top of which we will cross green ribbons, the ends to be fastened to the table cloth at each place plate, and on the tip end the name of the guest to be painted in gold. Between the ribbons on the vase we will tuck bunches of lilies of the valley, from which narrow yellow ribbons will reach to a spot directly in front of each guest and there fastened with a bow. Or the wide ribbons may be pinned to the table cloth just outside of the plateau with a bow to conceal the pin, and the baby ribbon may be tied around the guest-card, to be pulled when the breakfast is over, thus yielding a bunch of flowers for each guest. The ribbons crossing the top of the vase will keep it there in place when the narrow ribbons are pulled. Around the centre plateau will be brass candlesticks holding white candles and yellow shades, and between them we will put gold compotes filled with salted nuts and yellow or pale green peppermint candies, round cream mints in one and long curly sticks in another. These gold compote dishes are a new wrinkle, perhaps a shade too expensive for ordinary folk—so these pretty brass fingerbowls that cost but a trifle may be used instead by the impecunious. We must have everything yellow and white, with a few touches of green, on this Easter table. The place cards are to be of white cardboard—long and narrow—with a cut-out, hand-painted tulip projecting from one end, or we may use cheaper ones, those with a frisky rabbit or a downy chicken in gilt in one corner. Each cover will include a small glass vase filled with lilies of the valley or two tulips, unless we have them in the centre vase, as above mentioned.

Gimcracks for Souvenirs.

There will probably be distributed at each place a number of cheap but appropriate gimcracks, to be taken away as souvenirs, or, if our money holds out, we may select a few of the choice ones the shops are offering us. The cheaper ones include tiny cotton rabbits and chickens to be perched on to things, and large, brown rabbits, their interior to be filled with candy. These are a bit too childish for grown-ups, so there are some pretty individual compotes to hold salted nuts or bonbons. These are made of cardboard in shell shape—the outside of the shell and standard of silver, and the inside of the shell of gilt.

Among the more expensive favors there are tiny china dishes in the form of a short, stubby boat with sail at the cut-off end manned by a Cupid, and another, even prettier, is a small, unglazed, white porcelain tub, something like a double boiler. The two receptacles are connected by tiny strips of porcelain, so that water and small flowers may be put in the outside one and nuts or bonbons in the inside cup. The flowers to be used must be small ones—violets, pansies, forget-me-nots or trailing arbutus, or, prettier still, a sprig or two of yellow genestra. Two figures stand guard over the edge of this tub, and the name of the guest can be written or printed on the glazed surface at the opposite end.

For the first course after the fruit there are china egg cups, with grotesque faces upon their sides, and these cups will hold a soft cooked egg in the shell, the whole of the exposed part to be covered with a knitted worsted cosy in yellow. This cosy is made just like the stocking-like caps little girls and boys wear when skating. There is a tassel to finish the toe-like end of the crown. At the shop where these were discovered there were some choice bonbon dishes not nearly so expensive as the gold ones. These are of thick china, shaped and colored to represent orchids or tulips.

In lieu of the individual vases of flowers, which are not new, there are some small gilt flower jars in tulip pattern to hold one growing tulip.

Everything Springlike.

For the menu our suggestions are brief except that everything should be as yellow, as spring-like and as "breakfasty" as possible.

At this time of year an orange and grape fruit cocktail makes a good beginning. This is new. Orange and grape fruit juice slightly sweetened in a tiny glass resting in another filled with minced ice. There should be no soup, as no one takes soup for breakfast, but there will be fish and chicken or chops and eggs in all manners of ways, with an omelet souffle as a sweet for those who do not care to eat ices. Ices do seem to be incongruous for breakfast, nevertheless they are used for their decorative effect at the breakfast when it is a function.

Poached eggs in spinach holes in cocotte dishes, surrounded with a very yellow sauce Hollandaise, make a good course in between somewhere, and a fruit salad with some fresh strawberries may be served in orange shells. Or the fruit mixture may be served first, in place of the cocktails, in Mandarin shells, while a fitting salad would be boiled eggs stuffed with minced ham, reposing in a cup of aspic jelly, surrounded with mayonnaise. Moulds, cup shaped, are to be found for this purpose.

For the ices the same form might be used, making the cup of orange jelly and the egg of ice cream, the natural size. There are also tulip boxes to be filled with ice cream, and tulip forms at the caterers', or eggs in spun candy nests, but these are not new although pretty.

A novel idea would be to pass the ice cream eggs one for each person, in a cardboard crate, a facsimile of those in which eggs are sent to market. These could be speared for with a fork, or if a caterer could be found to do it, a large egg could be made in ice cream, from the broken top of which a yellow bunny would emerge.

Real coffee with cream should be offered at this breakfast and if our hostess is willing to relinquish the artistic effect of the ice cream course, hot waffles with real Vermont maple syrup would be a most fitting finish for the Easter breakfast.

THE SIMPLE ART OF MAKING A DELICIOUS CUP OF COFFEE.

IN the art of making good coffee a point that needs more attention than it usually receives is the blend of coffee used, which varies with almost every consumer's taste, and also (though this is not so generally known) with the water of the district. In France a blend of equal parts of Bourbon, Martinique and Mocha coffee was the favorite, and before the awful volcanic disaster in that ill-fated island, Martinique coffee was fast becoming the prime favorite in Paris and other fashionable quarters. Then, again, Mocha and Java coffees are blended in the proportion of one part Java to three of Mocha; while yet other people declare for Mocha pure and simple, which is undeniably the most delicate, though connoisseurs assert that it is "wanting in body," and therefore advocate its "fortification" by the addition of stronger and rougher blends.

Having chosen your coffee and settled the blend, its roasting and grinding must be considered. Of course, in town it is easy enough to make an arrangement with your tea and coffee dealer to send you in freshly roasted and ground coffee at frequent intervals, to insure its being fresh. But in the country it certainly pays best both to roast and grind it at home. Nor is the process difficult.

Use a frying pan for the purpose, put a very small piece of butter into the pan or brush the latter well over with a very little good salad oil; place two or three tablespoonfuls of the berries into the pan (you should do very few at once), and stir them over a very slow fire (a low gas ring for choice) until they turn a rich, soft Havana brown, after which turn them directly into a wooden bowl or a sieve and cool them as quickly as possible in the open air. Then put them at once into air-tight canisters.

Remember, while cooling, to look them over carefully, for if you leave in a burnt berry it will absolutely spoil the flavor; so always throw away at once any that have become overcolored. When wanted for use you should grind the berries in a perfectly clean coffee-mill, for if by any chance any of the preceding grinding is still left in the mill it will destroy a great deal of the aroma of the fresh coffee. The proportions of coffee also require attention. The usual idea is two heaped dessert spoonfuls of coffee for each breakfast cup of water for cafe au lait; while for cafe noir a level tablespoonful is generally reckoned for each cup. For this some cooks also allow an extra spoonful for the pot, just as in tea making, and very often they make their coffee in precisely the same manner for both kinds, trusting to the milk to bring the coffee to the requisite strength.

See that your cafetiere is thoroughly scalded out, that there is a pan of boiling water in which to stand it while the water is percolating, and then, if your coffee is good, freshly roasted and ground and the water in which it is infused is perfectly and freshly boiled, your coffee should be the equal of any you will meet abroad. The fact is, coffee-making depends entirely on attention to details so small that few people think them worth consideration.

This is the ordinary process of making what is known as French coffee, or cafe noir, which is simply strong coffee (slightly sweetened if you like), served without milk or cream, but usually with liqueurs or cognac after dinner.

SUTTEE'S AWFUL RITE IN A.D. 1905

How a Living Wife Went to a Voluntary Death on Her Husband's Funeral Pyre, as Told in a British-Indian Court Under Oath

THE COURT AT BOMBAY WHERE THE TRIAL WAS HELD

RESIDENCE OF THE LATE CHAUDRI MISSIR

A Hindu Priest of Bombay.

Photograph of a Hindu Woman of Bombay.

An Ancient Hindu Practice That Still Persists Under British Rule.

Bombay, India, March 20.

"JUGGERNATH MISSIR, you are accused of abetting the forbidden practice of Suttee. Was the widow of your father burned alive on his funeral pyre? Juggernath Missir, did you set fire to the wood whose flames consumed your dead father and your living mother?"

The accused, a handsome young Brahmin, richly clad in the native costume raised his head and looked in the eyes of the English Deputy Magistrate of the Sessions Court of Behar. Respectfully but with dignity he answered

"It is true I set fire to the wood on which my father's body rested My mother went and sat on the funeral pyre and fire broke out from her person."

Other testimony furnished word details fully establishing the fact that the horrible and superstitious Hindu ceremony of Suttee is still practised in isolated villages of British India. The Court sentenced Juggernath Missir to five years of rigorous imprisonment for "culpable homicide." With him were sentenced to terms ranging from three years down to nine months Balkishun Missir, Dwarka Missir, Ram Charan Missir, Somar Choukidar and Ganga and Dilchand Chamars

More significant yet were the indications that the prisoners and every other native in the courtroom believed that when the widow of Chandhri Missir was burned to death on her husband's funeral pyre a worthy deed was accomplished.

Some of the latter were in the immense crowd that witnessed the frightful scene. From their lips, in addition to the court evidence, were gleaned the details related herewith.

Dotted with Suttee Monuments.

To-day all the holy spots along the routes of Hindu pilgrimages are dotted with little white pillars, each commemorating a "sati," as the "good woman" and "faithful wife" is called who throws herself into the flames which consume the body of her dead husband. It is not known when the practice of the Suttee originated. It is mentioned by Diodorus Siculus as being common when the Macedonians first entered India.

The Emperor Akbar is said to have prohibited it, but vainly. Not until the year 1829 did the English dare to interfere with a religious rite so deeply rooted. Then Sir William Bentinck declared those who assisted in the ceremony guilty of "culpable homicide." He enforced the law so rigorously that only in isolated communities and in secret was the practice continued.

It is known that in the year 1817 in the Bengal Presidency alone, seven hudred widows were thus burned alive.

The religious custom did not force a widow to die in the flames of her husband's funeral pyre. It was not necessary to use compulsion. The alternative a miserable and degraded existence sent her willingly to the flames. Besides the act was regarded as that of a virtuous and faithful wife, and was strongly recommended by public opinion among the Rajputs especially as the only means of the widow's and her husband's happiness in the future state. The primitive view of the future life regarded the dead as having the same needs as the living.

Chaudhr Missir was a high caste Brahmin of influence living in the village of Sanchari near Behar. Last October he died, and arrangements were made for the burning of his body on a funeral pyre on a hillside on the banks of a small river called "Devi Sthan."

Under the direction of his eldest son, Juggernath, some of his humble retainers dug shallow trenches in the form of a St. Andrew's Cross and over this piled the wood of the pyre. In the cutting of the wood—which is a part of the funeral ceremony—Juggernath Missir, the eldest son, assisted. Being a Brahmin gentleman he had no axe of his own. Ram Lal Barhi, a carpenter of the village, lent him his. Many of the villagers assisted, too, while others gathered about as spectators.

Her Son Was Faithful.

It was while Juggernath Missir was cutting wood for the pyre that his mother came to him and announced her tragic purpose.

"My son," she said, "I will be Sati."

Juggernath Missir was aghast. There had been no Suttee in Sanchari village during his generation. He had been born under the full sway of the British Government, and all the fanaticism of religion had lain dormant in him. The widow saw that he was disturbed and said:

"Lay down your axe, my son. Go far away. Take no part in the funeral of your father and your mother and the law can not reach you. The law cannot reach me, for I will be with your father in another world."

The wife of Chandrhi Missir had lived happily with her husband, and was still beautiful. Looking at her, Juggernath Missir foresaw the miseries that were in store for her in this world as a widow and an outcast. His bosom heaved. The old religion awakened in him

"Mother," he said, "I will be no unworthy son of a good woman and a good wife. I care not for the law. I will tend the pyre on which you become Sati." Thereupon the widow of Chandhri Missir went to the river to bathe, and Juggernath Missir returned to his wood cutting.

When the villagers saw the widow of Chaudrhi Missir bathing in the river the whisper ran from one to another:

"Suttee! Suttee! The widow of Chaudrhi Missir will be Sati!"

The cremation of a dead Brahmin was an ordinary occurrence, but Sanchari Village had known no Suttee in half a century. Soon, while Juggernath Missir continued to cut wood and arrange it upon the pyre, hundreds were joining the crowd on the hillside. Volunteer musicians brought their drums, cymbals and gongs. Others brought the sacred Sanka, or shells, upon which to blow solemn tones as the spirit of the widow joined that of her husband.

A Crowd on the Hillside.

At length the pyre was ready. Bearers brought the body of Chaudrhi Missir and laid it thereon, with his feet toward the setting sun, for it was afternoon. Ram Charan, Dwarka and Balkishan Missir, the younger sons, brought the helmet, the sword, spear and modern rifle and the clothing of Chandrhi Missir and laid them beside the corpse on the pyre. Two old men retainers of Chaudrhi Missir, tottered up to the pyre and begged Juggernath Missir to slay them that their master might not be unattended in the other world, but he waved them away

"My mother will be Sati," he said; "it is enough."

The hillside was now alive with thousands of villagers and countrymen. Their bodies swayed to and fro, and low moans ran from woman to woman. The men with the drums, the cymbals, gongs and sacred Sanks sat in a row near the pyre. All were waiting for the widow of Chaudrhi Missir to appear.

They had not long to wait. From her house, bathed and attired in her bridal robes, accompanied by two maids, she came. Her face was radiant. She looked like a young bride. The women on the hill side moaned again, but now there was a more triumphant note in their lamentations. They bowed their heads toward the widow, murmuring:

Juggernath Missir, as perfectly composed as his mother, gave her his hand and helped her mount the pyre. There she stretched herself out beside her dead husband, her head beneath his shoulder as became a humble wife.

All was now ready. The men with the sacred Sanks blew a long note. The drums gongs and cymbals gave forth muffled sounds. The women on the hillside waved their bodies, bowing their heads low toward the pyre. Then the voice of the widow was heard softly calling to Juggernath Missir:

"My son, since you are here and fear not the law, do your duty as becomes a faithful Hindu."

She Died Facing the Setting Sun.

Then Juggernath Missir lighted some wheat stocks and, having walked three times around the pyre, according to custom applied the fire to the mouth of the corpse. This failing to ignite the pyre, Juggernath Missir called upon four good Brahmins to assist him in performing the "Humad."

Those who responded were the three younger sons Ram Charan Missir, Balkishun Missir and Lachman Tewari. First they burned incense all about the pyre. Then they took chips of wood dipped in ghee, lighted them and placed them under the wood of the pyre. Flames leaped upward joining the smoke of the incense. The widow lay still beside the corpse of her husband

Now the drums, gongs and cymbals gave forth their full volume of sound. Notes from the Sanks resounded through the grove. Every face upon the hillside was alight with religious ecstasy

As the flames reached the garments of the widow, she began to writhe in agony. Suddenly, wrapped in flame, she stood up, lifted her arms and turned her face toward the setting sun. Above the din of the drums and cymbals the crowd could be heard shouting from the Hindu ritual.

"Sat Ram! Sita Ram! Sati Mai Kai Jai!"

The pyre was now a roaring furnace. All at once amid the beating of the drums and the clang of the cymbals the body of the widow fell upon the corpse of the husband and the two seemed to dissolve together. Soon they were but ashes mingled with the ashes of the pyre.

The ancient rite of Suttee had been accomplished.

Prudently then the crowd withdrew and went about its ordinary occupations. The sons of the late Chaudrhi Missir and his wife returned to their house to carry out the prescribed rites of mourning.

Then the Officers Came.

On the following day incredulous officers of the British Government heard rumors of a Suttee in Sanchari Village. They laughed, but the rumors persisted. Finally they went to the house of the late Chaudrhi Missir and asked of the eldest son

"Where is your mother?"

"With my father in Paradise," answered Juggernath Missir

"How is that? There are strange rumors about, Juggernath Missir."

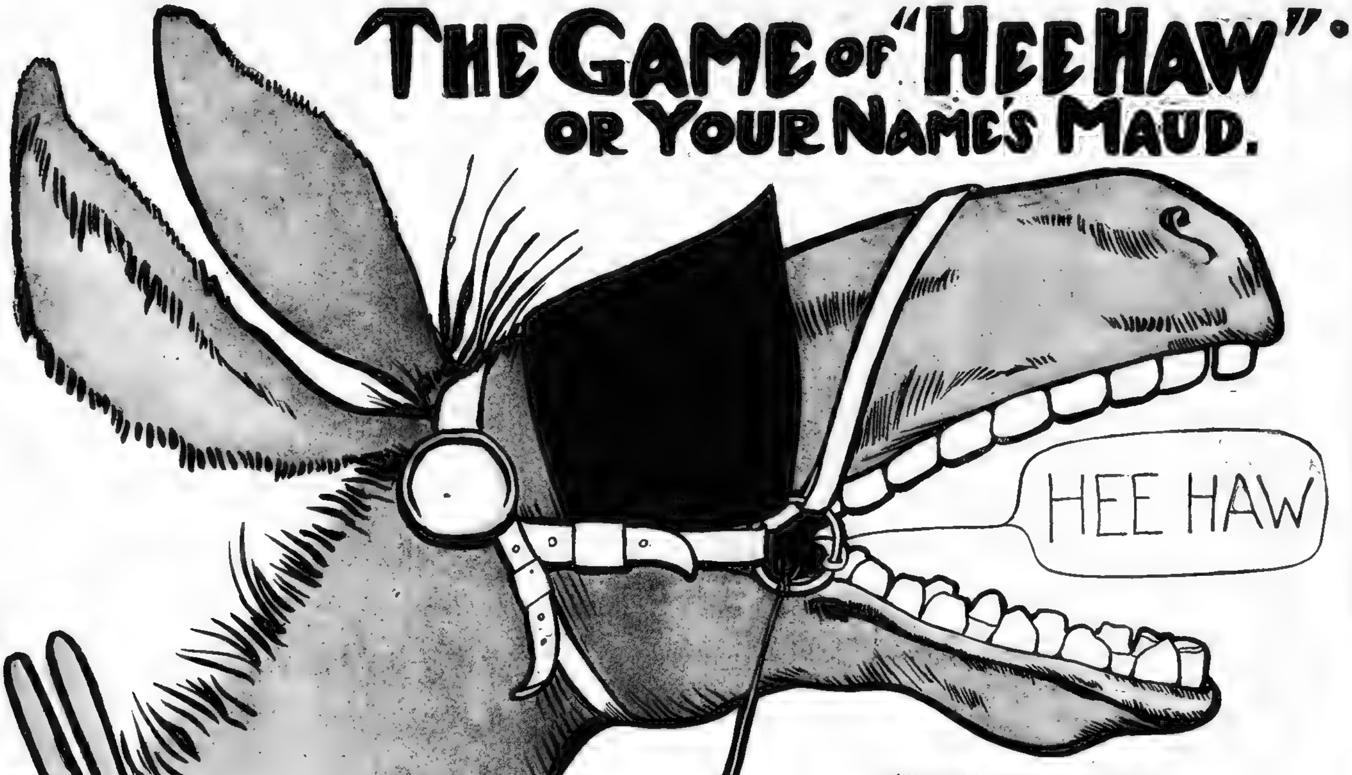
"My father and my mother died," he answered. "They were burned according to custom, on the same funeral pyre."

The officers went about the village making inquiries. Renegade Brahmins, truckling to the officers, made accusations upon which the four sons of the late Chaudrhi Missir and nine others were taken to Behar for trial, with the result above stated

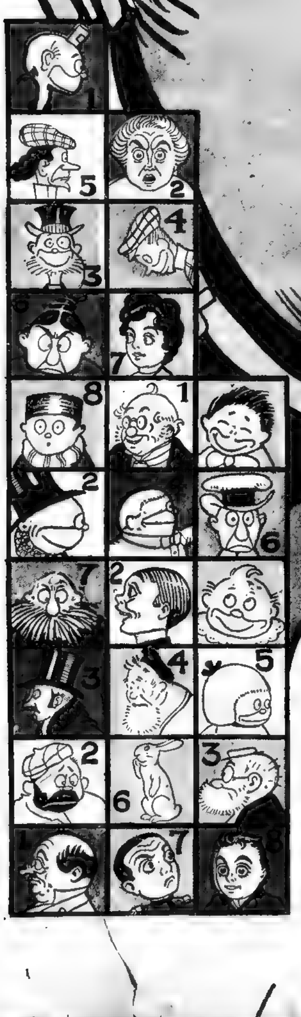
Nothing but this trial could have convinced persons grown old in the service of the government of British India that the ancient practice of suttee had been revived. The evidence as here set forth, could not be disbelieved however

The affair has created much uneasiness in official circles. Like sporadic mutinies in outlying provinces it proves that the utmost vigilance is still necessary to keep down Hindu fanaticism. It is generally held that the only practical means of preventing further infractions of the law against "suttee" or "culpable homicide," as the crime is called in the statutes, is to bring about social changes that will improve the status of widows—enabling them to marry again, or restraining popular sentiment from ostracising them from respectable society.

THE GAME OF "HEE HAW". OR YOUR NAME'S MAUD.



Copyrighted, 1905, by the American-Journal-Examiner.



HERE is a very funny game which any number of players from 2 to 6 can play. Five is the best number of players though.

Cut out the 25 small numbered squares and deal them all out to the players, who place them face down on the table in front of them. The player on the dealer's left turns up a card. Then the next player, and so on until the one whose turn it is to turn up a card discovers that the added figures of his card and some or all of the other cards already turned up make a total of 25.

The moment he makes this discovery he calls:

"Hee Haw!"

If he was the first to make the discovery and his "Hee Haw" was the first announcement that a total of 25 had been made he scores 5.

But if some other player makes the discovery before he does, or if he has made a miscount, adding 25 where there are really 26, then he is greeted with cries of

"Maud! Maud!"

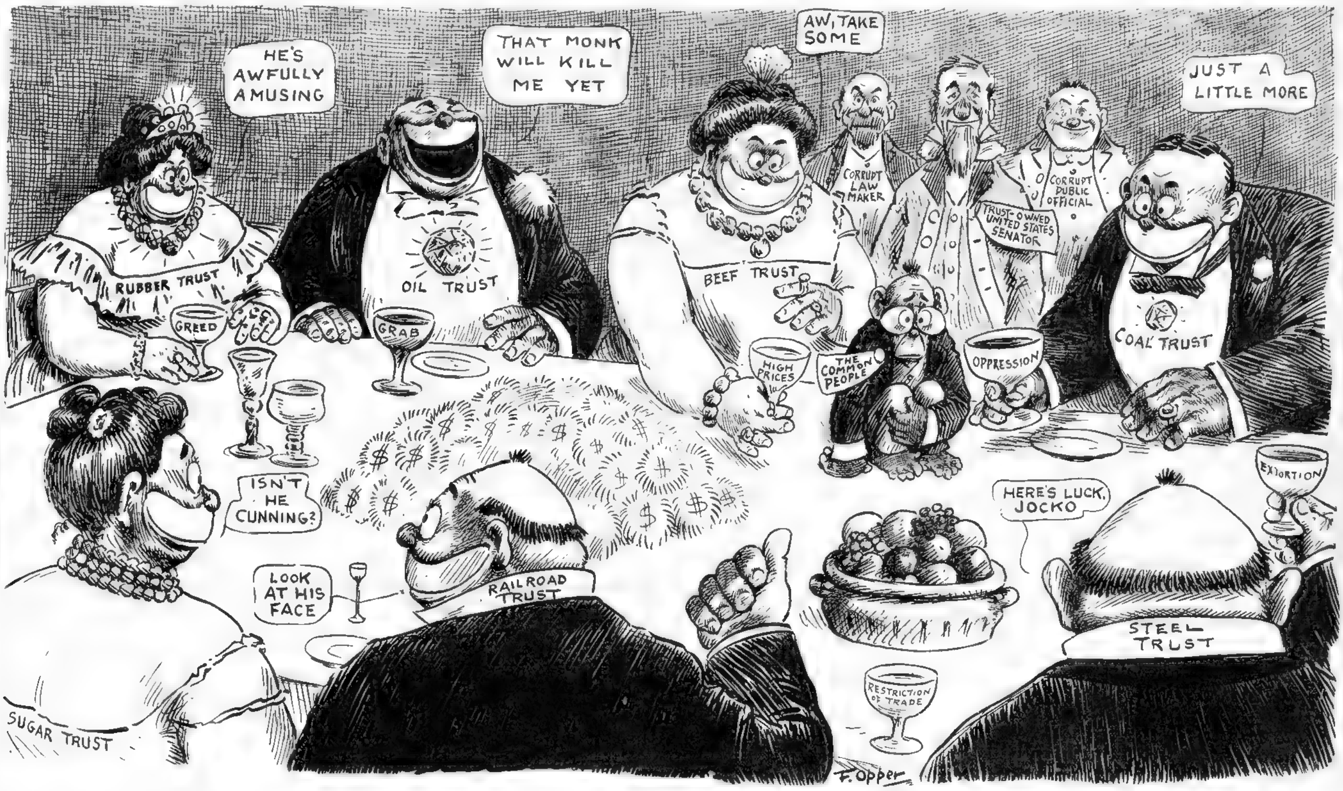
The Real Monkey Dinner.



It Is a Continuous Performance in This Country, and YOU, Mr. Ordinary Citizen, Are the Monkey.

To some of our citizens this cartoon will appear funnier than to others. It will seem delightfully humorous and absolutely correct to Rockefeller, Morgan, Armour and their fellows.

It is a cartoon that requires no comment. Mr. Opper has made the picture. You, the reader, can do your own thinking, like your brother sitting there on the table with a sad expression.

Mr. Opper has made the picture. It talks for itself, as you should think for yourself.

If your thinking should result in your VOTING -taking the poor monkey off the table and breaking up the sport of the wide-mouthed guests—so much the better.

⁂

As a mater of fact, almost every dinner in the United States these days is more or less of a monkey dinner.

The trusts don't sit at the table in their low-necked dresses and large diamonds, but they are represented there, none the less.

They are represented in the sugar bowl, the salt cellar, the meat, etc.

The monkey at the ordinary dinner is both host and monkey, too. It is his table, but the bills that he pays make a real monkey dinner of the event.

You can see by the expression on the face of the poor monkey in this picture that he is getting very tired of the festive board. His label, "The Common People," tells you that the worried little monkey represents about eighty millions of people.

How long is the dinner to last? How long is the monkey to sit there while the trusts laugh at him?

It is for you and all the rest of us obedient monkeys to settle that question.

⁂

There is just one way for this poor, persecuted monkey to get away from his tormentors. HE MUST ORGANIZE AS THEY ARE ORGANIZED.

To beat the trusts the people must go to work methodically and unitedly, combining for their own defence as the trusts have combined against them.

Every trust man will tell you, without a second's hesitation, that he is against an income tax. The people, therefore, must unite in favor of an income tax, AND A GRADUATED INCOME TAX THAT WILL REACH THE BIG TRUST OWNERS.

That will be a step in the right direction, at least.

The trusts are against municipal ownership. The people must fight for municipal ownership until they get it. In Chicago and elsewhere they have done excellent work in that direction.

The trusts are opposed especially to government ownership of the railroads. Under private ownership THEY control the railroads. They are thus enabled to control the little manufacturer, and choke him to death if they want to. Government ownership of railroads will do much to free the "Common People" monkey from his sad plight.

Trust owners are all in favor of a very high tariff. The tariff and the railroad trust combined give them absolute control of the markets and the people. Take away the tariff from the Steel Trust, for instance, and prices will drop. That applies to the Coal Trust, the Sugar Trust and many other trusts.

When a highwayman is taken into court, the first proceeding is to relieve him of his revolver, knives, etc.

The trust highwayman relies upon the railroads and the tariff—they are his revolvers, and must be taken from him.

⁂

The "Common People" monkey, if he wants to escape from his permanent monkey dinner, must take to heart Jefferson's warning against the public becoming "inattentive to the public affairs."

At present the little "Common People" monkey votes, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, for officials, Congressmen, Senators, Judges and Legislators picked out and owned in advance by the trusts.

The people must take the trouble to interest themselves in their own affairs, and stop voting for dishonest men.

The way to do that is to diminish temptation to dishonesty by preventing the giving away of franchises—which brings us back in a circle to municipal and national ownership.

At present the "Common People" monkey pays the salaries of public officials; the trusts own the officials, paying them five times as much in bribes. No wonder they think the monkey at their dinner a comical little fellow!

Cut out this cartoon and paste it up where your friends will see it. It ought to make any man think. Even a real monkey would think if he could see a picture like this and realize the truth in it.

At the Newport dinner, given to a live monkey, the little animal got nervous, and it was hard work to keep him in his chair until the banquet was over. He got angry and spilled the soup on his velvet suit—he almost broke up the monkey dinner.

Let us hope that some of his spirit of [illegible] independence will be developed before long by the [illegible] American monkey, now dining at an [illegible] every day in company with the trusts.

A Little Talk of and to the President

Kinship

I am the voice of the voiceless,
Through me the dumb shall speak
Till the deaf world's ear be forced to hear
The cry of the wordless weak.
[illegible] street [illegible],
From stable and zoo the wail
Of my tortured kin proclaims the sin
Of the mighty against the frail.

Oh, shame on the praying churchman,
With his unstalled steed at the door
Where the Winters beat with snow and sleet
And the Summer sun rays pour!
And shame on the mothers of mortals
Who have not thought to teach
Of the sorrow that lies in dear dumb eyes—
The sorrow that has no speech!

The same force formed the spa[illegible]
That fashioned ma[illegible] the k[illegible]
The God of the whole gave a spark of soul
To furred and feathered thing
And I am my brother's keeper,
And I will fight his fight,
And speak the word, for beast and bird,
Till the world shall set things right

D[illegible] the twenty-five Pres[illegible] [illegible]

There is no question regarding the [illegible] of Mr. Roosevelt to do [illegible] the interests of the people [illegible] bring about better conditions for the masses.

He wishes [illegible] he does not [illegible] poor dumb brothers [illegible] blot upon the splendid [illegible] good and almost great [illegible] that he finds hi[illegible] recreation from the cares of [illegible]

[illegible] settling [illegible] they [illegible] the cold [illegible] she was killed.

[illegible] cultivated classes sports as we do here [illegible] of gratification at the abolishment of the bull fight from Cuba [illegible] the American invasion of that island.

Yet in Los Angeles, the city of [illegible] Angels, a class of wealthy [illegible] President [illegible] hunting and slaying big game, but [illegible] the wonderful pastime called "coursing." Hundreds of Christian people in Los Angeles did not know what coursing meant until it was explained to them at one of the large meetings brought about by the S. P. C. A. [illegible] Now listen to a description of this pastime [illegible] created in God's image.

[illegible] raised to the point of [illegible] When dri[illegible] to buy a hare often leaps six feet in the air, and as it descends its head is seized by one dog and its legs by another and it is torn apart before its [illegible] breath has ceased to agitate [illegible] trembling body.

Then the excited daughter[illegible] [illegible] its final demise belongs, and the money is paid accordingly. Society people drive out to the scene of this educational sport, and they are indignant that the S. P. C. A. is taking [illegible] measures to stop the recreation of private church-going Christian citizens.

Aside from the torture to the mind and body of the timid, mute little hares, think of the shameful degradation to the minds of the men and [illegible] who witness this sport!

Think of the influence of such a woman's thoughts upon her unborn child! It is no wonder monstrosities of criminal instincts are born into the world. No wonder our reform schools and Gerry societies are overrun with depraved children.

Oh! when will our government learn that the only way to lessen crime permanently in the land is to educate men, women and children in kindness to the inferior things of earth?

When will it substitute institutions for educating women and men in the power of pre-natal influence for institutions of punishment—punishment for crimes that ofttimes had their seed in the mother's mind before the criminal was born?

Surely not while our President finds his recreation and enjoyment in slaughtering animals can we hope for such a move on the part of the government. But some day it will come.

Some day the prevailing idea of a [illegible] will [illegible] all [illegible] [illegible] (cruelty in all forms) will refuse to call any man leader or even counsellor who deliberately kills anything save in self-defence.

It is told of the great Buddha, that passing by where a sacrifice was about to be offered up to the gods, he begged that he might be allowed to die in place of the terrified animals. "I have no fear of death," he said. "Let these poor animals go. If blood must be offered as a sacrifice, let it be mine."

And, ashamed and awed, the idolators unbound the beasts and let them go free, saying, "What manner of man is this that would die to save a brute from fear and suffering?"

Would it not be well were we to inoculate our orthodoxy with a little of this spirit of sympathy and unselfishness for lesser creatures?

What a pity that our President does not stop to realize his influence upon the growing minds of children to-day! Even if he has not sufficiently developed from the crude, warrior stage to believe that slaughter save as a means of self-defence is wrong, he ought to be willing to forego the pleasure of killing for sport when he knows that his example is one hundreds of thousands of young lads seek to emulate. Noblesse oblige, Mr. Roosevelt. Your example is doing much to nullify all the efforts of the humane societies all over the land. And whether you believe it or not, you are unconsciously helping to increase crime and cruelty in America. It is a great misfortune that so able, so good, so honorable, so just and so cultured a man should permit this blemish to darken his character and mar his record.

There are wonderful avenues open for your enjoyment to-day. Suppose instead of hunting mother bears to death you should go and spend a few weeks with that wonderful wizard of the vegetable kingdom, Mr. Burbank, of Santa Rosa, Cal, and study his [illegible] achievements and realize what they mean to our country in the future. Surely this would rest your mind with an entirely new order of thoughts. For all the rest the immortal mind of man needs is Change.

Suppose you turn your attention to another wizard right under the shadow of your roof tree, Elmer Gates of Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C. There is a man it would pay our government to endow with a million dollars to carry on his wonderful discoveries regarding the power of the human mind to build more brain by scientific principles and to transform criminal minds to morality. Dr. Gates has the proofs (not the mere statements, but all the proofs), to show you of discoveries whi[illegible] revolutionize the [illegible] of criminals [illegible] from prison officers and into the hands of scientists. Yet I doubt if you, dear Mr. Roosevelt, know as much about this great man as you know of the actions of the hunted wild beast.

Oh, the world offers unbounded and beautiful opportunities for rest, relaxation, enjoyment and pleasure to-day outside the realm of slaughter.

Diary of a Young Wife

By Dorothy Dix

"I'SE BEEN listening," remarked Mirandy, "to [illegible] hundred [illegible] to get round a [illegible] Yes [illegible] kissing [illegible] when [illegible] Lor' [illegible] looking [illegible] I'se de valler rose [illegible] younger an' pretty, an' better looking ev'ry year, fus' thing I knows I'se a singin' over my tubs, an' a thinking dat I [illegible] did draw de capital prize in de ma[illegible] lottery.

"Yassum, [illegible] women [illegible] know all about de [illegible] of kissin'. [illegible] man can conjure [illegible] de same an' a thousand [illegible] his business when he [illegible] dem on his wife.

"It's a lot easier to kiss her dan it is to wuk [illegible] buy her dresses an' shoes an' hats, an' [illegible] you want to keep a woman ca'm an' satisfied an' peaceful, de kiss will go furder dan the [illegible] few days dat.

"Yassum, I ho's suspicious 'bout a kisser, an' if I had a husband dat felt called on to salute me [illegible] times a day, you better believe dat I would cast my eye around to see whar he went of a evening when he said he was gwine out to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] he [illegible] call of duty, dat he's headed for a crap [illegible] me, an' I'se mighty apt to have to get up in de night an' let in a nigger dat's so filled up wid tangle-foot dat he can't find de keyhole.

It is stupid sitting up trying to talk to a man who is like a stuffed snake

"Yassum, dat's de way it goes, an' when he's dat affectionate dat I can't fry de po'k chops widout his stopping to kiss me ev'ry time he passes by de cook stove I prognosticates dat he's been perambulatin' with dat Ma'y Jane Jones, an' he's afered some of de sisters are going to drap in after supper kinder casual like an' tell me.

"An' mo'over when Ike comes home an' puts his arm around me and tells me what a good wife I'se been to him an' how I'se helped him along, an' how he never could have got along widout me, 'sperience has done told me dat I'se got to rastle around an' find de rent money, kaze Ike has done dropped his week's wages on some sort of foolishness.

"An' Ike, he's des like de balance of de husbands. He done found out dat ef you want to blind a woman's eyes de easiest way is to kiss [illegible] shut, an' dat ef you want to stop a woman's mouth de quickest way is to kiss it. [illegible] seen one kiss turn a woman blind as a bat, an' give her de lockjaw.

"An' de men ain't de only ones dat know how to play dat kissin' game. Whenever I see one of dese heah little sick kitten women what's always hanging around her husband's neck, an' has to follow him three blocks down the street of a morning when he starts to wuk befo' she can make up her mind to part wid him for de day, I'se willing to bet dat he's got holes in his socks, an' dat he has to git up an' git his own breakfus while she [illegible] in de bed an' told him how much she loved him.

"Yassum, kisses and words—dey's easy. An' wukin' for a pusson an' making 'em comfortable—dat's hard. Which is de reason dat dem what loves de least kisses de most, an' takes on [illegible] over each odder.

"It's funny [illegible] dat as long as married folks [illegible] dat [illegible] ain't got deir eye on nobody else, dey don't feel no call to always be kissing an' swearing dat dey loves each odder? It's just like a man what's got money in de bank don't have to always be tellin' folks dat he can pay his debts, but de minute a man or a woman gits to sorter shasshayn' off de straight an' narrer path after somebody what's younger and likelier looking dan de one dey's [illegible] dey begin to be mighty [illegible] his head or wif[illegible]

"Yassum, dere's plenty of kissing dat ain't nuthin on dis earth but de salve for an' uneasy conscience, an' when you hears 'bout dese couples what's passed de calf love, what's always kissing in public, de next news you knows is dat dey's done landed in de divorce court.

"Nawm, I ain't got nuthin to say agin' kissin', but a kiss ought to be like de seasonin' dat I puts in when I makes a cake. It ought to be mighty little, an' used wid a sparin' hand an' a lot of judgment an' sense, plenty of ginger [illegible]

"Den it's good, but ef you makes de whole cake of it, it sorter turns your stomach."

How it feels to be an "Actor-man"

Being a Truthful Account of the Brief, but Exciting Experience of An Ambitious Reporter on the Stage of the Boston Theatre in a Mob Scene.

Why the Glamour of the Stage Becomes a Dull Yellow After An Encounter Which Has a Harvard-Yale Mix-up Beaten a Block and a Half.

By Morton B. Birge.

How does it seem to be an actor?

General Sherman says, "War is ——."

So's acting.

That is, when your acting consists of being a "supe" in the delirious "mob scene" in "The Pit." There Wilton Lackaye, as Curtis Jadwin, the big bull in the Chicago wheat pit, is surrounded by a maddened throng of "supes" acting as wheat-crazed brokers.

Then acting for the experienced "supe" is a rough-house. But supposing the "supe" is not a really, truly "supe," used to the chances of the stage? Supposing he is simply a lonesome reporter out on an "assignment." Then acting comes under the class of work called "extra hazardous" by the life insurance man.

You remember that cheerful little sign which Virgil showed Dante over the entrance of the "Inferno":

"All hope abandon, ye who enter here."

I'd like to journey down there—just to the doorway—and borrow that placard to nail up over the stage entrance of the Boston Theatre, just as a memento of my first experience on the stage. Leastwise, I would have liked to for a few seconds in the dizzy whirl of that mob scene.

After it was all over and I returned to the office I thought: "Where have I been; what was it?"

I recollected it was a "mob scene" to which I had been assigned. I sought the dictionary.

Webster gives several definitions of "mob." The best one is, "An unlawful or riotous assembly."

That's it—it's riotous.

"Scene" has several definitions, also, one of which is this: "A separate portion of a play."

It's a blessed thing that this wild time was only part of the play. If it had lasted from 8 to 11 o'clock, there wouldn't have been much of Wilton Lackaye, which would have been a calamity. And there wouldn't have been anything left of one reportorial "supe," which would have been aggravating.

The editor, he says: "Do you want to be an actor."

It's not to reason why. "Yes," says I.

PRESS AGENT PROMISES TO FIX UP MATTER OF ENROLLMENT IN SUPES

So, on the opening night of "The Pit" I went hopefully to the Boston Theatre. There I found a deceiver. He is a press agent. His name is Billy Walsh, and I had thought he was a friend of mine.

"I'll fix it up for you," says Walsh. "Here's Mr. Duce right now."

"Mr. Duce" was a young man of Christian appearance. He looked as though he wouldn't hurt a fly.

"Mr. Birge would like to go on as a 'supe' in the 'mob scene,'" said Mr. Walsh.

"Certainly," said Mr. Duce. "I'll fix it up for you."

"Whom the gods would destroy," etc. You know.

Mr. Duce chatted pleasantly about the "mob scene" as he led me around to the stage entrance.

"Very powerful scene," he said. He was right. It's husky.

At the stage entrance I found men collecting. They were "supes," or would-be "supes." Some had been on many times, others a few times; some not at all. Some had yellow tickets bearing numbers. They had received them at the Sunday rehearsal from Murray.

Murray's the "super captain," as they call him, the boss "supe." He mixes into the "mob scene" himself, and wears nose glasses all through it. How he does it I don't know. I found difficulty in wearing my clothes.

There were all sorts and conditions of men waiting there, college students, brokers' clerks from State street, attracted by the name, "The Pit," men with money and men without, and all dressed accordingly.

SCRIBE TOLD TO AVOID TROUBLE, BUT GOOD ADVICE GOES ASTRAY

I waited a few moments with Mr. Duce, looking at the crowd. There were fully 400 of them, from which some 350 were to be picked. All the time Mr. Duce was chatting pleasantly about this "powerful scene."

By and by the entrance to "The Inferno," the stage door, opened. The "supes" filed slowly in. Mr. Duce ushered me up front and led me by the eagle eye of Murray with a simple nod.

Later, when the "supes" had been selected and were waiting downstairs under the stage, he introduced me to Murray.

Murray said he'd "fix it up" too. I was sure now that I was completely "fixed up," and I was happy.

Just then an exceedingly brisk appearing young man came along. Mr. Duce grabbed him by the arm and another introduction followed. I gathered that this was the stage manager for the company. I learned later from th[illegible]

Mr. Boulden is a Samaritan.

[illegible] he says. [illegible] pretty lively when it comes to the [illegible] of the mob scene. You just slide up into the [illegible] gallery [illegible] representing the spectators' gallery in the Board of Trade building [illegible] this scene. You [illegible] there [illegible] and you won't get stepped on."

"No," I said; "I guess I'll mix right in it, and then I'll get a better idea of it; just as much obliged to you."

"Just as you like, old man," said Mr. Boulden, [illegible] to attend to one of thirteen thousand details a stage manager has on his mind.

I was next stacked up against Mr. Lackaye himself, being ushered into his dressing room by the ubiquitous Mr. Duce. Mr. Lackaye was genial. He quoted laughingly somebody's saying about "Boston being a state of mind," then swung into a brief business talk with Mr. Duce involving something about a recalcitrant railroad agent, who differed with the financial end of the company regarding transportation rates.

WATCHING WILTON LACKAYE AND AWAITING THE WORD TO ADVANCE

He finally instructed Mr. Duce to tell somebody "to go ahead," adding, "I like to see people philanthropic, but I don't want them to be philanthropic with my money. I like to do that myself."

Then Mr. Duce told him that I was going to "supe" in the "mob scene."

"M-m-m-m," said Mr. Lackaye. "I think you'd do better in the spectators' gallery."

"There's that blessed gallery again," I thought. [illegible] they're afraid I'll make a mess of it.

"No," I said, "I think I'd prefer to [illegible] if you don't object."

"Not a bit, not a bit, my boy," said Mr. Lackaye. And having done his duty as a kind-hearted man, he [illegible] went his dressing [illegible]

At 9.20 I went downstairs and found the supes, [illegible] of them getting ready to come up stairs [illegible]. Act III was just beginning over our heads.

Then somebody shouted down [illegible] slowly up to the stage [illegible] the [illegible] from the house mingling with the [illegible]

Mr. Lackaye dashed off from the [illegible] back across the stage and disappeared into his dressing room. We supes stood in the back of the stage. In the front scenery was being shifted with dizzy rapidity. The setting for the third act was being hustled away to make room for a double setting for the fourth and last act, which contains the "powerful mob scene."

WHERE THE SUPES ARE HEARD BUT NOT SEEN BY THE AUDIENCE

This act opens with a scene in the office of Gretry, Converse & Co., Curtis Jadwin's brokers. From there it changes to the wheat pit of the Chicago Board of Trade.

While Jadwin is defying Crookes, his enemy, and encouraging his partners, in the first scene, the back of the Board of Trade setting is being built up behind the scenic walls of the office of Gretry, Converse & Co. This is so that, when the office scene closes and the curtain is rung down, the wheat pit setting may be completed with as little loss of time as possible. There's only fifty seconds in which to make the shift between curtains.

According to [illegible] the supes were grouped just back of the office setting. The audience during the office scene hears the hoarse shouts of brokers from the wheat pit. That was where the supes began to work. As Murray, the super captain, raised his arm every one yelled.

I didn't yell the first time. I didn't know what to yell. I asked the man next to me.

"Your number," he said in a whisper. "Gives effect of confused noise."

ON THE STAGE IN WHIRLWIND OF SUPES AND NOISE AND NUMBERS

Then I understood. Every man was shouting his ticket number at the top of his voice. At the next shout I heard my informant bellow "Forty-seven, forty-seven!"

"Seven, seven," [illegible] I didn't know.

Lights out! [illegible] Dark [illegible] The curtain slid down. The wheat pit stage was [illegible] The office walls [illegible] A circular set of steps was [illegible] to the front. The supes [illegible] made a rush for it, every one [illegible] like a flood. I was swept into the middle of them. I had been wearing a pink in my buttonhole. A tall "super" brushed by me and the pink disappeared like some one wiping frost from a pane of glass.

There was [illegible] "Supes" [illegible] were yelling. They threw pieces of paper in the air. All made a struggle to get somewhere, anywhere [illegible] here so far as I could tell from not being able to see anything at all.

My nose was flattened against the shoulder blade of a bony "supe" in front of me. A "supe" stood on each foot and two behind me were climbing up my back. Praise the tailor the coat seams held.

TOLD TO YELL, AND HIS ONLY EFFORT WAS A CRY FOR "HELP, HELP, HELP."

Then the curtain went up. I felt it rather than saw or heard it. The noise redoubled. I heard the house applaud above the racket. That made me realize what I was there for.

"I'm an actor," I thought, "a regular actor. And here I am and I can't do a darn thing."

But I could. I could yell. And I did the next second.

"Seven, seven," I started.

No. "Thirteen, thirteen, thirteen," I bellowed in disgust at my luck. Then I switched again and squealed the most appropriate thing I could think of: "Help, help, help!"

I was aware of a powerful voice shouting something above the [illegible]. Then silence. Some one had choked off the [illegible]

Now's my time, I thought. "Help," I started to say, but checked [illegible]. However [illegible] I managed to kick the man in front of me [illegible] satisfaction.

"All [illegible] Gretry, Converse & Co. [illegible]"

[illegible] the Board of Trade [illegible] failure [illegible]

THEN THE WHOLE ARMY OF SUPES TUMBLED WILDLY OFF THE STAGE

"It's a lie, it's a lie," bellowed the deep voice I had heard before. It was Jadwin, the maddened speculator, fighting, fighting God, fighting commerce, fighting rivers of wheat. I couldn't see him then on account of the shoulder blades of the aforesaid bony supe in front of me. But I [illegible] figured it out.

There was a [illegible] pressing back and I nearly went down. That was when Jadwin fought his way [illegible] to Crookes and knocked him down.

Curtain down—curtain up—down—up—down—up [illegible] finally down for good, and the nearly exhausted star had taken a breathless way to his dressing room.

Then there was a mad scramble to get out of the way, as the scene shifters wait for no man.

We literally tumbled off that set of circular steps and to the back of the stage, three hundred and fifty thousand million of us, more or less.

AN INVENTORY OF THE DAMAGE AFTER THE MOB SCENE IS OVER

I saw the "bony supe" in front of me stumble and go down. Somebody stepped on his fingers and the "supe" let out a dismal squeal.

In back I paused. My collar was parted at the front button. My tie was skewed. My shoes looked as though they had been moth-eaten. My toes were flat. My coat and trousers were creased into as fine a map of the battle of [illegible] Pass as any newspaper ever printed.

And right above me was a gallery. Down [illegible] coming young men and young women. The former were [illegible] the gallery for that scene. The young women were [illegible] of the company in there as spectators in the "mob scene." And not one of them was ruffled so much as a hair.

And I looked at that snug safe gallery [illegible]. And I recalled what Mr. Boulden and Mr. Lackaye [illegible] had said. And then I recollected Billy Walsh and Mr. Duce and Supe Captain Murray, who "fixed it up" for me [illegible]

And I went back to the editor and I says:

WHEN THE PLAY WAS OVER

A fractured collar.

A badly disarranged state of mind.

A MORAL.

"When a man who knows whereof he speaks shows you how to avoid trouble, take the advice and don't imagine that you know more about it than he does, for in that path lies trouble of many and varied kinds."

A number of novelties [illegible] will be done to make it attractive.

SOCIETY

Holy Week Will Be Followed by a Season of Unusual Gayety for Boston's Most Exclusive Set.

THE last week of Lent, Holy Week, finds society calm and unruffled, save for one or two events in the way of musicales, readings and charity entertainments. However, underneath the surface there is much activity, and the post Easter season promises a constant round of gayety before the Summer farewells are spoken and society takes its way from town.

Already the North Shore places are being put in Summer readiness and lawns are showing velvety green and Spring flowers are pushing their blossoms above the sod.

There will be the usual number of fashionable Spring weddings, for which cards will soon go out with the preliminary entertaining which characterizes the fashionable wedding.

Interest in the Vincent Club theatricals increases as the dates of the performances draw near. Those who have been privileged to look in on the rehearsals of "Alice in Wonderland, Continued," have much to say of the play itself and the members of the cast.

Two girls who will be greatly missed are Kitty Fay, who will not return from the South in time to be present, and Dorothy Jordan, whose dancing last year was one of the distinct features of the theatricals.

The omission of the usual annual Horse Show at Mechanics' Building has caused the Spring season to lack one of its most brilliant and fashionable events, for it has always brought to town many society leaders from other cities and has formed an excuse for general entertaining. However, it may be that this lack will give to the open-air Horse Show, in May, an added impetus, and truly an open-air Horse Show gives a most enviable opportunity for the display of early Summer gowns, which attendance at the Horse Show [illegible].

Alex Higginson [illegible] giving a series of week-end house parties at his estate, at which the [illegible] theatrical stars in town have [illegible] been the guests of Higginson. One of these house parties was recently saddened [illegible] by the death of one of Mr. Higginson's prize foxhounds, "Mary Smith," who, both here and abroad, had won blue ribbons at any number of kennel shows.

This dog, a wholesome creature, was perfectly devoted to Mr. Higginson, and he had made a special pet of her, so the loss was more than merely that of one dog less in the kennel.

Several society people will open their nearby country places over Easter, taking out of the city congenial house parties for over Easter Monday.

The various country clubs are beginning to take on the aspect of Spring, and the golfers are planning for an enthusiastic campaign. No end of congratulations have been showered upon Miss Eleonora Sears and Miss Fenno for their tennis triumphs in New York. Among the youngest matrons of society none is more popular than Mrs. Philip Dana Mason, formerly Miss Mary Winthrop of Beacon street, whose portrait we present today.

Mrs. Mason is not only a handsome woman, but has a charm of manner which impresses all who meet her.

Mr. Gardiner Lane of 341 Beacon street has recently purchased the Codman estate on Marlboro street, near Fairfield, and will have the house completely modernized and renovated, so that it will be ready for occupancy in October when the family returns from Manchester, where they will spend the Summer.

Mrs. Edward A. Clark of Jamaica Plain is spending the month of April at Old Point Comfort. Directly after their return the Clarks will go to Magnolia for the Summer.

Recent arrivals at Old Point Comfort are Mrs. Robert [illegible] McQuillen of Dedham and Miss Katharine McQuillen. Mrs. McQuillen is prominently identified with the Norfolk Hunt Club set.

Among the many Bostonians who are to spend the Summer abroad are Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Mawhinney of the Charlesgate and their daughter, Miss Mabel Mawhinney, who are sailing the latter part of May for an extended tour.

CATHEDRAL WEDDING FOR PORTLAND SOCIETY

Portland, Me., April 15. The William R. Wood place, one of the finest family homes in town, has been sold to Fritz H. Jordan, who will use it as a residence. The death of Mr. Wood some months ago left his sister, Miss Alice Wood, in sole possession.

Mr. Henry Hart Furbish has issued cards for the marriage of his daughter, [illegible] Emery, to Herbert Warren Mason of Boston on Wednesday, April 26, at the Cathedral of St. Luke. A reception will follow immediately at the Cumberland Club, of which the bride's father is a prominent member. The family is highly connected and is identified with Portland's early interests and social history. Some of the young society belles who will act as attendants are Misses Dorothea Knight, Marguerite Rumery, Katherine Hale, Victoria Brown, Marion Emery, Eleanor Wright. It will be the most brilliant occasion of the Spring months.

Miss Mary White of Congress street announced this week the engagement of her sister, Miss Jane White of Boston, who passes a good deal of time in this city. The home was filled with floral gifts. Miss White's fiance is Dr. Leslie Bissell of St. Paul's School, Concord.

BOSTONIANS AT NORTH SHORE

Dr. Sears, G. S. Mandell, Dr. Parker and Others at Beverly Cove.

Beverly, April 15. With the advent of the George S. Mandells, the Dr. Frederick Searses, the Dr. C. F. Parkers, the Bryce J. Allans and several other Boston families at Beverly Cove this week, besides almost a score of families at other parts of the North Shore, the season may truly be said to be under way. Many of the Summer cottages have been opened during the week, and week-end parties, so popular all along the North Shore [illegible], will be resumed [illegible] the Summer season is full under way.

Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Bryce J. Allan had a party of Boston friends down for the day, and a spin along the North Shore in Mr. Allan's big touring car was a pleasant diversion from the usual routine of Sundays past.

Preparations are being made to open the E. Preble Motley house at Magnolia Beach, as well as the A. P. Loring at Pride's, the Sibleys at Beverly Cove and the Havens at Beverly Farms during the week to come.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Fabyan came down from Boston in one of Mr. Fabyan's big autos last Sunday and lunched with the Thomas McKees at Beverly Farms. The McKees have just arrived from the South, where they have been since [illegible] their North Shore home at Christmas time.

[illegible] the First Baptist Church [illegible] Beverly Farms, where the late Mrs. [illegible] Whitman was a regular attendant [illegible] the Summer season, will see the beautiful stained glass window, the work of the late Mrs. Whitman, which has been presented to the church by Mrs. Charles Tilden of Marlboro street, Boston.

T. Jefferson Coolidge, Charles Head and Col. H. E. Russell at Manchester.

Manchester, April 15. Among the arrivals at Manchester this week are the T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jrs., the Charles Heads, the Colonel Henry E. Russells, the Walter J. Mitchells and the F. Squires.

[illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison K. Caner of Philadelphia, who were [illegible] Boston a few days the first of the week, took a run down to their Manchester place Monday for a few hours.

T. Dennie Boardman and his daughter, Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, who are among the most lavish entertainers during the Summer season, were [illegible] down from Boston [illegible].

Miss Margaret Whitman, who has just returned from [illegible], came down to West Manchester this afternoon. Miss Whitman is arranging to bring her class of boys in St. Paul's Church down to the magnificent estate of her father on the Beverly Farms road shortly, as is her custom every Spring.

John Caswell Erecting a Big Auto House at Pride's Crossing.

Pride's Crossing, April 15. John Caswell, whose automobile enthusiasm led him to buy a highly powered car for the Florida races this Winter, was at his Pride's Crossing estate this week and work was at once started on the erection of a large auto house in which to store his several racing cars, which will undoubtedly [illegible] along the North Shore [illegible]. Mr. Caswell [illegible] the fashionable Myopia Club at Hamilton [illegible]. The Caswells are planning on coming up from New York week after next.

Nearby the Caswell place at Pride's Crossing is the Alhambra, where Mrs. John L. Gardner formerly spent her Summers, occupied by the Taylors last year. An auto house is being erected. The Taylors have added one more auto to their three autos of last season.

Harold Tweed was down from Cambridge a few days ago, too, with a few of his college friends. [illegible]

[illegible] house on Beach street, Beverly Farms, and will keep it open for week-end parties the rest of the Spring, but will not move down from Boston till June.

Newport Will Entertain Many Noted Foreigners—Awaiting Vanderbilt-Goelet Engagement.

Newport, R. I., April 15.—The fashionable Muenchinger-King cottage has been completely filled during the week with members of the cottage colony arranging for the early opening of their places and by cottage hunters.

The Storrs Wells have been here arranging details for the Wells-Peters wedding on June 27th—with a week's gayeties for the young people prior to the wedding, which will be celebrated in the little church, known as All Saints' Memorial Chapel, where many brilliant society weddings have taken place in the past.

Newport is to have a season of foreigners, according to reports which the cottagers visiting this week have brought here. The most interesting of all is the promised visit of the Prince of Wales to the Ogden Millses during the latter part of August, which will mean a continual round of social gayeties. Then the visit of Prince Battenberg during the first week in October with the British squadron will mean that the season will be prolonged and social events will be numerous, as the North Atlantic squadron under "Fighting Bob" Evans is to be here at the same time.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, mistress of "The Breakers" on Ochre Point, with her daughter, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, are to arrive there in June. This means a succession of magnificent affairs, while Mrs. Alfred and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney will, with Mrs. H. McKay Twombly, give some handsome affairs for the richest heiress in the New York-Newport-Boston social set. All ears are turned towards Mrs. Vanderbilt, as the official announcement of the engagement of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt to Mr. Robert W. Goelet, son of Mrs. Robert Goelet, is sure to be announced this season, and, according to report, at the wedding reception of Miss Wells and Harry Peters on June 27.

Mrs. Robert Goelet, who is cruising in European waters on her steam yacht Nahma, has given orders for certain improvements to her estate here, and she will occupy the place this Summer for the first time in four years.

The combined wealth of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and Robert W. Goelet would make them one of the richest couples in the younger set of America, and doubtless their honeymoon would be enjoyed on the steam yacht Nahma, which is to be here throughout the season.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and her husband are shortly to make a flying trip to Europe, where Mr. Vanderbilt will consult with W. Waldorf Astor relative to the sale of "Beaulieu" on the Cliffs, which the Vanderbilts have been occupying for five seasons and of which they still have another season's lease. Their children will come here on the 20th and remain till their parents return.

Of course the "Neely" Vanderbilts will have some distinguished foreign guests over for the season, and they are sure to be from the imperial family of Germany, with whom they have a personal acquaintance from the Emperor down, and it is positively known that Prince Henry promised a year ago to pay the Vanderbilts a visit at Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, who have the Cushing estate for the summer, will entertain on an elaborate scale this season, and the handsome hostess, who was Elsie Whelen of Philadelphia, will make a strong bid to be the leader among the younger married women, and certainly with the social support she will receive through the Wilsons, the Cornelius Vanderbilts, the E. Rollins Morses, Mrs. Ogden Goelet and others there is no reason why she should not secure the social goal she seeks for.

The Frederick Cunninghams of Longwood, who bought the Mayer estate on Washington street, which is being largely improved, have signified their intention of arriving during June and remaining until the cold weather sets in. They have a magnificent piece of land on the waterfront, where a wharf is being completed for use of their yacht.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Wilson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. Rollins Morse, Mrs. William G. Weld are arriving during early June for the season, while the Robert M. Cushings will be here the latter part of the same month.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. R. Thayer, Jr., will join the H. Mortimer Brookses here in June for the Summer.

There is to be a tennis tournament for the ladies at the Casino in June for solid gold cups, and the players will include Miss Eleanor Sears of Boston, who is to spend the Summer here, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Barger-Wallach, Miss Anna Sands, Miss Cynthia Roche and a number of others in the singles.

There is [illegible] that Mrs. Ogden Goelet will remain abroad all Summer, for arrangements have been made for the Roxburghes to visit Mrs. Goelet during the entire month of August.

PROVIDENCE SOCIETY IN MOTHER GOOSE JUBILEE

Providence, April 15.—Many post-Lenten events are in preparation, but none is looked forward to with greater interest than the "Mother Goose Jubilee," for which society buds and beaux have been rehearsing faithfully for the past three weeks under the direction of Miss Margaret MacL. Eager. Among the diversions of the past week have been several receptions and a number of entertaining performances at the playhouses.

George Cohan, as Little Johnny Jones, drew large audiences to the Providence Opera House during his stay. On the opening night there were several theatre parties and a particularly large society contingent. One party was given by Mr. Edward Martin Gould for Miss Hope Sayles, Mr. [illegible] R. Bancroft and Miss Virginia [illegible]. Another box party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. James Pettiplace. In one large theatre party were Mrs. Howard Richmond, who gave the party in honor of her son, Lawrence Richmond, Mr. Henry Lippitt, Miss Nana Taylor, Miss Nina Wilkinson, Miss Elsie Simmons. Among others in the audience were John Carter Brown Woods, Miss Hortense Weeden, Mr. and Mrs. William Penn Mather, Miss Mary Colt, Mrs. S. G. Babbitt, Mr. Roscoe Stetson Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pearce, Jr., Mr. T. F. I. McDonnell, Miss Helen Capron, Miss Janet Mather, Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Horton, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Comstock, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin R. Vaughan.

The Unitarian Club held its annual reception and supper Monday evening, the guest of honor being the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, formerly of this city. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Amasa Eaton, Miss Sarah E. Doyle, Mrs. Daniel Beckwith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Brown, Miss Anne Cooke Cushing, Miss Louise Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Vaughan are entertaining this week Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Reed Vaughan, just back from Porto Rico.

Radcliffe Instructor Tells of Girls' Curved Spines.

MISS ELIZABETH A. WRIGHT

RADCLIFFE GIRLS HAVE SPINE CURVATURE.

Miss Wright, the Gymnasium Teacher at the College, Declares That 36 Per Cent. Suffer From That Serious Ailment

Many girls have spinal curvature and are not aware of it.

When a young woman's dressmaker tells her that one of her hips or shoulders is bigger than the other she had better begin to consider seriously the cause of it. The chances are that she has postural spinal curvature.

Corsets may in some cases be an indirect cause to spinal curvature, but it is mainly due to many causes.

These are pointers gleaned from Miss E. A. Wright, the instructor at the Radcliffe gymnasium. In this year's report of the gymnastic work at the college Miss Wright states that thirty-six per cent of the girls showed some degree of spinal curvature.

When asked by an AMERICAN reporter to what she ascribed the large per cent of spinal curvature, Miss Wright said:

"A spinal curvature has many causes. It may come as a result of rickets which the person had as a child. It may be a muscular weakness. It may result from occupation, as a bent position while writing or studying.

"Perhaps it arises from a predisposition toward curvature. In some cases tight clothing or corsets may be an indirect cause, because they tend to weaken muscles by depending upon artificial support.

"Among young women the main cause of a slight degree of spinal curvature is ignorance, I think. It is that more than laziness. They fail to realize the importance of an erect carriage and fall into a habit of dropping the shoulders, which throws the chest in, and form a habit of standing in a one-sided position.

"When a young woman's dressmaker tells her that one side is bigger than the other it is a matter for serious consideration. The chances are that she has a postural spinal curvature.

"There are two kinds of curvature, postural cases and fixed cases.

"As soon as I discover that a girl has postural curvature I give her suspension exercises, which tend to increase the flexibility and strength of the back. A postural curvature may be cured. Very rarely a postural may develop into a fixed curvature. When a girl has fixed spinal curvature, she should at once see a specialist.

"I do not consider that I am an authority on spinal curvature, but I have made a special study of it to some extent. I do not account for the large per cent of spinal curvature among the students by saying it has increased during the past few years. But by studying I am now able to detect it more readily. There are numbers of girls who have a slight degree of spinal curvature who do not know it and whose friends would never see it.

"Corsets should not be worn at all. Yet if a girl insists upon wearing them she should wear them loose.

"If girls would remember to hold the chest high, do a great deal of walking and carry the body evenly and erectly, there would be fewer cases of spinal curvature."

BABY WEIGHS 17¾ POUNNS AT BIRTH

Seattle, Wash., April 15.—A girl baby weighing 17¾ pounds at its birth has been born to the wife of Augustus Steele, who resides in Ballard. Dr. M. I. Adams, who attended the mother, weighed the baby at its birth and verifies the weight.

Seattle physicians were skeptical when the story of the big baby was told them, but the facts were too clearly vouched to allow any doubt to linger long. One after another the most prominent physicians of the city declared that so far as their memory went the Ballard record has not been beaten. One infant weighing sixteen pounds at birth was recalled, but other records fall far below this weight.

ROXBURY GREATLY INTERESTED IN NURSERY FOR BLIND BABIES

HELEN KELLAR AIDS AT THE FIRST RECEPTION.

The first of a series of receptions to be given by prominent benefactors for the benefit of the Boston Nursery for Blind Babies was held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Edwin L. Curtis. The program arranged by the hostess well repaid the large number of her friends who contributed a snug sum to the worthy cause. Miss Helen Kellar showed her devotion to her little unfortunate friends of the home by delivering an eloquent appeal in their behalf. Her subject, "Needs of the Blind Babies," struck a responsive chord in the hearts of her attentive listeners, and as a result the blind babies of the home will enjoy additional comforts during the coming Summer. Dr. Charles A. Fleische spoke on "The Need of a Nursery." The musical program was in charge of William Heinrich, Mrs. Gladys Fogg Benedict and John Orth.

Arrangements are being completed for a similar reception so that the promoters of the charity will be prepared to meet the exigencies of the Summer months. There are already eighteen babies in the care of the nursery, ranging from two months to four years old, and several new applications for admission have been made. The nursery is located at 66 Fort avenue and is open to visitors daily from 10 to 4, Sundays excepted.

Miss May Burke of Burrell street, to whom the Rara Avis Tennis Club owes its inception and success, has outlined plans for this season's tournament at the Franklin Field courts. Scratch tournaments in singles, doubles and mixed doubles and handicap events in classes for young men and young women players will be held.

MISS CHARLOTTE E. CARPENTER

Two Prominent Roxbury Women.

The engagement of Miss Isabelle Clark of Elm Hill to Robert S. Gilford was announced at a reception held at the Clark home last Wednesday evening.

Headmaster Charles M. Clay of the Roxbury High School returned last Monday from a pleasant trip to Palm Beach.

The Women's Council of Roxbury will hold the last meeting of the season on the evening of April 25. Mrs. Edward R. Smith and Mrs. George B. Hugo have been appointed a committee on entertainment and a musicale by the members is to be the feature.

Little Anna Kiley, the popular young actress, whose portrayal of the character of Little Lord Fauntleroy has pleased so many children throughout the city, is in receipt of a number of requests to play the piece again in Roxbury. During the week of May 8th Miss Kiley will play at the Dudley Street Opera House.

The Roxburghe Club held a special meeting last Friday evening. Mrs. Leslie Dale Barber spoke interestingly on the "Use of the Human Voice."

Miss Charlotte E. Carpenter of Roxbury street will on next Tuesday evening repeat the musicale recently given under her direction by her many talented young pupils. Miss Carpenter has studied under the ablest masters of technique in the country, and although she is regarded as one of the youngest teachers of the piano in the city, her ability [illegible] has attracted to her a large number of pupils who are eager to [illegible] of her ability.

The Roxbury League, a philanthropic organization with a large number of enthusiastic supporters in the district, will give a dancing party at Cosmopolitan Hall Tuesday evening, April 25.

Mrs. Joseph L. Doherty and son Redmond are spending a few weeks at Hot Springs, Va. Letters from them tell of an improvement in Mrs. Doherty's health.

The following prominent women of the district are deeply interested in the success of the amateur theatricals of the Ascension Club, to be given at the Dudley Street Opera House on the evening of April 27: Mrs. Knyvet W. Sears, Mrs. Henry Howard Fay, Mrs. Thomas F. Edmands, Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, Mrs. Francis R. Allen, Miss Frances Manning, Miss Elizabeth F. Waters and Miss Elizabeth B. Fay.

The Tuesday Club, a social organization composed of well-known young people of the district noted for their past successes as entertainers, will give a minstrel show at the Dudley Street Opera House on the evenings of May 1 and 2.

Miss Mary White Mullan of Crescent square is to spend the Summer months abroad. Miss Mullan is soprano soloist at the Church of the Assumption, Brookline, and after her return from her studies she intends to enter upon a professional career with a leading promoter of grand opera.

DEDHAM DEPLORES JOSHUA CRANE'S DEFEAT.

Racquet Player Former Resident of the Town—Recital at the Vestry of the Unitarian Church by Talented Pupils

Dedham, April 15.—Much interest in the defeat of Joshua Crane of Westwood by C. E. Sands of New York for the championship of America for amateur racquet players was shown last week by the society of this town, of which Mr. Crane formerly was a resident.

Mr. Crane has held the championship for many years, and was defeated after a very hard and close game. And the [illegible] of the community are sympathizing with Mr. Crane over his defeat.

The talented pupils of Miss Jennie Daniell gave a recital at the vestry of the Unitarian Church last Saturday afternoon. It was one of the most interesting musicales given in this town.

Those from this town who took part were Misses [illegible] Jo [illegible] Katherine Bacon, Esther Clapp; Masters Ben Wor [illegible] Frederick B [illegible] Hogdon and [illegible].

Selections from some of the most popular and well known composers were played.

The receipts from the recital will [illegible] for the benefit for the [illegible] of the First Parish.

[illegible] E. Clapp has purchased a [illegible] Summer cottage at Oyster Bay. The [illegible] is one of the [illegible] in the vicinity and is [illegible] of [illegible].

A very [illegible] recital [illegible] Pianoforte School was given in [illegible] Monday evening before a large [illegible] gathering. The affair was under the auspices of the Dedham Woman's [illegible] in aid of local charities. The program was very select. It consisted of selections from Raff, Rameau, Mi [illegible] Moszkowski, Handel, Reinhold, Raff, Mendelssohn, [illegible]doff, Weber and Liszt.

The participants were Misses An[illegible] Pumphrey, Mary Helen Pumphrey, [illegible] Evelyn, Ruth Lavers, Irma Kin, Bertha [illegible] Winifred [illegible] Dewing; Messrs. Carl [illegible] [illegible] Winfred [illegible] and Carlton.

Rufus [illegible] Fairbanks [illegible] of old Fairbanks [illegible] street, built by Jonathan Fairbanks in 1636, is said to be the oldest dwelling house in the country, will open the old homestead as a museum on May 1. [illegible] will [illegible] relics which adorn its rooms and walls.

Cambridge Young Woman Who Will Take a Prominent Part in the Coming Radcliffe Bazaar.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE TO POUR CANTABRIGIAN TEA

Dean Irwin, of Radcliffe, Will Also Be Prominent in Affair to Raise Money for Radcliffe Scholarship.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the bazar to be held in the gymnasium of Radcliffe by the ladies of the Cantabrigia Club, and society is taking a great interest in the event. All the prominent social leaders are active in the management of the affair, the proceeds of which will be used to establish a scholarship at Radcliffe to be known as the Cantabrigia Scholarship. Three days, April 27, 28 and 29, will be given to the bazaar and it is expected that the necessary amount will be obtained from the sale. The price of the scholarship is $5,000, and of this amount one half has already been raised.

During the progress of the bazaar there will be a number of social affairs in connection with the event, and Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and Dean Irwin of Radcliffe will pour at the afternoon teas each day at the Fay House. President Roosevelt has sent two books with his autograph on the fly leaves to be placed on sale and among other distinguished contributors are Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Dr. Charles J. Royce, Professor Kittredge and Miss Alice Kellar. Mrs. Charles Romney is the chairman of the general committee, with Miss Georgia M. Mustis as secretary and Mrs. Otis S. Brown as treasurer.

The residue of the committees, with those in charge, are as follows: Advertising, Mrs. Edward A. Whittemore; stationery, Mrs. Richard R. Hardin; aprons, stocks and [illegible], Mrs. Mary E. Brown; bags, baskets and boxes, Mrs. Charles H. Morse; [illegible], Mrs. A. L. Barrows; [illegible], Mrs. Minerva S. Stone; cake and candy, Mrs. Walter H. Harding; decorations, Mrs. J. C. Watkins; entertainments, Mrs. W. H. Perry; fancy table, Mrs. W. L. Robertson; flowers, Mrs. John F. [illegible]; handkerchiefs, Mrs. J. P. Bland; lemonade, Miss Laura F. Rodgett; dollar table, Mrs. Ross S. Barnes; Summer outing, Mrs. George S. [illegible]; souvenir program, Mrs. May Alden Ward and Mrs. W. L. Richardson; teas, Mrs. George D. Ford; [illegible], Mrs. [illegible] Kemp.

Ground has been broken for the proposed new building to be used as a gymnasium in connection with the Young Women's Christian Association, and it is expected that the new structure will be ready for occupancy by the first of September. When completed the cost will be about $40,000 and it will be one of the finest equipped places of the kind in the country.

Among those who will attend the national convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Washington next week will be Miss Bessie F. G. Brainard and Mrs. Charles H. Morse of this city. They leave Saturday afternoon and will be gone a week. Miss Brainard, who is one of the prominent younger social leaders, will take an active part in the coming [illegible] and will have charge of the [illegible] of the program and expects while at the national capital to obtain several unique features to be utilized at that fair.

BROOKLINE LOOKS FORWARD TO BLEAKIE-STONE WEDDING

BRILLIANT CEREMONY SCHEDULED FOR EASTER WEEK.

One of the most brilliant events during Easter week will be the wedding of Miss Marion Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stone of the Beaconsfield, to Mr. Robert Bleakie of Washington street. After the ceremony an elaborate breakfast and reception in the Tuileries ball room will be held, for which several hundred invitations have been issued.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Head and daughters Mary and Margaret have returned from their month's stay in Jamaica.

The Boston Floating Hospital will again be benefited by the charity of the Olympian Dramatic Club, which has secured the services of the Criterion Club to present in Whitney Hall Tuesday evening the farce entitled "The Portrait of a Lady." The affair is under the direction of Mr. Walter D. Allen, manager and treasurer of the Olympian Club.

Rev. Dr. Brownson, after a tour abroad, is expected to occupy his pulpit at St. Mark's Church today. Dr. George S. Butters, who has been occupying the pulpit in Dr. Brownson's absence, was tendered a reception last week.

The Brookline Morning Club will meet at the home of Mrs. W. M. Fay, Lincoln street, Thursday, and gentlemen's night will be observed at the home of Mrs. W. H. Cowker, Aspinwall avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Galen Chase opened their hospitable home on Beacon boulevard Monday night for a complimentary concert to Miss Gertrude Amy Kelly. Mr. and Mrs. Chase are preparing to go to their Summer home at Norwich.

Mrs. James Washington Bartlett gave an informal recital at her home, No. 1070 Beacon street, yesterday afternoon, which was well attended. Among the subscribers were Mrs. Henry M. Whitney, Mrs. William Whitman, Mrs. Joseph White, Mrs. Robert Beattie, Mrs. E. F. Atkins, Mrs. E. J. Bliss, Miss Annie L. Richards, Mrs. Benjamin Pitman, Mrs. Daniel Loring, Mrs. R. L. Dennison and Mrs. C. H. Allen.

Miss Ellen Thompson of Waverley street, the prominent lecturer and after-tea speaker, sailed for Europe Wednesday on her annual tour of foreign lands.

The Jefferson Dramatic Club played "A Cigarette From Java" and "London Assurance" to a notable audience in Whitney Hall, Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dana Orcutt will sail for Europe early in May to remain all Summer.

Members of the Country Club are preparing for the horse show to be held on the grounds May 23, 24 and 25. A large number of expert women whips are entered in the [illegible] competition, which will provide some excellent sport.

MRS. CHARLES F. BATTS

Brookline Hostess of Note.

MRS. CHARLES E. GUILD ENTERTAINS AT NEWTON

Congenial, indeed, was the company which assembled at the invitation of Mrs. Charles Edmond Guild of Newton at her beautiful apartments in the Evans on Wednesday afternoon last. The occasion was Mrs. Guild's reception and luncheon to the officers of the New England Women's Press Association.

Covers for twelve were laid in the sumptuous cafe of the Evans and promptly at one the guests sat down. The hostess was charming in white silk, and her garnet jewels harmonized beautifully with the interior decorations of the dining room and the white tulips which adorned the table.

Speeches and in fact everything which would tend to give the affair a formal tone were stringently avoided and good fellowship reigned supreme.

At the reception which preceded the luncheon, Mrs. Guild was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Gosse of Boston and Mrs. Lulu S. Upham of Newton.

Among those present were Mrs. Alice E. Whitaker, Mrs. Ine F. Fox, Mrs. Sallie Joy White, Miss Marion [illegible], Mrs. Henry Paige, Mrs. M. A. D. Bishop, Mrs. Ralph Kirkland, Mrs. Isabella Porter, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Gosse, Mrs. Lulu S. Upham.

Cards are out for the Lord-Dalzell nuptials, which will be held on April 26 at the home of the bride's parents in Hawthorne avenue, Roxbury.

The Watertown Woman's Club has started a [illegible] for [illegible] the [illegible] in the Town Hall [illegible] is [illegible] with many reform movements in Watertown and is composed of the wives and daughters of the old town's leading citizens.

VINCENT CLUB GIRLS ARE REHEARSING DAILY

The Vincent Club girls are rehearsing daily for "Alice in Wonderland, Continued," an operetta in two acts, which they will give April 26, 2:30; April 27, 2:30, and April 28, 8:30, in Jordan Hall.

There are 105 young women in the cast, and to have a glimpse of the rehearsing in Huntington Hall is to be safe in predicting the most brilliant performance ever attempted by this famous club.

The operetta is to be given in aid of the Vincent Memorial Hospital, 41 Chambers street, where homeless wage-earning women and girls are properly cared for when ill. This is the club's pet charity and the members spend a whole [illegible] in preparation and practice for the [illegible] that has made them famous. Gentlemen are never admitted to these performances, yet each year standing room is at a premium and the receipts always gratifying.

The patronesses are Mrs. J. Q. Adams, Mrs. F. L. Ames, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mrs. Bryce Allan, Mrs. William Appleton, Jr., Mrs. Shepherd Brooks, Mrs. Samuel Cabot, Mrs. Henry H. Fay, Mrs. William Fay, Mrs. J. M. [illegible] Mrs. [illegible]

Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere.
On the Eighteenth of April in Seventy-five;
Hardly a man is now alive

XV.

So through the night rode Paul Revere:
And so through the night went his cry of alarm
To every Middlesex village and farm—
A cry of defiance and not of fear—
A voice in the darkness, a knock at the door,
And a word that shall echo forevermore!
For, borne on the night-wind of the Past,
Through all our history, to the last,
In the hour of darkness and peril and need,
The people will waken and listen to hear
The hurrying hoof-beats of that steed,
And the midnight message of Paul Revere.

In historic Concord on next Wednesday, April 19, Patriots' Day will be celebrated with the ringing of bells, the booming of guns, the flashing of arms [illegible]

[illegible] BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN [illegible]

[illegible] was [illegible] a very competent, active and trustworthy man. He was not what might be called a [illegible] character. But he was a patriot [illegible] frequently employed him to carry important dispatches to New York and Philadelphia. He and [illegible] others formed a sort of [illegible] committee to keep their eyes on the movements of the British. Their [illegible] were secret. Dr. Warren was probably the strongest man in the committee.

[illegible] April 18, 1775 [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Longfellow [illegible] some poetic license when after telling about the hero's crossing to Charlestown, he said he waited for the signals in the North Church tower. The poem says:

And lo, as he looks on the belfry's height,
A glimmer, and then a gleam of light!
He springs to the saddle, the bridle he turns,
A second lamp in the belfry burns!

The story of [illegible] as told by Mr. Revere is this:

[illegible] Dr. Warren [illegible] to Lexington to Messrs. Hancock and Adams, who were with Rev. Mr. Clark's. I returned at night through Charlestown. There I agreed with a Colonel [illegible] and some other gentleman that if the British went out by water we would show two lanterns in the North Church steeple, if by land one as a signal, for we were apprehensive it would be difficult to cross the Charles River or get over Boston Neck [illegible] Dr. Warren [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. Revere [illegible] started on his ride [illegible] crossed the river [illegible] to start when [illegible] necessary.

The automobile of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN was made in daylight. When Charlestown square was reached a search was made for the spot that has been designated as the one from which Mr. Revere started. In one of the business houses [illegible] was asked.

"I don't know," said a young woman, "[illegible] supposed to have been from somewhere around here."

"Isn't there a tablet marking the place?" asked the reporter.

"I [illegible]," was the young woman's reply.

Just then a policeman came along. He was [illegible]. The same query was put to him.

"Let's see," he said, as a historical wrinkle appeared in his forehead. "There used to be something of that kind here, but I guess it's been moved."

About a hundred feet from the spot where the reporter was standing, fastened to the store opposite to the Charles River bridge, is a bronze tablet.

From Charlestown the autoists started Concordward.

There are Revolutionary tablets all along the route, but they do not mark Paul Revere's route. They mark the spots [illegible] the retreat. The first thing that [illegible] Mr. Revere [illegible] a few miles this side of Lexington, which reads:

"In Medford," writes Paul Revere, "I awakened the captain of the minute men and after that I alarmed almost every house till I got to Lexington."

Under the stars at night, Paul Revere rode. He stopped at all the houses there were but few comparatively speaking then and told the [illegible] that the [illegible] were coming. In the [illegible] the good people of Middlesex County commotion ensued. Dogs barked, lights gleamed, and great excitement prevailed.

If the task of awakening the people along the route were undertaken to-day it would take much more time than the messenger had at his disposal. It is easy to imagine the stillness of the hour when the rider dashed along. The first breath of Spring was in the air, the moon flooded the rolling, wooded country with a silvery radiance. Trees rose [illegible] and Paul Revere knew not what minute he would fall into the hands of a British patrol. But on he rode, reaching Lexington in safety.

About the first thing that attracts the attention of the tourist now as he approaches Lexington is the stone cannon in front of the Lexington High School. Upon the cannon is a tablet which tells how Earl Percy, who had been hurried out by Gage to help his beaten soldiers, planted a cannon to cover their retreat.

When the reporter and photographer stopped to make an examination of the landmark a score of school children gathered around. They were not from the High School, but the town primary.

"What is that?" the reporter asked, pointing to the cannon.

Half a dozen boys and girls began to explain in a chorus. They knew their history. The explanation of one of the boys is worth reproducing.

"This is the place," the little fellow said, "where the British had their first chance to rest. They had been fighting all day and they sat down here to rest."

When Paul Revere reached Lexington he made for the Clark house, where Adams and Hancock were sleeping. He [illegible] the house expecting that Dawes [illegible] there, but he had [illegible] Miss Dorothy Quincy, to whom Hancock was [illegible] afterward married. Adams and Hancock didn't make any preparation to meet the British, and Revere and Dawes continued on their way to Concord.

On the road they fell in with Dr. Samuel Prescott, who had been calling upon his sweetheart, and they found that he was a good "Son of Liberty." The trio continued toward Concord until they had come to a point about three miles beyond Lexington, when they met some British officers, who captured Revere and Dawes, but Dr. Prescott got away. He spurred on to Concord and was the [illegible] information that Revere and Dawes carried.

[illegible] started back toward Boston with Revere and Dawes [illegible] Finally when they got to Lexington they took Revere's horse and let the two men go. Revere went back to the Clark house to see what was going on, and found that Adams, Hancock and Dorothy Quincy had got ready to make their escape. Revere accompanied them to Woburn.

By this time it was morning and the [illegible] Gage had sent out not to capture Adams and Hancock, as was supposed, but to destroy the stores at Concord, had reached Lexington, where they encountered Captain Parker. On the spot on Lexington Common where the minute men made the first stand in the War of the Revolution is a boulder on which is engraved:

Don't fire unless fired upon
But if they mean to have a war
Let it begin here.

I [illegible] here. In and about this spot are many interesting relics. The first monument of the Revolution erected in America is there. The Hayes memorial fountain, surmounted by a statue of Captain John Parker, is a fine piece of statuary. The old belfry in which hung a bell that was rung to arouse the residents of Lexington after Revere reached there is still standing, but the bell is gone. The home of Jonathan Harrington is in a good state of preservation. It is now owned by Miss [illegible] of Lexington, and is used as a dwelling. Mr. Harrington was shot in the fight on the Common and crawled to his doorstep, where he died, in the presence of his wife.

Probably the most interesting place in Lexington is the Clark-Hancock house. It is now in charge of Mrs. Ellen Lane, a very courteous and well-posted woman. The contents of the house have been often described.

"Have you got any new old relics?" she was asked.

"No," she replied, "only the same things. But they seem to interest people from all over the world. Last year there were over 20,000 people registered here. They come from every State in the Union and every country in the world."

"President Roosevelt ever been here?"

"No, but I hope he will come some time. We had a nice presidential party last year—one of the nicest parties that I ever saw. It was the candidate on the Prohibition ticket, Mr. Swallow. They were very much interested, and I took great pleasure in showing them around."

"Who has been your most distinguished visitor?"

"Well, John D. Rockefeller and Mrs. Rockefeller were here two years ago. They came with a young gentleman who was showing them about. I didn't know who they were at first. I was out in the back yard and somebody said, 'You don't know who is inside.' I said I didn't and I was told it was Mr. Rockefeller.

"I went in and looked at the register and found out that it was Mr. Rockefeller. I showed Mrs. Rockefeller around and she and her husband both seemed to take the greatest interest in everything. I talked with Mrs. Rockefeller a great deal, but did not say much to her husband. She was a very common sense-like, pleasant woman. They put something in the contribution box, of course, but I do not know how much."

Through the rooms in which the Rev. John Hancock once lived, grandfather of the one to whom Paul Revere went to warn, rooms that are 200 years old, the reporter walked to a great safe. The doors were thrown open and Mrs. Lane pointed to the drum that was used in the battle of Lexington. It is in excellent state of preservation, with the exception that one of the heads is burst.

"There is one of the original stamps that made the first trouble," said Mrs. Lane, pointing to a blue square about an inch and a half on each side. "Of the 20,000 people here last year only one of them had ever seen one of those stamps before. You see, they were nearly all destroyed by the indignant colonists."

While Concord is full of historic interest, the centre of everything there is the Old North bridge. It was there the British were repulsed and from which spot they retreated all the way to Boston. On the side the minute men stood is a monument upon which is inscribed:

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood,

On the other side of the "rude bridge," which creaked reproachfully when the heavy automobile passed over it, stands a monument [illegible] to mark the spot where the British soldiers fell. Their graves are near by.

One of the leading citizens of the quiet town of Concord is John Keyes, who keeps a sporting goods store. He is bluff, but good natured. He is one of those in charge of Wednesday's celebration.

"We propose," said Mr. Keyes, "to have a big time here next Wednesday from sun-up until we get through dancing in the little hours of the morning. This place is the mecca for tourists. Why, they keep three livery stables going the year around."

In writing to Governor Trumbull, General Gage began his account of the Lexington and Concord fight with these words:

"I transmit you herewith a circumstantial account of an unhappy affair that happened in this province."

Then follows his account of how he got whipped. It was under date of April 29. He probably had no idea of how that "unhappy" affair would end.

WHAT IS THE FUNNIEST THING YOUR BABY EVER SAID?

MRS. T. A. KELLEY, No. 150 Broadway, Everett.
RUTH GUSTAT, Methodist Building, Waltham.
MRS. T. F. GREEN, No. 18 Lincoln street, Newton Highlands.
MRS. M. T. HARVEY, No. 20 Temple street, Boston.
C. F. HENNESSEY, No. 25 Waldeck street, Dorchester.
MRS. S. D. FISHER, No. 950 North Main street, Fall River.

THE Bright Sayings Contest continues to hold the centre of the stage. There hasn't been a contest started by any newspaper which ever came anywhere near holding the popular interest of Greater Boston as have these illustrations of childish wit.

You don't believe it? Then, doubting reader, you are neither a father nor a mother.

If you want proof that these baby sayings have taken New England by storm, cast your eyes about you when you are in a crowded street car or a steam train, or on the elevated.

Naturally you will find nearly everybody reading the BOSTON AMERICAN. That is a habit which has been acquired in the last year by a large majority of New England people.

But just see what part of the paper they are reading. If you don't find enough of them with that page turned and with smiles chasing one another in rapid succession as they read the cute things that the bright little ones of New England have said sometime or other, go down to the post-office and ask the busy clerks there how many letters are arriving for the "Bright Sayings Editor" every day.

It is a straight out and out fact that New England fathers and mothers have never found anything which interested them more than this little contest. The "Bright Sayings Editor" is compelled to admit it.

Were it not for the fact that such a [illegible] competent and a somewhat remarkable board of judges had been induced to pick out the brightest of these bright sayings, the task would have been almost [illegible]. This board of judges has been interested in the contest from the start. They, too, admit that it is not an easy thing to decide the winners.

The judges are:

HON. WILLIAM M. OLIN, Secretary of State.

HEZEKIAH BUTTERWORTH, the author.

MRS. JULIA E. DUFF, member of the Boston School Committee.

The contest is still on. There would arise a terrible wail of disapproval if it were closed now. It must go on. There is no hope for it. The "Bright Sayings Editor" gives in with the hope in his heart that his sacrifice will cause a good word to be said for him some time somewhere when he needs it.

Let the bright sayings come on. Let them keep coming. Not all can win a prize. [illegible] BOSTON AMERICAN [illegible] it would take several daily papers to print them.

Perhaps your baby may have said something once upon a time which is treasured up in your memory. It may be that the judges will consider that saying worthy of one of the prizes. Send it in to the "Bright Sayings Editor" anyway.

Make them as brief as possible. Try to keep the letters at a hundred words. Write only on one side of the paper.

Each day the prizes of six photographs are awarded. The photos are larger than cabinet size and you have a long list of leading studios to select from. [illegible] are printed each Sunday. Those who have received the prizes are said to be so well pleased that baby has a constant attendant now to take down what he says day by day.

Right here the "Bright Sayings Editor" desires to make public one of the letters which came to him during the week. It did him good to get it. The letter follows:

"Bright Sayings Editor":

I write to extend my sincere thanks in behalf of my bonnie Charles to the editor and committee of award for having been the first winner in the unique and pleasing contest now going on in your progressive paper. I also desire to thank the editor for his promptness in awarding the generous prize. In the words of the immortal Rip Van Winkle, "Here's to your health and your family's, may you live long and prosper."

Wishing the BOSTON AMERICAN success in every way, I am faithfully yours,

Address your letters to "Bright Sayings Editor," BOSTON AMERICAN, [illegible] Summer street, Boston. Contributors must send in name and address, with full name and age of the child whose saying is recorded.

REVENGE IS SWEET

Last week my little three-year-old boy, Harlam, was playing with his blocks, and as it was about supper time I told him to pick them up and be quick. He picked them up, but not willingly, and turning to me with a scowl said:

"When I grow up and you grow down I will make you work like the old Harry."

A Lesson in Manners

Last Summer a neighbor gave my two-year-old brother an orange. Not receiving any thanks, the gentleman said:

"What do you say for it?"

WAS REHEARSING

My little daughter, Canzadia M. Cook, aged six, just started to attend school this last term.

The other day she came home and went directly to her room. I thought she was very quiet, so I crept softly up to the door and looked in. She was standing before her mirror making all sorts of grimaces.

"Why, Canzadia," said I, "why are you making up those faces?" She said:

"Well, mamma, Ethel told me Rachel was going to give me a pencil for my birthday to-morrow, and I am trying so that I can look surprised."

CAKES WERE TOUGH

When my little boy, Herbert, was three and a half years old I said to him:

"What would you do if mamma died?"

He said: "Get another one [illegible] them down at [illegible]"

At the age of four, we were out to dinner and had griddle cakes. He was eating one, they passed them to his papa. He looked up and said:

ONE TOO MANY

One day, while calling with my two-year-old little boy, Berkeley, we went to a place where they brought in a little baby girl. No remarks were made about that. He seemed to think [illegible]

The next [illegible] creeping in, and behind her came another. My baby looked up in their mother's face and said:

"Wot's the two for?"

NOT IN LUCK, IN CAR

While traveling [illegible] boy, Albert Edward Dauphinee, aged twenty-three months, he was quite generously treated to apples [illegible] us, and his papa said to him:

"Well, you're in luck."

Looking innocently into his papa's face, he replied:

"No, papa, I'm [illegible]"

"LOOKING FOR WIFE"

I was showing my little grandson, two years old, the pictures in the album. Showing him one of the photos, I said:

"That is grandpa and grandma when they got married."

Later a friend came in, and he said:

"Show the lady my grandpa when he was looking for a wife."

"PEAS, DOD, DON'T STOLD"

Once, while I was visiting a friend, a thunder storm being under way, she called her little girl, Ethel Laronde, to come in before the shower. Ethel answered:

"Yes, mamma, in a minute."

She was out playing with her doll under a large tree. Suddenly a heavy roll of thunder startled us, and we looked out to see her running towards the house crying:

"[illegible] Dod, don't stold, [illegible] fasts I can."

MASTER CROPSEY'S SAYING

My bonnie lad, [illegible] years old, and I were waiting for a car. A lady came along with a tiny baby. Charles said:

"Please, Mrs. [illegible] pay for the baby?"

"Five cents, my little man."

"Ump, why didn't you give five cents more and get a bigger one?"

"T" WAS COFFEE

My little girl, Mary, three years old, was learning the alphabet and was able to remember all but the letter "T." She looked at it for some time in a puzzled way, then said, in a tone of disgust:

"What's that—coffee?"

MADE RHYMES

Florence had been reading Mother Goose nursery rhymes. She seemed to [illegible] think [illegible] when she said:

"Mamma, isn't this as good as some in Mother Goose?

'Little brown bears eating cakes,
Sat in a basketful of snakes.'"

Chrissy was three when grandma died. When I picked the hops the following year she came to me and said:

"Grandma and I picked those last year, we did."

This shows she must have had a remarkable memory, as she was only two when grandma [illegible] and she picked them.

HANDS NOT SO BIG

My little boy, Elmer, three years old, is very [illegible] excuses. When I am very busy and want him to do anything he always thinks of some excuse. One day I told him several times to pick up his playthings, which were scattered all over the floor. He did not do it. Finally I said:

"Why don't you pick up your playthings? You are just as able to as mamma."

He said:

"'Cause my hands ain't as big as yours."

MIXED HIS LETTERS

My little nephew, Raymond, at the age of two years, sadly misplaced d's and g's in some words.

While sitting on the lawn one day, he suddenly cried out:

"Oh, arnie! See god!" (meaning dog).

"Yes," I said, "That's a pug dog."

"Pud god! pud god!" he exclaimed, "god chase a kitty up de tee."

SCARLET LIES

By X and Z, Authors of "Married to Mystery"

CHAPTER XL.—Continued

"JOAN!" [illegible] he stared hardly at the woman. "Joan," he murmured, "you've changed and yet—and yet you are just the same. I should have known you anywhere."

"I should have known you anywhere, Karl," she said simply, "though I haven't seen you since——"

"Seventy-nine," said the man. "And yet it seems, now that I see you again, but yesterday."

"More than twenty years," said Mrs. Lang reminiscently. "How many things have happened since then!"

"Very little but ill has happened to me," said Karl Karoff moodily.

"And little but sorrow to me," said Mrs. Lang. "But tell me, and we must not waste time, how is it that you came here? I thought you were dead. I thought you must be dead."

"I have been dead—in a way," he answered, and a strange sinister gleam lighted his handsome eyes. "I have but recently come from a living tomb."

"A living tomb?" She looked puzzled.

"Prison," he said laconically.

"You have been in prison? [illegible] was the [illegible]"

"Yes. He gave me twenty years in 1885. They let me out, however, just over three months ago."

"Three months ago!" she repeated, in a dazed voice. "Why, Judge Holland has been dead just over three months."

"Yes." The man's smile was very grim and very terrible.

"How could he send you to prison?" asked Mrs. Lang ingenuously.

"Because I was fool enough to be found out in a rather pretty little scheme not strictly conducted in accordance with your modern code of ethics, and a jury of your [illegible] respectable fellow countrymen found me unconditionally guilty. Judge Holland, therefore, saw fit to inflict the extreme penalty. Another judge might have satisfied the demands of justice with a sentence of, say, seven or, at most, ten years. Judge Holland saw fit to pronounce a monstrously severe sentence of twenty."

"Twenty years' penal servitude!" exclaimed Mrs. Lang.

"Yes, a lifetime."

"Then that means that you have escaped?"

"No—out under suspended sentence."

"I see," she said vaguely. "But tell me why you are here. Oh, I don't understand. You look so strange, you behave so strangely."

"Do I?" He laughed rather discordantly. "But I want to know what you are doing here. Why aren't you at Holland Holme? 'Mrs. Lang,' forsooth! What madness is this, you who are by every right Mrs. Holland?"

"I forfeited that right long ago," she said, in low, agitated tones. "I beg of you to be careful. Do not let any one ever hear you say a thing like that. If George should ever hear."

"George? Who is George?"

"Your son." "Then who, pray, is the man who calls himself Stephen Holland, who is masquerading in the dead man's place at Holland Holme?"

Mrs. Lang [illegible] her lips. She had already been incredibly unwise to discuss anything at all with this man, who had gone out of her life at the same time and just as completely as had the late Judge Holland.

"What I have done has nothing to do with any one else on earth," said Mrs. Lang. "It is my own business."

"That depends on circumstances," said the man sneeringly, and there was an evil glitter in his handsome eyes. "You can't play a game like that when it concerns other people, my lady. I wonder what your son would say if he knew that a usurper was taking his rightful place and rank and wealth—eh? You may have some wildly quixotic motives of your own which lead you to live this sort of life, a beggarly existence, not even a dog's life; but what would Mr. George say, I should like to know?"

"Stop!" pleaded the woman faintly. "I beg of you not to concern yourself in the matter. It has nothing whatever to do with you. I have my own reasons."

"Nonsense! You must be mad. Tell me, does the redoubtable Lion King know that if he liked, instead of playing the buffoon with his mangy African lions and living this wretched gipsy, mountebank life, he could take his place among the very highest in the land, be an immensely rich man, live at Holland Holme, marry any woman he chose from all the galaxy of beautiful and rich women in the world, have a Boston mansion, yachts, motor cars—she's [illegible] great man of the world! [illegible] he [illegible] know this?"

"Of course [illegible]," said Mrs. Lang. "George [illegible]"

"And consequently believes that this impostor who calls himself Stephen Holland is the real Stephen Holland, son of the [illegible]?"

"Yes."

"And you think that you are going to keep [illegible] all your life?"

"[illegible]," said Mrs. Lang [illegible].

"Oh, not so quickly, my lady! Are you sure?"

"Quite," said Mrs. Lang.

Karl Karoff laughed deep down within himself.

"Why are you so sure?"

"Judge Holland was like iron," she said. "He would [illegible]."

"[illegible] the so-called Stephen Holland who is at this moment living at Holland Holme really believes himself to be the rightful heir?"

"I am sure of it."

"Why? Have you ever met him?"

She nodded.

"Yes, I have met him," she answered.

The man appeared exceedingly surprised.

"When was this?" he asked eagerly. "How? Where?"

"He came to the circus once," she answered.

"And has George met him?"

She nodded again.

"He was very good to George," she said, in a strange, faraway voice.

"My word!" exclaimed the man, "what a position! Who is this fellow, anyhow? [illegible]"

"That," she said, "[illegible] business of mine or yours. I chose a definite course, and I am not likely to go back on that course after more than twenty years have elapsed."

CHAPTER XL.

A Forced Bargain.

KARL KAROFF eyed her curiously, and said nothing for a few moments. The woman puzzled him. He did not know what to make of her. She had grown curiously calm and self-possessed, and the man experienced a very definite sense of inferiority in dealing with her. She was so cold and so determined. She was a woman who long ago had chosen a path, and had never once looked back. Nothing could make her look back even now.

"I am looking forward," said Karl Karoff, breaking in upon the silence which had fallen between them, "to making the acquaintance of your son, Stephen Holland."

The woman started and gave a quick, terrified glance around.

"Hush!" she whispered. "You must never say that! Are you mad? Why have you come back out of the dead to torture me like this? Have I ever done you any wrong?"

"You never gave me your love," said the man moodily.

"That was not my fault," answered the woman. "I never had any love to give you. You know that. I have never given you the slightest cause to doubt it—never!"

"That doesn't make it any the easier for me, though," he retorted angrily.

"Oh, surely it is not a time to talk of love now!" she exclaimed bitterly. "I am an old woman, and life for me has long been over."

"Life for me," cried the man enthusiastically, "is only just beginning. I have been through hell, and now I see heaven before me." There was the look of something very near akin to insanity in his handsome eyes.

The woman shivered. She was growing alarmed, and her eyes constantly sought the clock on the mantelpiece. Any moment now George might come in. What then?

With a giant effort at self control she pulled herself together.

"Tell me," she said, almost peremptorily, "what are you doing here? Did you come here especially to see me, and rake up all that horrible past?"

Karl Karoff shrugged his shoulders.

"I assure you, dear lady," he said, "that until I saw you on the landing a few minutes ago, I thought both you and your son were dead. Otherwise, how could things be as they are?"

"Then what brought you here?"

Again he shrugged his shoulders. It was altogether a foreign gesture. Indeed, as he grew more excited, his speech and his manner generally became less English. He dropped instinctively into French—French expressions, French expletives.

"Fate, my dear Joan," he said—"fate, and nothing else. Do you know that I am in very considerable danger?"

"Danger of what?" she asked anxiously.

"Of arrest [illegible]"

"Arrest! Again!"

"Yes. I have been a bigger fool than ever; but this time I am not going to be so easily caught."

Mrs. Lang bent forward [illegible].

"Tell me," she whispered, "what does it all mean? You said you had been discharged from [illegible] prison."

"So I have, but—"

"But what? Oh, quick! Tell me everything. We cannot stay talking here any longer. We have been over half an hour. George may return at any moment, and——"

"All right," interrupted the man. "I'll be off in a few moments. We must meet again, however, and soon. And you must help me. You can, and, mon Dieu, you shall! You owe it to me."

"I don't understand," she answered dully. "What does it all mean?"

"Never mind the details," said the man hurriedly. "They can wait. The present position, however, is that the police are looking for me."

"Why?"

"Never mind why. Let it be sufficient for you to know that I'd sooner blow out my brains than that they should get me."

"Karl! What can you mean?"

"And," the man went on, unheeding the woman's interruption, "you've just turned up in the nick of time. So far, I believe, everything is all right. I've got a job here with Felix Revelle. I'm supposed to be Jones—Jones, remember, and I'm playing first violin in his infernal band. Mon Dieu! what an orchestra!"

"You—you are playing in Revelle's band?" gasped Mrs. Lang, for Mrs. Lang knew [illegible] Karl Karoff could drive men mad with his consummate playing of the violin. Evil genius though the man was, curse of her life and of many another life, Karl Karoff had a voice of gold and the power to draw all the music of heaven from four strings. And Karl Karoff was playing first violin at Revelle's Circus!

The man laughed brutally.

"So even you see the incongruity of the thing—eh? Karl Karoff, who has sung Faust, who has enchanted men and women with his magic fiddle, is reduced to scraping out vulgar rag time melodies and tuneless comic songs at a second-rate circus. Pshaw! But Karl Karoff has done worse than that. When a man has descended to the lowest depths, there is nothing he fears—save, perchance, a second descent. Yes, chere Yvonne, it is almost incongruous as Stephen Holland posing as the Lion King, n'est ce pas? However, such is indeed the sad case. It is essential for the complete working of a little scheme I have on at the present that I reside, unmolested by your sleuth-hounds of police, and unsuspected by my neighbors, in this city of Mapella. You understand? You can help me."

"By knowing me—by acknowledging me."

"How?"

"As Mr. Jones, by identifying me as such if ever the occasion should demand. You clearly understand what I mean?" There was no mistaking the implied threat in his voice and manner.

"Tell me," said Mrs. Lang, "what this scheme is to which you refer."

But Karl Karoff shook his head.

"'Tis a small thing of no account," he said. "Do not trouble."

"But," protested the woman, "I must know where I stand. Small though it is, I—we, George and I—have a position to maintain. We may be poor, and very much down on our luck, but there isn't a soul who can say a word against either of us. George has his career, and——"

"Oh, you need have no fear that I am going to ruin George's career. All you've got to do is to help me. There's no question about it. I'm a man of few words. Come, I'll begin now, as I see you are getting nervous, and I assure you I'm not anxious to be found here unless you are in a fit state of mind to explain my presence. First tell me, however, when and where I can see you again."

Mrs. Lang shook her head.

"How can I say? You must see the difficulties. What am I to do?"

"Take an early opportunity of introducing me to the redoubtable George," he replied grimly. "A woman can always find a way."

"But I am an old woman now," answered Mrs. Lang pathetically, "and I am not able to play these double games now."

"It is perfectly simple," he said incisively.

"It is very hard. And suppose," she exclaimed suddenly, as she threw back her head and faced him defiantly—"suppose I refuse? Suppose I decline to recognize you, to have anything to do with you?"

"What!" hissed the man, advancing a couple of paces toward her, his look, voice, and manner suddenly assuming an unmistakably threatening attitude. There was a sinister gleam in his eye.

She faced him unflinchingly.

"Yes, suppose I refuse?" she said, in quiet, masterful tones. "You are nothing to me. You never were anything to me. [illegible] forced yourself into my life and [illegible] dead to me. I am not the woman you knew. I am changed. I am living another life, under another name and personality. I will not [illegible] the past. Stephen Holland is nothing to me. You are nothing to me."

"And yet," sneered the man, "you are Joan Marie [illegible] Mrs. Holland and [illegible] George is Stephen Holland!"

"Well?" She eyed him half fearfully, half defiantly.

"Do you suppose that that is not knowledge worth possessing?"

"It can do you no good."

"You shall see."

"What do you mean?" she asked [illegible].

"[illegible] strike a bargain. I am in need of help. So are you, if you [illegible] realize it."

"I am in no need of [illegible] from you at all events, Mrs. Lang [illegible]."

The [illegible]

"You forget [illegible] I have it in my power [illegible]"

"What do you mean?"

"You prefer to pose as not understanding my meaning. If you like, I will speak plainly. There is no time to be lost. In short, I know everything."

Mrs. Lang winced ever so slightly. The slight involuntary movement and the momentary look of terror that he saw flash across her face did not escape the man. But Mrs. Lang's nerves were braced. She was never a weak woman, and she was never stronger than at the present moment.

"Well, [illegible] you [illegible] that there is quiet a variety of courses open to me. I might, for instance, see the redoubtable George, and convey to him certain information concerning his mother and his parentage, and——"

"No, no!" The woman had grown very white; her self-control was rapidly leaving her. "No, I won't [illegible] you that. You come here to [illegible] my life. What have I ever done to you, that you [illegible]

[illegible] but let me go knowing that I leave you my friend. Do you consent?"

"I must."

[illegible] The man laughed quite cheerily and held out his hand, but she refused to take it.

"Go now," she said. "Go—and if ever you speak of that [illegible] again—if ever [illegible]" she went on, "[illegible] dared to breathe a word to George, I—I—yes, I [illegible] I would kill you!"

"[illegible]," he laughed, as he opened the door. "Au revoir, Mrs. Lang! Remember," he added, in a whisper, "my name is Jones, and I am an old friend of yours. Au revoir."

The door closed. She was alone—alone with a teeming pandemonium of thoughts and fears.

Every day medical science becomes more simple—and more certain. Simplicity and certainty go hand in hand. For science has learned that while there are many diseases, yet there are but few real causes of disease. That is, there are many names by which we know aches and pains and disorders. But most of these ailments spring from a common cause.

For instance, indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles—diabetes, Bright's disease and other kidney disorders—heart troubles, liver troubles, bowel troubles, nervousness, fretfulness, sleeplessness, irritability—all of these ailments are due to a single cause. Painful, disagreeable and dangerous, though they be, they are not separate diseases—and they are not to be treated as such. They are merely outward signs of inward trouble—nerve trouble.

Understand first that we have two entirely separate nerve systems. When we walk, or talk, or act, we call into play a certain set of nerves—nerves which obey our mental commands. That is why the arm can be raised, or the mouth opened, or the eye shut, at the slightest desire. That is why your fingers can delicately pick up a pin one moment, and hold a heavy hammer the next.

But these are not the nerves we are to consider here.

There is another set of nerves which manages and governs and actuates the heart and the stomach, the kidneys and the liver and all of the vital functions. You cannot control these nerves. By no supreme effort of mind can you make your heart stop or start—nor can you even make it vary by a single beat a minute. And so with the stomach and the liver and the kidneys and the bowels—they are automatic—they do their work at a certain set speed whether you are awake or asleep—whether you want them to or not.

It is on these inside nerves that life and health depends. So long as these nerves perform their proper duties, we are well and strong. When they fail, we know it by the inevitable symptoms—stomach, heart, liver, kidney troubles. And these troubles have no other origin, ever, than in these same nerves. For the stomach, the heart, the liver, the kidneys, have no power of their own, no self control. They owe their every impulse to the inside nerves. The nerves are the masters. The organs their slaves.

These automatic nerves are sometimes called the "sympathetic" nerves. This name is given them because of the close bond of sympathy which exists between all branches. This explains why stomach trouble often develops into heart trouble—why indigestion brings on nervousness—why diseases become complicated. It explains, too, why ordinary medical treatments are wrong—why medicine so frequently fails.

For, despite the discoveries of science, the common remedies of the day are designed to treat the organ, not the nerve—the symptom instead of the cause.

My Free Dollar Offer

Any sick one who has not tried my remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—may have a Full Dollar's Worth Free. I ask no deposit, no reference, no security. There is nothing to pay, either now or later. I will send you an order on your druggist which he will accept in full payment for a regular, standard size Dollar bottle. And he will send the bill to me.
C. I. Shoop, M. D.

Don't you, though you may not know medicine at all, see that this is wrong? That it is mere patchwork? That while the suffering organ is enjoying its temporary relief, the nerve that is really sick may be getting worse and worse? Does this not explain to you why relapse so frequently follows a supposed cure? Does this not account for the uncertainties of medicine?

More than thirty years ago this thought came to me.

"If life and health depend upon perfect heart action, upon proper stomach digestion, upon correct kidney filtering, why does not life itself depend upon these life governing power nerves—these inside nerves?"

I [illegible] that all ailments which result from one cause may, of course, be cured by one remedy. I resolved not to doctor the organs, but to treat the one nerve system which operates them all.

For those who treat only the symptoms need a different remedy for each. Such treatments are only palliative; the results do not last. A cure can never come in disease of the stomach, heart, liver or kidneys, until the inside nerve power is restored. When that is done, Nature removes the symptoms. There is no need of doctoring them.

My remedy—now known by Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is the result of a quarter century of endeavor along this very line. It does not dose the organ or deaden the pain—but it does go at once to the nerve—the inside nerve—the power nerve—and builds it up, and strengthens it and makes it well.

There is no mystery—no miracle. I can explain my treatment to you as easily as I can tell you why cold freezes water and why heat melts ice. Nor do I claim a discovery. For every detail of my treatment is based on truths so fundamental that none can deny them. And every ingredient of my medicine is as old as the hills it grows on. I simply applied the truths and combined the ingredients into a remedy that is practically certain.

In more than a million homes my remedy is now known, and relied upon. Yet you may not have heard of it. So I make this offer to you, a stranger, that every possible excuse for doubt may be removed. Send no money—make no promise—take no risk. Simply write and ask. If you have never tried my remedy, I will send you an order on your druggist for a full dollar bottle—not a sample, but the regular standard bottle he keeps constantly on his shelves. The druggist will require no conditions. He will accept my order as cheerfully as though your dollar lay before him. He will send the bill to me.

Will you accept this opportunity to learn at my expense absolutely how to be rid forever of all forms of nervousness—to be rid not only of the trouble, but of the very cause which produced it? Write to-day.

For a free order for a full dollar bottle you must address Dr. Shoop, Box 1808, Racine, Wis. State which book you want.
Book 1 on Dyspepsia.
Book 2 on the Heart.
Book 3 on the Kidneys.
Book 4 for Women.
Book 5 for Men.
Book 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases are often cured by a single bottle. For sale at forty thousand drug stores.

"Starvation and Tears in Religion"

WEEKLY SERMON FOR AMERICAN READERS

By the Rev. Howard N. Brown, Minister of King's Chapel

When we begin to understand the life of the past, which has poured out such enormous streams of wealth to enrich and embellish the altars of religion and has endured every kind of martyrdom for the sake of its faith, unless we can appreciate what an inestimable benefit it has been to the human soul to feel itself made safe within the keeping of Almighty power; so sheltered and befriended by an unseen presence that it could lie down and rise up in peace, as under the protection of a guardian who neither slumbers nor sleeps.

No doubt the life of earlier days has been much more the victim of superstitious fears than any mind with which we are now acquainted or in whose place we can easily imagine ourselves to be. It is not so very long ago that the shadow of an eclipse spread fearful terror upon the earth wherever it fell. A traveler across Western plains when he was far out of touch with newspapers and almanacs tells us of the dread that seized upon his soul as the day suddenly began to darken about him. He did not at first suspect the true source of this gloom but thought instead of some fearful storm that might be close at hand till a glance at the sun showed him what was really taking place. Think if this man had lived a few centuries ago, what nameless horror, instead of relief from anxiety, would have been added to his already half terror-stricken mood when his sunward glance revealed a dense shadow drawn across the face of that great source of light and light. The world of those days, as it was more ignorant than our world at the present time, doubtless suffered more from those fears which much torment the soul in a season of darkness and uncertainty.

It may also be said that some very strong and even ridiculous theories have been devised as to the means that might be hopefully employed to purchase safety against all these terrors of the night, and that many grotesque religious customs have been solemnly observed for centuries. How did it ever come about that a people of considerable intelligence and cultivation, like the early Hebrews, and who possessed prophets capable of speaking to them out of the really deep things of human life, developed a ritual of worship of which the burning of flesh in sacrificial fires made a prominent and essential part? By what process of perverted reasoning did they ever arrive at the notion that God cared for the fumes of that barbaric incense, and that being pleased and satisfied with these kitchen odors ascending to heaven, He would see to it that they were duly protected from their enemies?

For a long period, in Christian history, the prevailing theory of religion seems to have been modelled upon a crude literal interpretation of the saying, "Humble yourself in the sight of God and He will lift you up." The popular idea was that by being sufficiently abject, by moaning and weeping loud enough, the pity of God would be stirred so that He would be moved to do something for the soul's relief. Religion was fitted through and through with those artifices which the stage employs for emotional effect, only they were addressed not to the heart of a human audience, but to the sources of feeling in the mind of God. Again we may exclaim, how could people with any degree of intelligence whatever entertain such thoughts of divine wisdom and power? How did they manage to escape the conviction that God at every moment, was looking through their shallow devices and transparent masks, and knew exactly to what extent they were playing a part they did not wholly feel?

It is easy to turn a large part of the religion of the past into ridicule and laugh it out of court as the foolish vagary of a weak intellect inspired by the mere panic of the heart. Even if we begin to inquire closely what our fellow mortals believe at this present day, we shall find some cause to query whether a large part of the world is utterly destitute of common sense or ought to be adjudged permanently insane.

And yet this way of looking at the matter is about as superficial as anyone could possibly adopt. As I said in the beginning, we cannot possibly understand it in the least till we see by what inward compulsion man is driven, in all ages, to seek for safety from the perils that beset his way; how much more it has been to him, sometimes, even than food and drink, to be able to assure himself that One mightier than he would shield him from evil and direct his trembling steps.

To this it may be added that you and I are simply living in a fool's paradise if we think we have risen far above that inward necessity which made of the primitive savage, perforce, a religious being. No matter for the contrivances men have adopted to placate divine wrath and purchase heavenly favor. The point is this, that in all generations which have left of themselves any intelligible record, there have been some, at least, who have crept close enough to God to hear His whisper amid the darkness, "I am here! Reach out thine hand and I will hold thee up." They who have received this assurance could not, had they tried, have hidden the joy of it from their fellows; and their report was enough to keep the whole world busy, by such means as it could command, seeking the same source of rest and peace. More than this, one comes to feel that, to greater extent than we can measure, the common heart, however absurd its practices and theories, has also heard that same divine voice, saying: "Be not afraid, for I am with thee; and whithersoever thou goest there shall be a path to lead thee on."

And if that be true then none of us can afford to despise the religion of the most ignorant, trusting heart. Indeed, had we no better hope, we might well pray to be delivered from all our wisdom, in order that we might return to those same foolish theories, and try with believing minds to hear in them, or through them, what others have heard, to their unspeakable comfort and relief. For however we may make believe, during a little season, that there is nothing in the world about us to overawe and overwhelm our spirits; that evil is a delusion, since God's law and order are everywhere supreme, we cannot long shut away from our sight that titanic battle of the elements whose roar is in our ears, and which may well affright the stoutest heart.

We are apt to make rather too much of the gradual disappearance from the world's imagination of that race of evil spirits which aforetime tortured the human mind with feelings of apprehension and dread. That was, in truth, a very immoral universe, notwithstanding the presence of God above it all, which men beheld, when they peopled the common air with hobgoblins and devils, seeking to do them injury. But the immoral universe, the world discharged of all traits of goodness and beneficence which men of later days have widely believed in, is on the whole a more terrible thing to contemplate, and lies upon the spirit of mankind a more oppressive weight. One can manage to circumvent an evil spirit, or even to pick his way through whole legions of devils, as escaping prisoners sometimes elude the lines of an army through which they must pass. But that escape is there from an unyielding, soulless mechanism of fate, which, utterly regardless of human loves and hopes, pushes its glaciers of destiny over cultivated fields and happy homes!

Or, to change the figure of speech, imagine that we are trying to cross one of those tracts where volcanic fires come close to the earth's surface; where fountains of boiling water scatter themselves in scalding spray, and many a promising foothold is no more than the thin covering of a frightful pitfall, beneath which superheated caverns lurk to engulf the unwary tread! The man of former ages would have crossed this region casting his offerings into this or that steaming caldron, to propitiate the demon residing there; making humble obeisance at every turn to one or another spirit of the air, that he might be allowed to pass in safety. Now we have learned, much to our satisfaction, that there is no demon there, or anywhere, to be placated or cajoled by our sacrifices. This makes some difference, but how much, after all, have we gained by that knowledge?

Is the volcano any the less destructive and awful because we no longer think that angry gods send forth its rivers of fire and its breath that slays thousands by a single stroke? Is the geyser any the less dangerous, or the poisoned spring any the less fatal, when we have put natural law in place of malicious deities, as the source of these perils to be sometimes encountered? Nay, but if our science, in sweeping heaven and earth clear of that race of evil spirits, also banishes from human thought and imagination every kind of spiritual helper and friend who ministers good to the heart of man then the total result is irreparable and immeasurable loss to everything that is finest and best in the life of the world. "The mills of the gods grind slowly, and they grind exceeding small." This we can endure, so long as the gods are there to see that in the end justice and right are done to all. But take away the gods, leave us nothing but the grinding mill, and we are the most bereft of all generations that ever possessed the earth.

We have as great need as any who have lived before us to seek and find protection from the elements so much stronger than we; to pray for guidance among the perils which scatter awful wrecks of humanity along our way. If human nature knew how to interpret the hunger and restlessness forever gnawing at its heart; the craving which drives it from one sensation to another and permits it no rest save as its senses are steeped and drugged with some strong excitement; the fever burning in its bones and consuming its vital powers in every kind of vain ambition—if it knew it would be saying, with the Psalmist of old time: "My heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God."

That is still the supreme need of man everywhere—to find rest and peace in the sense that 'beneath are the everlasting arms,' and that all the great treasures of life are safe in the keeping of a strong eternal love. All our education and enlightenment, all our reforms and inventions, are sure to be found in the end practically idle and useless without faith. Nothing can make our life other than a fitful flame which soon dies down into mere cinders and ashes, unless we keep near enough to God to receive into our hearts the warmth and strength of his life-giving spirit. And therefore mankind has no other teacher and guide to equal Him who so lived in the Divine Presence that he could say, "My Father and I are one." Whatever may be our thought concerning His nature, and the manner of His coming into the world, the heart of His Gospel consists in its assurance of the rule of infinite goodness on that throne of the universe, where sit also wisdom and power. The one reason for believing in Him is that one may believe also in that divine love whose agent and messenger He claimed to be.

Come, learn of him! He is not our only teacher, but He is the wisest, the noblest and the best. And that is the most helpful religion of our time, which sits most humbly and directly at His feet, to receive from Him the words of eternal life. Time has little to do with the life of the spirit. His presence among His disciples is still almost as real a fact as when He walked the hills of Galilee. Now, as then, to live with Him is to find one's self more and more in the presence of a spiritual world, where angel faces look down upon us out of the quiet heavens, and where God dwells among His people as their Father and their friend.

Would you not like to be at rest in the embrace of those "everlasting arms"? Does not your whole being yearn for knowledge of such heavenly guidance and support? Take upon you his easy yoke, and learn of Him who was meek and lowly of heart. So may the "worn spirit find repose," and wandering steps be turned back to the love and shelter of the Father's house.

LIGHTNING HITS HIM; LEG IS PARALYZED

Bolt Runs Down Chimney and Leaps from Stove to Fowler Sitting Near.

Muskegon, Mich., April 15.—An electrical storm at Fremont, nineteen miles from here, caused a peculiar accident. William Fowler was sitting in a chair, with his right foot resting against a stove, when a bolt of lighting struck the roof, ran down the chimney into the stove, and out into Fowler's leg, paralyzing it and causing it to turn black. Fowler was unconscious for several hours after the shock [illegible] will lose the use of the leg.

MOTHER AND HER 17 ARE ALL LIVING

Only Forty-two Years Old, But is a Grandmother Nevertheless.

COVELO, Cal., April 13.—Just by way of friendly encouragement President Roosevelt ought to give a medal to Mrs. McConnor of this place. Mrs. Connor is making a record that any woman may be proud of.

A son has been born to Mrs. Connor [illegible] Notwithstanding [illegible] the responsibilities attendant upon the mothering of nearly a dozen and a half youngsters, the woman by no means betrays her forty two years. She is moreover, a grandmother but that fact would never be surmised from her looks. She is robust and youthful.

All the Connor children are living and have enjoyed excellent health. Their mother may not have had any idle time [illegible] has not done much toward forming clubs for civic improvement, but the census taker owes her a debt of gratitude.

SAVES A KING'S TOY.

Paris, April 15.—A souvenir of the real Aiglon has just been presented to the Musee de l'Armee at the Invalid. It is a little wooden soldier representing a Mameluke cavalier, with which the little King of Rome used to play.

STOP! WOMEN

AND CONSIDER THE ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with woman's diseases covers a great many years.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result.

First letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I have suffered something terrible every month with my periods. The pains are excruciating and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have ovarian and womb trouble, and I must go through an operation if I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please tell me what to do. I hope you can relieve me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 321 O Street, S. W. Washington, D. C.

Second letter.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

After following carefully your advice and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you my testimonial, that others may know their value and what you have done for me.

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and am entirely well. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 321 O Street, S. W. Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

"I will not report again before the battle. If I am beaten, you will learn it through Togo. If I defeat him, I will announce it to you."—Admiral Rojestvensky to the Czar.

TOGO'S PLANS MYSTERIOUSLY VEILED FROM ROJESTVENSKY.

GREAT SEA BATTLE SOON

MUSCOVITES ANXIOUS FOR TEST OF STRENGTH

But Crafty Jap Is Believed to Be Seeking to Catch Enemy Napping.

London, April 15.—All indications are that Admiral Togo has planned and is maneuvering to carry out an attack on the Russian fleet, now moving northward in the China Sea, which will be a complete surprise, such as his first blow at the Russian fleet at Port Arthur. He is willing to sacrifice his torpedo boats and small craft in carrying out a policy of destroying the Russian battleships piecemeal.

Admiral Rojestvensky, of the Russian fleet, has invited attack. He is sailing straight to that place, the Straits of Formosa, where it was reported that Togo had concentrated his fleet. The Russian ships, cleared for action, newly coaled and reported in excellent condition, are sailing in the open.

London and St. Petersburg are anxiously awaiting word of the conflict, which, up to this time, all have expected might begin at any moment. Yet Togo has not appeared to oppose his way. Naval experts and strategists can only put one construction on this situation, and that is that Togo is held back from the attack by the fear that a general engagement might, if it resulted disastrously to his ships, give Russia absolute command of the sea.

Rojestvensky has cabled to the Czar, [illegible] dispatch:

"I will not telegraph again before the battle. If I am beaten you will learn it through Togo. If I defeat him I will announce it to you."

[illegible] Rojestvensky has sailed [illegible], with drawn up in battle array, and waiting for the attack which he expected when he entered the China Sea. He has been reported by half a dozen vessels, the entire world knows where he is, within a few miles. But of Togo's fleet nothing is known by comparison.

Big Issue At Stake.

Europe believed that Togo would swoop down on the Russians at the first opportunity and that one of the fiercest fights in sea [illegible] would follow. Togo has even been pictured as lying in wait at the straits and eager for the fight.

But days have passed since Rojestvensky passed through the Straits of Ma[illegible], and still there has been no fight. [illegible] the Russians [illegible] everything to gain by an open sea battle and [illegible] to lose [illegible]. If Japan should be whipped in a sea fight, however [illegible] all that she has fought for this year or more [illegible] Korea [illegible] Russian [illegible] would be lost.

With Togo's fleet, naval experts say, the Japanese would lose control of the sea and such a [illegible] would reverse the positions of the belligerents as they stand to-day.

The First Palm Sunday, as Chronicled in the Bible

And when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage, and Bethany, at the Mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him.

And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.

And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt?

And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

And they brought the colt to Jesus, and they cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches of the trees, and strewed them in the way.

And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.—Mark ii., 1-10

JOHN L. AND MITCHELL TO FIGHT?

Tacoma Says That Old-Timers Have Been Matched for 20-Round Battle on the Pacific Coast—Story Is Unconfirmed

Dispatches from Tacoma, Wash., report that a prominent sporting man has succeeded in arranging a match between John L. Sullivan and Charley Mitchell. It is said that each has accepted the offer made and that the meeting will take place in May.

This is the way the story comes from Tacoma:

The sporting man reached Mitchell and said to him:

"Would you meet John L. in the ring again?"

"Ask John. It is reported that Mitchell [illegible] "I'm ready at any time."

GOSPEL YACHTS FOR SANFORD SECT.

Crack Coronet and Wanderer Now Fly the Pennant of Holy Ghost and Us Society—Sandford's Agent Confirms Deal

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, April 15.—Two remarkable marine happenings were [illegible] to-day when the [illegible] yacht Coronet, one of the fastest and best yachts on the Atlantic, and a craft that all yachtsmen expected to see entered in the Kaiser's cup race, sailed from Brooklyn to be used as a Gospel ship by the Holy Ghost and Us Society.

At the same time it was learned that the Wanderer, [illegible] famous craft, carrying one of the proudest yacht club flags in the country, had been converted into a [illegible] by the [illegible] society to carry their [illegible].

On these [illegible] the gospel will be carried to the dwellers of the South Sea Islands and into other faraway heathen lands.

If the sect had examined the entire maritime register it is hardly possible that they could have selected two stranger craft for their purposes.

The Coronet was purchased a few days ago from Louis Bossert of New York and on Friday agents of the Holy Ghost and Us Society took possession. $20,000 was the price paid for the boat by Rev. Frank W. Sandford, the Maine Apostle, and this is only a few thousand dollars less than Mr. Bossert paid for her four or five years ago.

"This is part of our programme for the evangelization of the world," said A. K. Perry, the chief agent for the Apostle [illegible] the second ocean vessel we have purchased for our crusade against the powers of darkness."

CUT TARIFF, M'CALL SAYS.

Congressman Sharply Replies to General Draper's Defence of High Protection.

"IF PEOPLE ARE ROBBED, MAKE DUTIES LOWER"

Points to Conditions in Steel Industry as Argument at Massachusetts Club Dinner.

"If the American people are made to pay [illegible] it is not a just [illegible] are being held up by the steel [illegible] and the pockets of the people are [illegible] to pay dividends on the stock of watered millions, then I say lower the duty on steel and treat the American people fairly."

Congressman Samuel W. McCall made the above [illegible] to General W. F. Draper of Hopedale [illegible] the dinner of the Massachusetts Club at Young's Hotel yesterday afternoon. The Congressman had been [illegible] to task by General Draper for remarks the Congressman had made at a [illegible] in Lynn recently, stating that the steel [illegible] charges Americans more than foreigners. General Draper [illegible] of British and American prices for steel rails, and drew the deduction that American steel rails are being sold on the average more cheaply than English steel rails. Congressman McCall [illegible] for a speech was called upon at the conclusion of General Draper's speech. The Congressman said in part:

"I did say in substance at a recent meeting in Lynn that American steel rails were sold more cheaply abroad than at home. [illegible] West Indies [illegible]

"Lower the Tariff on Steel."

"Now I do not care whether you call it tariff revision [illegible] the Republican principle of protection or what not, this I do say, if the American people have to pay [illegible] steel rails than foreign [illegible] for the purpose of paying dividends [illegible] then I say [illegible] tariff [illegible]

[illegible] that around 1897 [illegible] before the Steel Trust was formed, steel sold for about $18 [illegible] was formed [illegible] $28. That being true [illegible] tribute on the American people [illegible] I am opposed to holding [illegible] the American people and picking their pockets.

BRANDEIS WARNS AGAINST GAS TRUST STOCK WATERING SCHEME

INJUSTICE WILL ROUSE PUBLIC TO ACT.

Representative of State Board of Trade Points Out How the [illegible] Easily [illegible] of [illegible] Public Utilities

In the light of recent developments relative to [illegible] ownership in New York city and [illegible], the report of the Public Light Committee of the Legislature, which has in its hands the problem of fixing the capitalization of the Massachusetts Gas Light Companies, is awaited with the greatest interest by the public.

It is expected that this committee will be ready to [illegible] report to the Legislature of [illegible] within a few days. It has [illegible]

Demand Honest Capitalization.

Stronger than this as an indication of public sentiment on questions of this character was the action of the city of Chicago in its recent Mayoralty campaign. Judge Dunne was elected Mayor of Chicago as the candidate [illegible] the [illegible] of all the [illegible] of [illegible] in the [illegible] of American cities.

[illegible] with which it has been followed in New York is the [illegible] interesting feature of [illegible]

All this it is [illegible] will have a bearing upon the report of the committee with reference to the capitalization of the combined gas companies of Boston.

The representatives of the Public Franchise League of this city have made it plain that they will not be satisfied with [illegible] capitalization [illegible]

This means that anything more than a capitalization of $10,000,000 will be regarded as stock watering.

Louis D. Brandeis, who represents the State Board of Trade, declared to a representative of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN that the fundamental point of the gas situation at present is that nothing should be done that would in any way aid stock watering in this State.

The Gas Trust has recently been spending many thousands [illegible] a week advertising its case in the newspapers. The Trust claims that a capitalization of under $[illegible] would [illegible]. It is left to the public to judge whether this matter, paid for at regular advertising rates, was not published for the purpose of influencing the committee that has the application under consideration.

Price Should Be Eighty Cents.

The present capitalization of the combined companies is $9,300,000. The public is satisfied to have a capitalization of this amount. But when an attempt is made to double this by the capitalization of so-called franchise values, and other means that have been disclosed to the public at the various hearings which have been held, the people emphatically protest.

The present price of gas in Boston is $1 a thousand feet. The residents of the city believe that the price should be reduced to eighty cents. This feeling was expressed in the great petition of the people presented to the Gas Commissioners. It has been since emphasized by the action of practically all the improvement associations of the city.

Upon one thing the people of Boston are determined. They will have cheaper gas. Unless it is obtained through the present proceedings it has been foreshadowed that municipal ownership will obtain in Boston just as well as in New York.

It has been suggested that the Legislature [illegible] when it has the question of capitalization under consideration present a sort of compromise. For instance, taking it that the proposed capitalization of the gas companies at the present time is $10,[illegible] and it pays 10 per cent. to the stockholders with gas at $1, they will [illegible] capitalization [illegible] per cent. [illegible] increase in the price of gas [illegible] in the rate of per cent. of return to the stockholders.

Sliding Scale Proposed.

This [illegible] reduction on a sliding scale has been accomplished abroad. It is believed that it would be [illegible] $1 [illegible]

Mr. Brandeis [illegible] the situation, [illegible] Massachusetts State Board of Trade, which he represents, was [illegible] stock watering [illegible]

"A great [illegible] of this discussion and the mass of [illegible] that have been presented," said Mr. Brandeis, "[illegible] anything [illegible] forward by the gas [illegible] situation.

"The [illegible] should be no stock [illegible] to a [illegible] a corporation [illegible] want [illegible] the Massachusetts State Board of Trade [illegible] there shall be no stock watering [illegible] there shall not be granted [illegible] privilege to any man or body [illegible]

"The Massachusetts State Board of Trade [illegible] Gas and Electric Light Commissioners [illegible] any of the companies in the combination [illegible] we were interested [illegible] which might [illegible] in accordance with the [illegible] policy of the Commonwealth [illegible] stock watering of [illegible]

Can Be Taken by the People.

"Massachusetts [illegible] the States [illegible] the establishment of position of [illegible] control of its public service [illegible] interest that [illegible]

Lieutenant-Governor Guild's toast, "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts," frequently arousing the veterans to applause and to shouts. The Lieutenant-Governor said in part:

"Lincoln calls for troops and the first blood is shed by the Sixth Massachusetts. The first aggressive movement is made in Eastern Virginia. The order comes from a Massachusetts General, and the Fourth Massachusetts, the first regiment to leave the State, shares in the first attack and in the sacrifice. Richmond is taken, and the first troops to enter the city are Troops L and H, First Massachusetts Cavalry, and it is their guidons that first rise above the Capitol of the Confederacy.

"Twenty thousand sailors from Massachusetts, a larger enlistment in the Navy than that of any other State save New York, manned the guns of the Union fleets. Massachusetts furnished more than a fifth of all the naval officers. In the first naval and military success at Fort Hatteras the troops were under a Massachusetts General; in the second the ships were under a Massachusetts Fleet Captain."

Captain John P. Reynolds was toastmaster and introduced the following speakers: Lieutenant-Governor Guild, General Nelson A. Miles, William T. Eustis, of Maine, Mrs. Mary F. Knowles, Brigadier-General J. H. Whitney, Department Commander James H. Wolfe.

Palm Sunday, the opening of the more solemn part of the Lenten season, will be observed to-day with impressive services in all the Catholic churches of the city. Chief among the exercises will be the blessing of palms and the chanting of the Passion. Special music will be given by the [illegible]

The principal services of the day will be held at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. His Grace, Archbishop Williams, will officiate at the blessing of the palms. About 5,000 branches will be distributed. The Archbishop will be assisted by the clergy of the Cathedral and seminarians from St. John's Theological College at Brighton.

Owing to the length of the missal for Palm Sunday, the solemn high mass will begin at 10 o'clock. At the opening of the services, the crucifixes and statues, which have been draped since Passion Sunday, will be uncovered.

The mixed choir will be under the direction of Organist James Whalen and the male sanctuary choir in charge of Thomas J. Hurley. The Passion will be sung by Rev. Nicholas R. Walsh, D. D., rector, Rev. John T. Mullen, D. C. L., and Rev. John P. Crowe, D. D. The services will conclude with a triumphal march, in which the Archbishop, clergy, acolytes and choristers will take part.

JAPS TO SERVE TEA FOR CHARITY AT MRS. 'JACK'S'.

Fenway Palace Will Be Used To Aid Sanitarium Bazaar. Proceeds Will Go to Cure and Relieve Tuberculosis

In the interests of the bazaar which is to be held the first four days in May in aid of the Sharon Sanitarium, Mrs. John L. Gardner has extended to the committee the use of her palace in Fenway court. The palace will be open to those holding tickets every afternoon during the bazaar from 1 o'clock to 5.30, and Mrs. Gardner will [illegible]

Parts of the palace which have not before been open to the public inspection may be seen when the bazaar is held. The music room will be transformed into a genuine Japanese village, where real Japs will serve tea.

Mr. Okakal, who recently visited the United States in the interests of the Mikado, has sent to the committee in charge of the bazaar a consignment of Japanese art objects, which will be sold for the benefit of the bazaar fund. Dr. Charles G. Weld, Dr. Sturgis Bigelow, Thomas Allan and J. Templeman Coolidge have also contributed for the sale.

Horticultural Hall is where the main part of the bazaar will be held, and here the committee has arranged an attractive display.

The associated committee consists of Mrs. Paul Thorndike, Mrs. A. T. Cabot, Mrs. George Gardner, Mrs. S. D. Warren, Mrs. Thomas Allen and Miss Katherin Coolidge.

The proceeds of the bazaar will be for the general use of the Sanitarium, to relieve and to cure tuberculosis.

Hope to Reverse the Action of Senate on Bill Allowing People to Vote on Matters Affecting Public Policy

DEFEATED LAST FRIDAY BY ONE VOTE

Organized Labor Is Greatly Interested in Success of the Measure, and Leaders Are Working for Its Passage

Great interest is centred in the reconsideration of a bill that is to come up in the Senate to-morrow which allows questions of public policy to be voted upon by the people.

Governor Douglas has expressed himself as in favor of direct legislation to a certain extent, and the laboring classes are strongly in favor of the bill now before the Legislature. The public opinion measure came up unexpectedly on Friday and was defeated by a vote of 12 to 11. A motion to reconsider was promptly made.

Every effort will be made to have all of the members of the Senate present to-morrow, there having been only twenty-three out of forty there on Friday, with the hope that the measure will meet with a different [illegible]

Much Desired by Labor.

"No measure," said a prominent representative [illegible] "has been [illegible] desired by organized labor [illegible] the initiative and referendum [illegible] It has the support of a [illegible] thoughtful citizens. [illegible] conservative [illegible] it leaves [illegible] to be worked out by the legislature [illegible]

[illegible] referendum by a [illegible] comes up before the [illegible] to-morrow pro[illegible] shall place [illegible] for the next [illegible]

Success in Switzerland.

Professor Frank Parsons, of Boston, an eminent authority on the referendum, after an extended trip through Europe, said:

"In Switzerland, where the referendum [illegible] have been so many years [illegible] the people are now substantially [illegible] They have proved [illegible] corruption and con[illegible] wisely conservative [illegible] progressive [illegible] at even [illegible] referendum [illegible] convinced of [illegible] not find one man who wishes to go back to the old plan of final [illegible] delegates without [illegible] appeal to the people."

PEACE NOW IN DEMOCRATIC COUNCILS.

the following vice presidents were elected: Josiah Quincy of Boston, Robert M. Burnett of Southboro, Congressman William S. McNary of Boston, Congressman John R. Thayer of Worcester, Chairman W. T. A. Fitzgerald of the Boston Democratic City Committee and Daniel F. Doherty of Westfield.

Debate Expulsion Rule.

The first debate of the meeting came on the amendment offered by Charles S. Hamlin relative to the rule on expulsion of a member. Mr. Hamlin moved that it require a two thirds vote of the entire membership to expel a member for cause. The old rules were capable of two interpretations, one that it require two thirds of the entire membership, and the other that it require two thirds of those present. The rules committee had reported, that in cases of expulsion for cause, there must be a two thirds vote of those present or a majority vote of the entire membership; in other words, that there must be a two-thirds vote at a meeting attended by a majority of the committee. The Hamlin amendment was defeated and the new rule reported by the rules committee adopted by a vote of thirty two to eleven.

The vote is not a line up of the so-called Doherty and Gaston elements, as several men who have been with the chairman on the main contentions voted for the new rule and against the Hamlin amendment.

One of the important changes made under the new rules is in regard to dues of members. Hereafter all members who are in arrears on July 1 shall be deemed absolutely suspended until the dues are paid, and the seat may be declared vacant by a two thirds vote of the majority. Heretofore, members in arrears forfeited their seat on the first of July. The rule was never enforced, but it is the intention to enforce the new rule to the limit this year.

New Auditing Plan.

Another rule provides that the treasurer's accounts shall be audited by three auditors immediately after the State election, instead of at the last meeting of the year, as formerly. Another rule raises the quorum from fifteen to twenty. The full membership is fifty eight, and, on a vote, thirty-nine will be necessary for a choice.

No action was taken on the following recommendation that was made by the rules committee:

"Voted, that it is the sense of this committee that the rules of the Democratic State Committee should provide that appointments to the executive committee by the chairman of the State committee should be subject to confirmation by the State committee, but, in view of the fact that the chairman of this committee has already been chosen, it is inadvisable at the present time to recommend such changes be made in the rules to be adopted for the current year."

CHAIRMAN-TO-BE TALKS TO THE AMERICAN.

By J. Frank Davis.

It is a safe wager that nine-tenths of all the adults in Boston want to know what Colonel Charles H. Cole, Jr., will do with the police force after he has been confirmed and qualified as chairman of the Police Commission. For that reason an interview with him has value.

"I haven't the slightest objection to giving you all the time you wish," he said, "and talking to you about anything and everything—except the Police Commission."

This was pleasing—and disappointing.

"It seems to me bad taste to say anything about what I will do when in office until after I have been confirmed," he said, "and the Governor's Council has not confirmed me yet. Even then it is improbable that I shall have anything very definite to say until I have studied conditions more than I have at the present time. The problems that arise in Boston are great ones. A man cannot settle them in a minute, or a week. It will take much thought to arrive at conclusions. It will take much intimate association with the force and the conditions it is meeting to show just what changes are necessary to be made in methods, even if there are any.

THE CHAP THAT'S GOING TO TAKE EMMONS'S JOB

"I start off handicapped, you know. Judge Emmons has been so much in the public eye that the man who takes his place steps into a mighty bright limelight. I notice it already.

"People turn and look at me as I walk along and somebody says, 'There goes the chap that's going to take Emmons's job.' So much publicity means that every action is under the sharpest scrutiny and questions can be settled only after the most careful investigation and wisest counsel."

It was at his desk in his real estate office, at No. 50 Congress street, that Colonel Cole sat talking, swinging around to face me from his roll-top desk as he spoke.

Whatever Cole, the Police Commissioner, may be—and that is not yet woven in the web and woof of fate—Cole, the private citizen, is a collected, calm, altogether admirable young man.

He is very tall and very straight. His age is thirty four, and he looks neither appreciably older nor younger. His shoulders are broad and well developed, and his head is set squarely upon them, just a little thrown back, chin held in, in a military way. The general impression of his whole manner and appearance are military, due to his years of work in the Cadet Corps, where he was one of the most enthusiastic and useful officers.

LOOKS THE MAN WITH LOTS OF NERVES—UNDER CONTROL

As he sits in his revolving chair, swung around from his desk, he does not rock back and forth. He does not drum with his fingers on his desk, or the arm of his chair. His feet are planted firmly and squarely on the floor; his hands, in his lap, are at ease. He has learned repose, and yet in his repose there is no legarthy. He looks the man with nerves—plenty of them—but nerves that are under control.

His face is long and narrow, with a high, white forehead overhung by brown hair parted in the middle. His eyes are brown and earnest. His nose is prominent and thin, without being too thin for good looks. His mouth, above a long, resolute chin, sets in a straight line, with firm wrinkles at the corners, when he is serious, and displays a row of very well-shaped white teeth when he smiles.

Perhaps the most noticeable feature about him is his hands. They are extremely long, extremely white and extremely well kept. They are the hands of birth and breeding, as well as of one who cares for his personal appearance—and a man who cares much for his personal appearance is almost always a man who has the acme of self respect.

Extreme neatness, without in the least inclining to foppishness, is a marked characteristic of the new commissioner. His clothes are in the fashion without being exaggeratedly so. His shoes are shining, his linen spotless and his neckwear fresh and appropriate without ostentatiously intruding into the general effect.

"BOSTON POLICE SEEM IN A GOOD STATE OF EFFICIENCY"

Here is a man, for one hazard, who would cause something to be doing in a police squad that appeared under his inspection with tarnished buttons, scrubby beards or ill-blacked shoes. Here is one who would say, "There are many agents of civilization. The first is the bathtub. Get ye first a cleanly habit and all other things may be added to you."

We have spoken of his experience in the Cadets, and his later work as a member of the Governor's staff, in which, as inspector-general of rifle practice, he has as much real work to do as any of the executive's military family.

"Shall you introduce any additional military ideas into the government of the Police Department?" I asked.

"That," he replied, "is a question I could not answer even if I had been confirmed and was about to take my seat on the commission. [illegible] investigation and [illegible] knowledge of existing conditions [illegible] before I can say anything [illegible] that generally speaking, the members of the police force of Boston seem to be in a pretty advanced state of efficiency, as regards discipline. That, however, is the opinion of the man on the street, and not of the possible Commissioner. As a matter of fact I know nothing about what it may be advisable to do."

"And can you say anything—just a hint—as to whether the policy of law enforcement will continue as under Judge Emmons's administration—of the semicolon law, for instance?"

"I cannot discuss any possibilities of the administration."

"Do you expect to have pleasant relations with the other commissioners?"

HE DOES NOT LOOK FOR ANY FRICTION IN COMMISSION

"I feel certain I will, if I am confirmed. Mr. Adams is a warm personal friend of mine—we have been friends for nine or ten years—and I know we shall get along well. It so happens that I have never had the pleasure of meeting Judge Emmons, but from what I have heard of his personality I do not expect the slightest friction in the commission, if I become a member of it with him and Mr. Adams."

Something was said about Colonel Cole's friendly relations with prominent Republicans. He is a partisan of partisans, yet many of his best friends are very pronounced Republicans. [illegible] and Chairman Talbot of the Republican City Committee were roommates.

"I guess that's because I am such a partisan," he said. "Have you ever observed that strong partisans get along better with one another, when their views differ, than independents? The independents are all the time wobbling about in their opinions and arguing about it and getting mad. The partisans just take it for granted the other fellow doesn't agree, and take it all good-naturedly."

Colonel Cole doesn't own an automobile. But horses and dogs are his friends. He rides a saddle horse and it is his favorite exercise. Next to that comes walking. And when he walks his dogs are his companions.

"I especially like terriers," he said. "Boston terriers, bull terriers, rat terriers—quick little dogs. I enjoy watching them, taking them with me on my walks and rides. I like to talk to them. They're the best friends I've got. Dogs always are."

LOVER OF DOGS, BUT NEVER "HAD ANY USE FOR A MONGREL."

At his mother's Summer place at Hingham, next door to the estate of former Governor John D. Long, Colonel Cole finds plenty of room about him for his country rides and walks.

"I never had dogs good enough to win any bench prizes," he said, "but they are well-bred dogs. I haven't any use for a mongrel."

This has been the Colonel's reputation as regards men, too, in his military career. Money, birth, position have not counted with him a great deal in his choice of friends, but the men under him and associated with him had to have character, stick-at-itiveness and sand if they would earn his regard. He has no use for men with a streak of yellow, any more than dogs.

On the walls in his office are pictures such as you would expect a young man like him to select. There are but three or four—a colored coaching scene, a poster drawing of horses and dogs, and one large handsomely framed photograph. This photograph is of the late William E. Russell, elected Governor in the first campaign in which Colonel Cole voted.

On the desk before him lay at least fifty, perhaps a hundred, letters of congratulation. "Very pleasant to read," he commented, "and very interesting to keep, especially if the Council should not confirm the Governor's appointment."

GAIN BIG RESULTS WITH LEAST WASTE OF POWER.

"Have you any idea it will not?" I asked.

"I haven't heard anything to that effect. But one can never tell what will happen. I wouldn't assist in the confirmation if I started to tell about what I might do or not do in the Commission. It isn't my place at just this moment to court extreme prominence, even if it were not bad taste. All men love a shining mark, you know."

As one of the best marksmen in the State, Colonel Cole has loved a shining mark himself, in politics as well as on the range. For that very reason he is likely to squint very carefully along the barrel and through the peep-sight before his discharges any of his Commission chairman cartridges.

But when he fires them they are likely to hit. And the general impression of the man that I carried away was that he would use his ammunition wisely and economically, and in his new office gain the greatest results with the least waste of powder.

TOGO PLANS COUP FOR BALTIC FLEET

the Japanese army might exist in Manchuria for a time, but eventually that would be in a [illegible] state. The [illegible] fresh [illegible] food [illegible] and without that [illegible] would be helpless.

This, it is pointed out, may be the reason for Admiral Togo's apparently strange tactics. He and the admiralty realize how much is at stake and how much would be staked on an open battle. He has kept away from the routes of shipping where he might be sighted and reported by passing vessels.

TOGO PLANS COUP.

At this leads to but the one conclusion to the minds of experts that Togo will strike, but it will be in the nature of a surprise attack. He will try to pick off the Russian battleships, and he will make sacrifices [illegible] of his torpedo boats and other smaller craft. His heavy fleet, experts are inclined to think, will be held together and he will risk an open battle only when he has to.

There can be no question that Togo knows and has known all the movements of Rojestvensky since the Russian fleet entered the Straits of Malacca. His establishing two bases, in Formosa, one at [illegible] and another at Makung, [illegible] that he wanted the fight in the Straits of Formosa, yet as the Russian fleet is at [illegible] en route to Vladivostok, Togo has not appeared. Had his fleet been stationed there, it was reported and believed to be, the battle would have been fought before this time.

Togo's scouting ships have been frequently almost in touch with the Russian fleet, which, with foul bottoms, has no vessel fleet enough to run down a scout. Now it is [illegible] from the northwest of Luzon, Philippines, to Hong Kong. Togo has sent his [illegible] American naval vessels as well as vessels of other nations have reported these scouts from time to time, but no one has reported the Japanese fleet.

This policeing of this vast area by fast scouts means that Togo is watching every possible avenue north. There are half a dozen channels between Luzon and Formosa and at least two excellent ones through the Straits of Formosa, and if Rojestvensky decides to take either of these Togo will know of it.

[illegible] most careful [illegible] of the situation by naval experts [illegible] all go scattering to [illegible] of definite news of an engagement. Meanwhile this news is being awaited in every capital of Europe. St. Petersburg knows nothing, Tokio will say nothing, and London and the continent generally are left to guess.

CLOSE TO BATTLE ZONE.

The last report of the Russian fleet placed it within two days' sailing of Formosa straits, and this was a couple of days ago. Proceeding at the rate of eight knots, Rojestvensky must be nearly there by this time. His hospital ship the Orel took an opportunity to run into Saigon for supplies, and has presumably rejoined the fleet further north.

Hong Kong dispatches say:

Many colliers are arriving here from Durban, Natal and Cardiff, Wales, apparently awaiting orders. War risks at Hong Kong for Japan have been raised and trade is affected.

In St. Petersburg the press is violent against the action of British ships of war [illegible] the whereabouts of the Russian fleet. The Novoe Vremya says that the vessels of all [illegible] conveying news [illegible] with the exception of [illegible] Britain.

The paper takes particular exception to the fact that the British cruiser [illegible] telegraphed the [illegible] that she had passed Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron 140 miles from Saigon, which was very important news to the Japanese, [illegible] as Rojestvensky [illegible] succeeded in slipping by the Japanese ships.

BRITISH AS SPIES.

"For a commercial ship to report such a fact upon arrival at a port is quite natural," says the Novoe Vremya, "but it is not so important, as the news is then more or less old, and in the meantime the squadron might have changed its course, but for a man-of-war to send such information to a coast station by wireless telegraph is infamous. However, this is not the first time the British have conveyed a valuable warning to their friends. During the Chino-Japanese War, when Great Britain was on the side of China, a British cruiser at Wei-Hai-Wei warned the Chinese admiral by [illegible] the approach of the Japanese fleet, although at night, when it is not the custom to salute in that fashion."

Port Said has information that a fifth division of the Russian second Pacific squadron, under the command of Vice Admiral Vessarago, and composed of the battleships Imperator Alexander II., Slava and Paul I., the armored cruiser Pamyat Azova and the second class cruiser Admiral Korniloff, will traverse the Suez Canal in July or August.

TOKIO HEARS FROM OYAMA OF ANOTHER VICTORY FOR JAPS

London, April 15.—Dispatches from Gunshu Pass state that the expected Japanese turning movement has not yet developed, although it is understood that preparations for such a movement are progressing. Reinforcements, food and ammunition are being brought up from New Chwang. The Japanese outposts extend [illegible] miles on either side of the railroad.

General Linevitch reports to the Czar in St. Petersburg:

"Our cavalry, April 10, found the Japanese in occupation of a hill southward of Mt. Gaoshan, in the valley of the Hun River. The cavalry turned their position and forced the Japanese to evacuate it and retire westward."

Tokio dispatches say that Oyama reports another Japanese victory. The following has been received and made public in Tokio:

"Our force advancing east along the Hailung road defeated a body of the enemy April 14, near Heishanmu, ten miles east of Panshi, and vigorously chased them towards Tachotsu, twenty-six miles east of Panshi. Another force advancing north from Singking attacked the enemy, holding a position five miles south of Pachatsu. There has been no change elsewhere in the military situation."

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys most, because they do most and need attention first.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root will set your whole system right, and the best proof of this is a trial.

Dear Sir:
Ever since I was [illegible] kidney trouble [illegible] it became so severe and complicated [illegible] tered everything and was [illegible] strength and power was fast [illegible] an advertisement of Swamp-Root [illegible] began [illegible] and noted a decided [illegible] after [illegible] Swamp-Root [illegible]
I continued its use [illegible] that I am entirely [illegible] to be very sure [illegible]
I know [illegible] Swamp-Root [illegible]
Thanking you for [illegible] recommending Swamp-Root [illegible]
Very truly [illegible]
[illegible] RICHARDSON.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything, but it promptly cures kidney, liver and bladder troubles, the symptoms of which are—obliged to pass your water frequently night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brickdust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is for sale at drug stores the world over in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SPECIAL NOTE. In order to prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle. In sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the Boston Sunday American. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.

Mr. Conquest [illegible] per[illegible] furnished home [illegible] street [illegible] There [illegible]quest, comes to see her father and mother. She has won a high place theatrically, having been leading woman for Richard Mansfield, John Drew and Nat Goodwin, and to-day is considered one of the greatest figures on the American stage.

While she wins for herself triumph after triumph her father, jovial, round faced, gray haired, works early and late as a fish packer, and enjoys it. Like other laborers at T Wharf, he dresses in fish-scaled "jumpers," coarse flannel shirt and cowhide boots. Yet he could sign a check that would buy out his employers' firm.

Hard Work Means Health.

"Hard work and regular hours bring good health, and good health means much more than superficial enjoyment of wealth," he says.

"I know what I'm talking about for I retired from business six years ago and was the unhappiest man going until I got back to work again. Killing time and pleasure seeking was the hardest work I ever did.

"I began to work for a fish dealer when I was a lad, and went into business for myself at about twenty-two. I was a wholesale fish dealer.

"There is only one way to get honestly rich. That is to work hard to save your money and at the same time be reasonably cheerful. For a man can not be happy unless he is charitable and interested in others besides himself.

"About six years ago I decided to retire from business and go abroad. The [illegible] for [illegible] and [illegible] constant pleasure seeking [illegible] I [illegible] after the smell of the packing room, the steamers coming and going [illegible] the work.

TO USE WOMEN AND SONG IN WINE WAR:

Mrs. Elizabeth S. Pratt Will Form a Double Quartet of Pretty Girls to Draw Young Men to Temperance Meetings

PROMINENT MEN WILL AID THE PLAN

She Will Try Also to Prevent Licenses Being Granted to Saloons Within 500 Feet of Any Railroad Station

Pretty young women who can sing, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Pratt of No. 20 Rutland square believes, will be the real factors in a new temperance campaign which she has started.

Mrs. Pratt would have a double quartette of these pretty girls. She would have Lorimer Hall as the meeting place. There she believes she can induce many young men to come, listen to the singing, and then be induced to enlist in the temperance campaign.

"Yes, I would have a double quartette of pretty young women," said Mrs. Pratt to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter. "By this means I believe I can hold the attention of the young men."

Take Saloons from Stations.

Mrs. Pratt believes, also, that there should be no saloons around large railroad stations, the North Station being the point of her attack. She has caused to be introduced in the Legislature a bill which provides that no license shall be granted within 500 feet of any building which is occupied in whole or in part for railway passenger station purposes.

To a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter Mrs. Pratt said:

"The purpose of this movement is to clean up the district about the North Station and, incidentally, to provide a State law to do the same thing in all the cities of the State. Our State laws provide that no license shall be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors within four hundred feet of any schoolhouse. Why should this law not apply to railroad stations?

"Take the North Station for instance. There the first thing one sees when leaving the station is [illegible] and barrooms, tempting [illegible] the students and young men to a [illegible] hour so detrimental to them, [illegible] and physically. This is even more true in the cases of young men who have missed their trains.

Put Down Intemperance.

"I am also endeavoring to stamp out the intemperance existing in [illegible] and suburban cities. I have written to about fifty well known public men, asking them to furnish me with the names of some ten or a dozen young men [illegible] These young men I [illegible] on the temperance [illegible] and I would hold weekly meetings in Lorimer Hall. By means of my quartette of pretty young women I believe I can hold their attention and have weekly meetings in the hall, thus laying the foundation for a large army of temperance workers.

"In creating this army I am looking forward to [illegible] possibility [illegible] very far [illegible] or their representatives who rule the Legislature [illegible] to exert the [illegible] we will have [illegible] question [illegible] politics.

[illegible] who are interested and who are [illegible] Mrs. Pratt are the Rev. P. S. Henson, pastor of Tremont Temple, Hon. Samuel W. McCall, Robert Treat Paine, ex-Governor John L. Bates, and Clinton R. Woodruff of Philadelphia, vice president of the American Civic Association.

REV. GUY ROBBINS.

DOUGLAS ROBBINS

MRS. JENNIE H. ROBBINS.

Youngest club member in the world and his parents. He has been admitted to the Universalist Men's Club at Wakefield.

TO BABY ROBBINS BELONGS THE HONOR.

Wakefield has the youngest clubman and the youngest clubwoman.

Douglas Hill Robbins became a member of the Universalist Men's Club when he was four days old. He is now twenty-five days of age.

His record is beaten by one day by Miss Edith Louise Miller, aged two years and six months. Miss Miller was voted a member of the New Hampshire Daughters when she was three days old.

Young Mr. Robbins has not yet attended a meeting of his club, but there is every prospect that he will be formally introduced in the near future.

Here again he is beaten by the youngest clubwoman. Every privilege of the New Hampshire Daughters is hers. She commenced to attend the meetings when she was one year old, and has attended every meeting since. In fact, at the present time she is taking an active interest in club affairs.

At the time of her election to the club her mother, Mrs. Ida Farr Miller, was its regent. Mrs. Miller has been one of the club's most popular officers, and it was in honor of her successful administration that her daughter was so early made a member of the club. Mr. Miller is Henry F. Miller, the piano manufacturer.

TO HOLD BOUTWELL MEMORIAL MEETING

There will be a memorial meeting in honor of the late George S. Boutwell on next Tuesday night at Faneuil Hall at which many of the most eminent men of the State will be heard. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock. The public is invited.

The invocation will be by the Rev. Charles Gordon Ames, D.D., and there will be brief addresses by John D. Long, General Nelson A. Miles, William Lloyd Garrison, A. A. Putnam, Moorfield Storey, Samuel W. McCall, Patrick A. Collins, the Rev. W. H. Scott, Senor Martin P. De Vevra, Jr., Samuel Gompers, George F. McNeill, David Greene Haskins, Jr., Julius Rottenberg, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the Rev. Pemberton H. Cressey, Dr. P. J. Timmins and A. E. Pillsbury.

NANCE O'NEIL AND MRS. EDESON TO POUR

Miss Nance O'Neil and Mrs. Robert Edeson, wife of the star of "Strongheart," will pour at the tea which is to be a part of the program of the meeting on Monday afternoon of the Actors' Church Alliance at St. Paul's parish rooms. Miss Lella Simon, a dramatic reader from the Bible, is to furnish the program for the afternoon.

ARREST SOON IN CHENEY BOND MYSTERY

State Police Say They Have Practically Solved the Puzzle of the Disappearance of $285,000 Worth of Securities

EXPECT SOMETHING WILL DROP SHORTLY

Will Not Say Upon Whom Suspicion Rests, but Are Satisfied They Are on Right Track at Last in Famous Case

A speedy solution of, and an arrest in, the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the box containing about $285,000 in bonds, securities, notes, etc., from the home of Herman B. Cheney in Southbridge about January 12, the loss of which created such a sensation throughout New England, is promised by Chief Shaw of the State police.

Chief Shaw said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter: "We have been conducting a thorough investigation of the case for some time past. We are now satisfied as to who has the securities and other property. As soon as the investigation is completed, which will be soon, we expect something will drop. Just what that is I cannot at the present state."

Will an arrest be made? he was asked. [illegible] of our investigation [illegible] to warrant it."

Benjamin D. Hyde of the law firm of Hyde, MacPherson & Damon, Mr. Cheney's counsel in the case, was interviewed by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. He said:

"So far as I know there is nothing new in the matter. The State police [illegible] at work on the case and have been for some time. It is only through Chief Shaw that any news will be given out. The affair has gone so far now that an arrest will certainly be made if we can find the evidence to proceed on. None of the notes or coupons, some of which fell due on the first of April, have been cashed or negotiated in any way so far as we can learn. The securities are [illegible] accounted for.

"Even though the property is [illegible] it is not necessarily lost, as we realize that it has not fallen into the hands of professional thieves."

The missing property was contained in an [illegible] box which, it is alleged, was taken from [illegible] Mr. Cheney's home some time during the month previous to the discovery of the robbery. The entire case was kept quiet for some time in the hope that the thief would be found and the property [illegible] without [illegible] notoriety. Mr. Cheney offered [illegible] reward [illegible] from [illegible] if the property was returned [illegible] offer brought forth no result, the case was put in the hands of the Pinkertons. After these efforts were unavailing [illegible] or locating the property and then the local police and the police of Southbridge and Worcester were called into the case.

After many weeks of unsuccessful work the case was given over entirely to the State police, who now claim that they have practically reached a solution of the mystery.

During the course of investigation, the coachman, servants and immediate relatives of Mr. Cheney were under suspicion, but all, according to statements given out from time to time by those working on the case, were eliminated from all connection with the case.

LOWELL HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS THE CHAMPIONS

VANQUISH PORTLANDS IN BASKETBALL CONTEST.

Win Highest New England Honors in Presence of 2,000 Admirers, Who Cheer Victors in Brilliantly Played Game

Lowell, April 15.—In the presence of more than 2,000 admirers, while 500 more, unable to obtain seats, were turned disconsolately away from the building, the girl basketball players of the Lowell High School defeated the girls of Portland High this afternoon, winning the championship of New England. The game, attended by the best people of Lowell, was a most remarkable exhibition of [illegible] skill and generalship, as well as one of the prettiest contests ever seen in Massachusetts. The score, 33 to 7, fails to adequately indicate the hard fought nature of the contest, for the little girls [illegible] from Portland went down to defeat before the girls in red and white only after a struggle that will long be [illegible] in the annals of [illegible].

MISS BOLAND, ACTRESS, ON WHY SHE DISLIKES KISSING

Says She Feels Relieved to Have Part Where She Does Not Have to Submit to the Caresses of the Stage Lover

By J. Frank Davis.

"[illegible] Boland is a young woman who [illegible] to kiss [illegible]. Her name is Mary Boland. She is leading woman in [illegible] company. Can you [illegible] up and [illegible]?"

[illegible] who played opposite [illegible] it came [illegible] wondering a [illegible] new play whom [illegible] I must confess [illegible] with a feeling of [illegible] I learned [illegible] one day," I [illegible] the fields of memory, "that he was never able to do a love scene with a woman he cared anything for. He said when he and Julia [illegible] were in love, before they were married, they were playing opposite and the stage manager cut out their love scene because they did it so badly. Then after Miss [illegible] left the company and another woman took her place they put the scene back and it went all right."

"That's very [illegible]," said Miss Boland. "The best love scene I ever saw on the stage [illegible] was [illegible] between a [illegible] and woman who had just had [illegible]. As for my experience, I don't think it would make much difference to me."

"[illegible]" I [illegible] a little, but couldn't find any other words to express it—"then all kisses look alike to you on the stage."

Question of Antiseptics.

"I'm afraid they do. Sometimes they're a matter of [illegible]. Sometimes"—she laughed [illegible] at the recollection [illegible] of laughing at recollection [illegible] Miss Boland—"they're a matter of antiseptics. I have many a time, after a particularly strong love scene, washed my face with listerine before taking off my make-up. Now [illegible] a confession to [illegible] the romance in the heart of the [illegible]."

"And you never really liked it?"

I [illegible] said this with finality. To my astonishment Miss Boland blushed a little and [illegible]. That is the only word that expresses it. She [illegible].

"In my first season," she said (and her [illegible] "Oh, this was many, many years ago"—it must have been as many as five or six, to judge by her present appearance)—"there was a man in the company—Oh, I guess I won't tell you that. I was only seventeen years old then."

"Well, [illegible] I thought a great deal about this actor, and in a play we played he had to kiss me. It's really very foolish."

Again I urged.

"Why, there really isn't very much to it. Only I didn't wash the makeup off my face for twenty four hours."

It was out. There was one kiss she didn't want to wash off.

PARTY BREAK IN RHODE ISLAND WIDENED.

Schism in Republican Ranks in State Legislature Prevents Passage of Many Measures to Which Party Is Committed

NO AGREEMENT YET ON REVENUE BILLS

Belief Grows Stronger That the Obnoxious Commission Legislation Will Not Be Imposed on City of Pawtucket

Providence, April 15.—This has been a week of sensations in the Republican ranks in the General Assembly and the breach which has separated the factions of the dominant party has vastly widened.

The House Republicans have made an effort to induce their brethren in the Senate to hold a conference on the revenue bills, as there remain [illegible] of the sixty for which the State allows its session to draw pay of $5 per day mileage. The Senate party refused to hold a conference or to go into caucus.

Tuesday next the Assembly should adjourn sine die, [illegible] of the acts to which the Republicans are committed have been passed. The Court and Practice Act, which [illegible] revision of the State's judicial system, passed the House after the longest session of the year with but few [illegible] defects. But not a single revenue [illegible] has been [illegible] nor any of the various reform measures has yet received legislative approval.

Discussing the possible length of time the Legislature will remain in session after Tuesday, the sixtieth day, one of the leaders said this evening: "There is so much business yet to be transacted that I have serious doubt of our ability to complete it within the next two weeks."

Not a single one of the Pawtucket special acts has been reported from committee, and the belief is expressed at the State House that the [illegible] will be [illegible] school commission [illegible] and registration imposed upon the [illegible] at the present session.

[illegible] hearings during the week [illegible] to provide a board of registration for nurses developed great opposition to the measure, for the reason, as expressed by some physicians at the hearing, that it tended to create an aristocracy of nurses and militate against [illegible] good hospitals and their graduates. More women attended [illegible] at the State House, even when the woman suffrage bills were under consideration.

CLOSE POOLROOMS IN RHODE ISLAND

Providence, April 15.—Governor Utter acted this week against the horse poolrooms which have been operated in Thornton and Waterford for the past year or more in defiance of the State law and of public sentiment, and, as a result of orders from High Sheriff Hunter [illegible] both of the rooms were closed and the proprietors say they will remain so.

Two years ago Governor Bates, of Massachusetts, communicated to the Governor of Rhode Island a statement from the district attorney of Worcester regarding the horse poolroom at Waterford, but nothing could be done apparently.

Governor Utter says that evidence he has collected since taking office last January is sufficient to make things decidedly uncomfortable for any horse poolroom man who cares to try to run in defiance of the orders to close.

BEGINS TO ENROLL DEMOCRAT VOTERS

Pawtucket, April 15.—Chairman E. F. Butler of the Democratic City Committee has commenced the work of registration for the ensuing election. A house to house canvass will be made. Last year's returns were the largest in the history of the party, but Mr. Butler is confident of doing better this year.

NINE DEATHS IN 10 DAYS BY MENINGITIS

Providence, April 15.—Spotted fever, or cerebro spinal meningitis, has claimed nine victims in this city and State within a radius of four miles during the past ten days. Four of the deaths were adults and five children.

HOOKS BIG SALMON, THEN KILLS HIM WITH RIFLE.

New York Sculptor, Unable to Land His Twenty-two Pound Fish, Shoots it Through the Head at the First Shot

Bangor, April 15.—Although the open season for sea salmon on the Penobscot River [illegible] weeks ago, thus far but one fish has been taken from the river [illegible] Barker pool, and that one was taken in a remarkable manner, having first been hooked then killed with a rifle shot.

[illegible] Tafft, the New York sculptor, was the fisherman [illegible] had [illegible] in rapids [illegible] he had wasted his time, when just at dusk there came a sudden flash [illegible] strike, and he had a big salmon fast.

Being an experienced [illegible] salmon fishing Mr. Tafft was [illegible] prepared for what followed, having no [illegible] gaff nor net, and there was no shoal water near. But he had [illegible] a small target rifle, and after [illegible] the [illegible] for ten minutes he [illegible] a [illegible] feat.

MAINE DRY, HOTELS RAISE BOARD BILL

Bangor, April 15.—Hotel keepers all over Maine have increased the prices of board and lodging on account of the rigid enforcement of the liquor laws.

The Bangor House, one of the largest and best hotels in New England, formerly had a bar trade of $1,000 a week. To-day, so Captain Chapman, the proprietor, declares, there is not so much as a bottle of Apollinaris water in the house. Captain Chapman says the enforcement of the [illegible] law has killed the Republican party and that the State will be carried by the Democrats in 1906.

TWINS' DEATHS STIR STRICT MILK LAW AGITATION.

Citizens of Providence and Pawtucket Demand That a Rigid Measure Be Enacted and Existing One Enforced

Providence, April 15.—Agitation for a more rigorous law relating to milk inspection and the enforcement of existing law on the subject was started this week by the deaths of twin babies under circumstances [illegible] as suspicious. The officers [illegible] of Providence and Pawtucket have [illegible] milkmen and their [illegible] samples of milk to be tested [illegible] and other foreign ingredients and at a [illegible] before one of the [illegible] of Providence [illegible] of the legislators that were the cities allowed to properly control their internal affairs no such tragedy as that which removed the two three-months-old children could be possible.

Inspector Scott of this city says: "I am determined that milk dealers who [illegible] with the supply they furnish their customers shall suffer the extreme penalty of the law."

PAWTUCKET UNIONS TO HEAR MINISTERS

Pawtucket, R. I., April 15.—The Central Trades and Labor Union of this city is about to inaugurate a series of addresses by clergymen of different denominations in the city and the Blackstone Valley at the monthly meetings of the union. The addresses [illegible] Rev. James Barber, pastor of the Church of the Advent, will deliver the first address, having accepted an invitation to speak on the evening of May 8.

NEVER IN CITY, SAYS ALLEGED GEM THIEF

Portland, Me., April 15.—George Lyman, a hotel thief, twenty years of age, who is under arrest on a charge of stealing diamonds from a hotel in Bridgeport, claims that he was never in that city.

PAWTUCKET'S MAYOR IN SHARP REPLY TO CRITICS.

Promises Prompt Prosecution of Law Violators if Information Is Given Him—Commission Bills Regarded as Dead

Pawtucket, April 15.—The Pawtucket commission bills, which were designed to take away from the people the right to care for their police and school departments and to put into partisan [illegible] of boards and the [illegible] of Representatives, and the [illegible] are few. [illegible] to keep [illegible] bills [illegible] make one more try during the coming week, but there is not the slightest hope for success.

During all the time that the issue has been under agitation only one man of prominence, other than the City Hall politicians, has [illegible] approved of the measures. Colonel Lyman B. Goff, a leading manufacturer, has twice in the press expressed himself in favor of the commissions. In his last letter he made a rather savage attack on Mayor [illegible] the Democratic chief executive, who is [illegible] control of the city police. The Mayor answers [illegible] was that under Mayor [illegible] was not enforced. In reply the Mayor says:

"The only part of your letter which is [illegible] charge on the law violators [illegible] I have myself seen on more [illegible] by the [illegible] on Sunday, some of them so drunk that they could not walk. [illegible] Your [illegible] is entitled to consideration because you say you saw it yourself. Now I will make this offer to you: If you will [illegible] and secretly let me know what places they were, I shall [illegible] against the owners and if possible have their [illegible] licenses revoked. I will guarantee that your name will never be known to anyone besides myself as being at the bottom of the complaint. You will not have to [illegible] witness, and I will [illegible] in such a manner that no suspicion will ever rest on you. If I find that the officer of the beat knew about the violation [illegible] duty, I shall [illegible] the [illegible] of Aldermen to dismiss him from the force."

RUMORS OF DEALS AND COUNTER DEALS FLY

Big Railroad Operation Not Yet Announced—Next Week Likely to Test Endurance of the Bull Speculators

Prices fell in Wall Street yesterday because the traders were in a mood to take profits. They may buy them back tomorrow at higher prices. The reaction extended from all fractions to two points, the latter [illegible]. Closing prices as a rule were about the lowest of the day.

A one to two point reaction does not make a bear market, however, and [illegible] prices have steadily advanced from level to level, no one [illegible] say at the [illegible] that the top has been reached. A considerable element in Wall Street [illegible] where have [illegible] out [illegible] from time to time [illegible] control [illegible] speculation [illegible] as they have been for many [illegible] year.

It is a market that has [illegible] many "shrewd" traders [illegible] those who went short weeks and who have maintained a bearish [illegible] have seen their losses multiply [illegible] daily.

Prices Recover Easily

It is probable that there is a [illegible] able short interest [illegible] at the present time, the ease with which prices recover from reaction [illegible] this is so and the manner in which the big financial interests have [illegible] prices to rise in the face of [illegible] demonstrates that they are confident [illegible] underlying conditions warrant [illegible].

Wall Street and State Street [illegible] are full of [illegible] rumors of [illegible] and [illegible] deals. This is usually the case after stocks have had a [illegible] upward movement. Some of [illegible] deals [illegible] fantastic in character, others possess the merit of possibility.

The big railroad deal which [illegible] to street report has been on the [illegible] months, has yet to be announced. No one seems to know just what shape the [illegible] is to take, although so far as the rank and file of the traders is concerned [illegible] has been made a [illegible] argument [illegible] the raising of prices in the stock market.

Favorable Conditions.

The bulls, however, have not lacked for material. They have found it in the ease of money, the increasing prosperity of the country as a whole, as indicated by heavy railroad earnings and increased bank clearings, and lately in the [illegible] outlook for the crops.

It is altogether too early to take a definite stand as to what [illegible] ing will be this year [illegible] to date has been [illegible] that [illegible] desired.

At the same time the coming week is likely to test the endurance [illegible] bull operators. [illegible] fall, written [illegible] Securities case, which is expected [illegible] may mark for the present the termination of the upswing. The character of this decision is already partly known, and while considered favorable [illegible] the full strength of the [illegible] been discounted.

On the other hand those who favor the theory that prices [illegible] further rise base their claim upon the [illegible] ing out of important [illegible] deals immediately after [illegible].

$1,000 IN VAUDEVILLE FOR FORMER WIFE OF MOLINEUX.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 15.—Mrs. Wal[illegible] D. Scott, who was Mrs. Roland B. Molineux, has definitely determined to appear upon the vaudeville stage for $1,000 per week.

Mr. S[illegible], who was her divorce attorney, has been [illegible] by a New York firm. He will move to New York in May, and will dispose of his home and other property in Sioux Falls. He will however maintain a branch office in Sioux Falls and continue to attend to his very profitable divorce business.

The Scotts were married in [illegible] ago a short time after the divorce was granted. They now have a son.

THE BANK STATEMENT

NEW YORK, April 15.—The weekly statement of the associated banks, issued today, shows the following changes:

Reserve on all deposits, increase $660,875; reserve on deposits other than United States, increase $683,175; loans, increase $5,851,500; specie, increase $2,919,600; legal tenders, increase $650,600; deposits, United States deposits included, increase $11,601,500; circulation, increase $287,500; total loans $1,099,611,100.

The banks now hold in excess of legal requirements $9,352,400, against $27,304,000 last year, and $6,007,650 two years ago.

BELASCO'S FIGHT ON THEATRE TRUST STIRS RIALTO.

New York, April 15.—The theatrical world awaits with unusual interest the developments to follow the disclosures concerning the Theatrical Trust in the David Belasco suit in the Supreme Court.

The real purpose of the suit is to lay before the public the operations of the theatrical combine and if possible break it up by public sentiment. Belasco believes that the members of the combine can be indicted for conspiracy.

The fight against the trust has caused me a loss of $100,000," said Belasco. "If I can show to the public how the tentacles of this octopus have strangled the American drama and how the public are being forced to accept bad actors advertised as stars, how inferior plays with cheap productions are presented at top prices, I will have accomplished a move in a direction which I hope will be the end of the combine."

A local dramatic critic, who was forbidden to enter any of the theatres controlled by Klaw & Erlanger, said:

"This is the only Klaw & Erlanger show that I can attend, and really it is funnier than any show that Erlanger ever put on."

Erlanger testified that he had a "sweet and gentle temper," and since that moment Belasco's counsel has baited and prodded Erlanger to frequent outbursts by the question "Is this your sweet temper?"

HOW THE "NEW THOUGHT" WON BACK A LOST HUSBAND

Told by the Wife Who Won Him.

MRS. DRAKE TELLS OF REMARKABLE ROMANCE.

Love, Pity and Forbearance Factors in the Creed Which Made Her Dearer Than Ever Before to Man She Divorced

By Eleanor Ames.

New Thought, a science founded upon Christ's command to "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you" and to "Love your neighbor as yourself," has made possible the remarriage of Mr. and Mrs. Wilton E. Drake, of Brookline, after having been divorced for eleven months, and has brought out a story of a woman's great love, pity, forbearance, faith and endurance which seems to the average fault filled person so transcendently beautiful and ideal and broad and uplifting as to be unreal.

After eleven years of married life—a life in which no word of discord, no jangle of discontent, no shadow of suspicion had ever existed, and where the wife's interests had been wholly and unceasingly for her husband's welfare, Wilton Drake confessed to his wife that she no longer absorbed his affections.

He declared that another woman had come into his life, that he felt an overpowering infatuation for her which he could not resist.

Mrs. Drake was stunned with grief. The idea that her husband did not return in full the devotion she so freely gave him had never entered her mind.

Spoke No Harsh Words.

She determined to set her husband free, that he might legally love and wed the woman who stood between them. Then she tried to bear the pain which was constantly clutching at her heart. She grew sweeter and more charitable in her nature. She had no harsh words, no unkind thoughts for the man who had so cruelly wronged her, or for the woman who had taken him from her.

She determined to help them both to be happy.

But happiness for Wilton Drake died when he confessed his affection for another than his wife. Lost to him, that wife grew daily dearer and nobler and better.

In the comparison of her greatness, other women paled to insignificance. Humbly he begged her to forgive and begin life anew. "I have seen the error of my ways," he declared.

"We will try to do better," she answered.

So together they visited the clergyman and again took the marriage vows.

And the other woman?

During the time when her former husband was devoting himself to the woman who had caused her so much misery, Mrs. Drake was trying by letters to help her to be happy. Now she is consoling her and comforting her and trying to lead her into a better way of thinking, through letters and books—the two women have never met.

Such are the facts in a romance which is stranger and far more beautiful than any fiction.

"New Thought has made it possible for a woman, a human being, to act so generous and noble a part in the face of a situation which has made the poet say, 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned.'"

"Should Love Our Neighbors."

"Simply to treat others as we would have them treat us, and to go on loving our neighbor no matter what he may do. That's all," said Mrs. Drake as we sat in easy wicker chairs in the peaceful, artistic apartment on Linden street, which has been her home since her separation from her husband.

"That's a great deal," I argued.

"Yes, but it is really the only way to live. We should truly love our neighbors as we do ourselves.

"No matter how great the injury which has been done you, you should look not at the injury, but beyond the error and see the God within."

"It is very beautiful," I sighed, "but very hard for the average person, to whom revenge is sweet."

"Revenge is perhaps a neutral trait," rippled the soft melodious voice of this wonderful woman. "We should have gone beyond that and have progressed to a higher plane. What you give out will surely return to you. It may not come from the individual, but you will get it from the world. You can't escape it."

"And do you believe Mr. Drake has received in kind the suffering he caused you?"

"I believe he has suffered intensely. He has told me so. He says that he feels as though he had been born anew; he sees things so differently now. It is a second birth, a soul birth."

"And do you believe Mr. Drake has reformed? Do you believe his penitence is lasting?"

The bride-wife smiled a contented, sure smile.

"Now He Sees Truly."

"When one has proven beyond any doubt that two and two make four, isn't that enough? He never tries to make it five or six again does he? My husband al-

SON DENIES THAT JOE JEFFERSON IS NEAR END.

Dispatches received in Boston yesterday from West Palm Beach, Fla., declare that the family of Joseph Jefferson, the veteran actor, fearing the worst, is assembled at his bedside, awaiting the end, which is now expected momentarily.

Three weeks ago Mr. Jefferson visited ex-President Cleveland at Hobe Sound, where he caught cold, and upon his return to Palm Beach he was forced to take to his bed.

He convalesced and was up after a few days' confinement, when, on Monday, he was seized with a relapse, according to the Florida dispatch.

A dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN from New York says that Thomas Jefferson, Jr., son of the aged actor, who is in New York, declares that he has received a message from his brother, Charles B. Jefferson, stating that there was no truth in the reports of Mr. Jefferson's serious illness.

PAWTUCKET CURFEW LAW IS ENFORCED

Pawtucket, R. I., April 16.—Curfew rang to-night at 9:30 warning all boys and girls under sixteen to leave the streets. This is the first time the ordinance was ever enforced in this city. It was enacted by the City Council at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

AUTO TRAGEDIES MAKE POLICE ACTIVE.

Orders for Summary Arrests for Overspeeding, the Result of the Fatal Accidents in Boston During the Week Past

Two persons killed and a six-year-old boy dying is the last week's record of automobile accidents in Boston. Orders went out yesterday from police headquarters in Pemberton square to arrest all auto drivers who are exceeding the speed limit or who seem to be reckless in the handling of their automobiles.

The two deaths due to auto scorching came within an hour of each other on Thursday evening.

The Turner boy, who lives at No. 32 Mindaro street, Roxbury, had left his home on an errand. At the corner of Columbus avenue and Station street, he was struck by a touring car. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he died soon after of concussion of the brain.

The machine was owned by Kenneth Skinner, of No. 179 Clarendon street. It was driven by Arthur Neilson, Jr., of No. 8 Cumberland street. Neilson was arrested on a charge of manslaughter, but has been released.

At 8 o'clock on the same evening James P. Flynn, sixty years old, of No. 11 Hartford street, Roxbury, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, started to cross the street at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Washington street. A runabout caught the man when he was in the middle of the street and knocked him down. Flynn died a few hours after the accident.

The last of the week's accidents occurred yesterday afternoon when Samuel Rubinovitz, six years old, of No. 4 Wall street, was run down by a machine driven by Bray M. Crockett of No. 15 Allen street, Cambridge. The accident occurred at the corner of Minot and Lowell streets. The boy was picked up and taken to the Relief Hospital, where, at a late hour last night, he was reported to be suffering from a fractured skull and severe bruises. His recovery is not expected.

As a result of the three accidents, Superintendent Pierce gave out orders directing certain designated police officers to secure stop watches to aid them in timing auto drivers over marked courses.

SAMUEL P. DOUGLAS BORNE TO HIS GRAVE

Providence, April 15.—The funeral of Samuel P. Douglas, a well-known attorney and brother of Chief Justice W. W. Douglas, was held to-day from his residence, No. 105 Prospect street, and was largely attended by bench and bar.

AGREED ON THIBET TREATY.

Pekin, April 15.—It is unofficially stated that negotiations between Great Britain and China have resulted in an agreement on the Thibet convention, Great Britain accepting some modification.

DIVORCEE SETTLES WITH HUSBAND FOR $6,000,000.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Chicago, April 15.—After receiving several friends in her rooms at the Auditorium Annex and after a conference with a lawyer, who talked to her about her $6,000,000 settlement with her husband, Mrs. Allen F. Black, whose divorce has caused a sensation among her Chicago friends, slipped away to New York. Before leaving she said it was true there had been a $6,000,000 settlement with her husband.

Mrs. Black is petite, dark and pretty. Black gowned, heavily veiled and stylishly trim, she stood in the bowers of American beauties and Easter lilies that filled her rooms at the Annex to overflowing, drawing on her gloves and directing her maid.

"Yes, I am going back to New York at once. That is all that I will say."

"It is true, Mrs. Black, that there has been a $6,000,000 settlement between Mr. Black and yourself?"

"I a[illegible]"

The mystery promised to be settled at last, but Mrs. Black straightened her orders again. "I shall say positively nothing at all about my affairs," she announced.

SCOUR WOODS AND RIVER BANK TO FIND GIRL.

They have heard that a woman acting mysteriously has been seen in several towns, but in no [illegible] has the trail led them to [illegible]

It is believed that Miss Pike was distraught through [illegible] grief and may have cast herself into the Merrimac river. There are a large body of men seeking for her; the river bank has been patrolled for miles and the woods thoroughly searched.

Mrs. Pike, the missing woman's mother, grieves pitiably.

MRS. CHADWICK'S BAIL NOW $52,000

Cincinnati, O., April 15.—The court of appeals from four minutes' deliberation this morning decided that Mrs. Chadwick can be released from jail under her ten-year sentence, pending a new trial in the court of appeals, if she can give $5,000 bail.

This bail has reference only to the case in which she was convicted. The total amount of bail she must give to secure her freedom is now $52,000.

LITTLE GIRL SAVES HOME FROM BURNING.

Brave little May Raphael, eight years old, of No. 388 Sumner street, East Boston, by her presence of mind and quick action prevented what might have been a disastrous fire yesterday. By giving the alarm of fire which had broken out in her mother's kitchen she saved several thousand dollars' worth of tenement property and gave [illegible]

Little May was seen at her home shortly after the fire by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, and she told modestly her experience.

"After mamma and papa had gone to work," she said, "I stayed in the house for fifteen minutes, and then locked up the house and went into the yard to play with my pets. [illegible] I had been out there about ten minutes when I happened to look up into the kitchen windows and saw flames and smoke.

"I didn't stop to think, but just ran in and unlocked the door and looked in. The room was full of smoke, and I was frightened. I [illegible] and ran up stairs to Mrs. O'Neil and asked her for help.

"Mrs. O'Neil ran down stairs and gave the alarm. Then she came back, got a tub of water and tried to put out the blaze."

BLONDIN WILL USE FORTUNE TO FREE HIS SON.

Salem, April 15.—"I firmly believe in my son's innocence, and all my money will be devoted to securing proof of it," said Theophile Blondin to a SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter this evening. He has come from Canada for the purpose of securing a pardon for his son, Wilfrid Blondin, who is now serving a life sentence in Charlestown, having been convicted of the murder of his wife on Green street, Boston, taking the body to a trunk to a [illegible] and hiding it in the woods. The elder Blondin with his son's counsel, J. B. D. Jacques, will visit the State House next week and ask Governor Douglas for clemency. They assert that they have discovered new evidence which will prove the innocence of the supposed murderer.

"I have visited the various places connected with the case," Mr. Blondin continued. "I have also talked with Wilfrid in Charlestown. He pleaded his innocence, and I believe him.

"I am not a rich man now, but every cent I have is at the disposal of my son's lawyer."

Mr. Blondin is a wealthy retired lumberman. His home is in St. Polycarpe, Canada, near Montreal.

ROMANCE LED TO MABEL WALKER MARRIAGE.

Joseph Grundy, of Melrose, Has Become the Husband of the Missing Witness in Tucker Trial for Murder

MET HER FIRST IN THE WILDS OF MAINE

Damariscotta, Me., April 15.—Romance primeval in its simplicity and a courtship amid the woods and the wilds of Maine led to the marriage of pretty Mabel Walker to Joseph Edward Grundy of No. 18 Cottage street, Melrose. Miss Walker was the young girl for whom a wide search was made at the time of the trial of Charles L. Tucker for the murder of Mabel Page. She had been with Tucker on the day of the murder.

It was only after the Auburndale man had been found guilty of murder that she reappeared. She had [illegible] been hiding in the home of her aunt, Mrs. Gamage, in Damariscotta. Later she declared that she would take the stand for Tucker if a new trial were granted. Now she will come to Melrose [illegible] young husband, and may later appear as a witness in the event of a new trial for Tucker.

Romance Becomes Known.

Now, with the marriage of Miss Walker to Mr. Grundy last Monday, their romance has become known. The wedding was a surprise to the friends of each, as the courtship had been a secret.

Miss Walker and Mr. Grundy met a year ago last fall, during the hunting season.

Were Much Together.

During the two weeks of his stay he and the girl were together a great deal.

When Mr. Grundy's vacation was up the two parted with heavy hearts, but there came then a constant correspondence. Then proposal, acceptance and marriage.

LEGISLATORS WILL MAKE TOUR IN AUTOMOBILES.

The automobile will make its first appearance as a legislative agent next week. It will be employed as the means of transportation by the Committee on Street Railways in going over the three routes proposed for the various Boston and Providence street railway projects.

The committee purposes going over every foot of the routes petitioned for by the companies and [illegible] that the automobiles will allow [illegible] freedom of action that they could not get from the use of trams or trains. Big touring cars will be used by the committee and they will leave the State House Tuesday morning for the two days' jaunt.

It is seldom that a measure is defeated after it has been passed to be enacted other than by the disapproval of the executive. This, however, occurred during the current week, and has shaped the "cider" bill as one of the notable measures of the session. This bill, if it had become a law, would have permitted the sale at retail of cider containing three per cent. alcohol. The statute now limits the amount of alcohol in "non intoxicating" beverages to one per cent.

The "public policy" bill did not find favor in the Senate, although it passed the House. This is the measure which seeks to have submitted to the voters of counties, cities and towns, upon petition of ten per cent. of their number, any question of public policy. Senator Peters of Suffolk is not satisfied with the vote of the Senate and will move to reconsider the vote.

The indications are of a warm fight in the House on the "merger" bill authorizing railroad companies to purchase the stock of railways of street railway companies. The bill has passed the Senate but not in a form satisfactory to very many interested. It will be reached next Tuesday.

SELFISHNESS OF MEN CAUSE OF RACE SUICIDE.

Mrs. Wright Sewall Scores the Increasing Vulgarity of Public Opinion Upon the Relations of Men and Women

SEES DANGER OF RACE BECOMING EXTINCT

Higher Conception of Men's Responsibilities Needed, She Says—"Absurd to Blame Women for Marriage Decline"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

[illegible] discussed by [illegible] the Mothers' Congress [illegible] Council of Women, and [illegible] council [illegible]

[illegible] interesting [illegible] BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN by Mrs. May Wright Sewall, [illegible] the National Council and of the International Council of Women, which met last year in [illegible]

Mrs. Sewall said:

By Mrs. May Wright Sewall.

I made no attack on the President. What I attacked was the increasing vulgarity of public opinion on the relations between men and women. I believe that there is a great menace to the family, and, consequently to the state, indicated by certain tendencies of opinion and [illegible] I consider the tendency to [illegible] the responsibility of women and [illegible]

Hold Fathers Responsible.

From my point of view it is entirely impossible to exaggerate the necessity for purity, devotion and responsibility which should be required of mothers. My plea is that society men shall be trained to demand not less of purity, devotion and sense of responsibility in fathers. I believe that there are dangers of race degeneration, if not immediate danger of race extinction. There is no doubt that one of these dangers proceeds from the selfishness, the love of ease and the personal vanity of women [illegible] from these causes are moved to criminal desires and criminal deeds to escape what they consider the burdens of maternity. These conditions cannot be too seriously deprecated nor too severely reprimanded by anyone; but this evasion by married women of the maternity which is the crown of the wife, is but one cause of the existing menace to family life.

Men are not less selfish, not less ease-loving, nor less desirous of seeking material comfort and physical luxury at the expense of the sacrifice of children than our women.

It is ridiculous to talk as if women were to blame solely for the postponement of marriage [illegible] when does not permit women to propose marriage. Men postpone [illegible] and live from [illegible] boarding houses that they may be spared the responsibility of [illegible] furnace running and that they may escape other small duties which fall to the lot of the average independent householder; and they do this because they love ease, comfort and luxury more than the chaste pleasures of family life accompanied by its responsibilities.

Women Willing to Marry.

Of hundreds of women I know the working portion would gladly give up the independence of a personal wage and salary and do the housework in their homes, if young men of equal purity of personal life and equally fine domestic and moral feelings should give them a chance to help to build a pure home and produce pure, untainted children.

The young women of the second class referred to, daughters of homes of comfort and luxury, would leave their present round of afternoon teas and evening receptions and go from their present luxurious environment under their parents' roofs with joy for the chance to carry out their own ideals and their own purposes in founding a simple home with some young man of their own class, equally willing to give up his bachelor luxuries for the more dignified estate of husbandhood and paternity.

Men Equally Responsible.

What I deprecate is talking about the production and nurture of children as if women had a sole responsibility concerning them. I realize that in the nature of the case the mother has not only the stronger pre-natal influence over the child, but also the greater influence during its first years. I consider it a blot upon civilization that the educational system of a country which [illegible] boasts of its intelligence and culture, gives no attention to the functions of wifehood and motherhood in the education of its girls. Notwithstanding this defect in the education of girls, generally speaking, they are much better prepared in body and mind for their duties as wives and mothers than young men are for their duties as husbands and fathers.

Let fathers in their homes, and men teachers in their schools, and rabbis and priests and clergymen in their respective pulpits, and the press everywhere give a little attention to the physical habits and consequent physical condition and to the moral ideals of men.

Let all these agents of public opinion unite to divide rather more equally [illegible] attention between men and women in respect to the dangers which assail the family and the means by which these dangers may be reduced and warded off. A single year of the concentration of homes, schools, pulpit and press upon the education of boys and the responsibilities of men in respect to family life would create a change in the social atmosphere which is sorely needed.

Let us stand for quality and character in the individual, such quality and character in men as can only cope with [illegible], and such quality and character in women as can only come in [illegible]. These conditions being secured, there will be no fear of race suicide.

Berlin, April 15. The people of Berlin are in a state of panic at a rumor circulated here that the Kaiser, who went to Sicily in search of health, is seriously ill and is said to have spotted fever.

The official papers have thus far issued no denial of the rumor, but only in a general way assured that the Kaiser is in the best of health, but if the excitement continues an official denial will be absolutely necessary.

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone, Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone, the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals in this country and others. We cured all kinds of germ diseases with it—thousands of the most difficult cases obtainable. We proved that in germ troubles it always accomplishes what medicine cannot do. Now we ask you to try it—try it at our expense. Test it as we did; see what it does. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do. You will use it, not only to get well, but to keep well. And it will save nearly all of your sickness.

Kills Inside Germs

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has for more than 20 years been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that we have spent over one million dollars to supply the first bottle free to each sick one we learned of.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

NATURE'S ESSENCE.

Extracted From Forest Plants.

Go straight back to Nature for your health. There is your strength. Consider your body as an engine which supplies you with all activity, mind and body. Keep the machinery well oiled and it runs smoothly. It does not grind nor groan in the doing of its work. But let the stomach, which is the safety valve to the human engine get out of kilter and we soon meet with disaster. The product of undigested and decomposing food is poison to the system. We do not live on what we eat but on what we digest, assimilate, and take up in the blood. The blood in turn feeds the nerves, the heart, and all goes well with us if the human filter within us does not get clogged up, if poisons do not accumulate in the body from over-eating indigestible food, over-drinking, heating, alcoholic beverages or hurriedly doing both. The smash-up occurs when the blood is poisoned by the stomach and liver being unable to take care of the overload! The red flag of danger is thrown out in the shape of eruptions on the skin, or nervousness and sleeplessness, which become constant because the nerves are starved and the person feels blue, despondent and irritable. Nature's laws are perfect if we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries there that we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the wild-cherry tree, the root of mandrake, stone root, stillingia, blood-root and golden seal, make a scientific, non alcoholic extract of them with just the right proportions and you have Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this vegetable extract and alterative of the greatest efficiency.

Just the sort of spring remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that lassitude and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of public approval and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an alterative extract of roots, herbs and barks, without a particle of alcohol or narcotics, which purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature's own way. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is just the tissue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, or pneumonia. No matter how strong the constitution our stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" after a long, hard winter, in consequence our blood is disordered for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body. If you take this natural blood purifier and tonic you will assist your system in manufacturing each day a pint of rich, arterial blood, that is stimulating to the brain and nerves. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience at this time of the year is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin and feeling "blue." Dr. Pierce's "Discovery" cures all blood humors as well as being a tonic that makes one vigorous, strong and forceful.

POPE LAUGHS AS TOLD TO 'LOOK PLEASANT.'

Special Cable to Boston American.

London, April 15.—J. H. Histed, a London photographer, who was summoned to Rome to take some special photographs of Pope Pius X., has returned to town. Mr Histed talks as follows about his meeting with the Pope

"I arrived at the Vatican at 7 30, so as to have time to prepare my camera and see that all was in readiness

"After passing the examination of the officer of the Swiss Guard—for no one is admitted without due scrutiny into the Vatican, and every one has to pass at least three examinations by guards before being able to reach the Holy Father—I arrived at the temporary studio

"There the attendants allotted to me helped me to finish my preparations and as the clock struck eight just 8 everything was prepared for the Pope

"The time slipped away, and he did not come. I feared that something had arisen Suddenly, although I neither saw nor heard anything, the people in the room ceased talking and gazed in the direction of the door, which, thrown wide open, gave a view of a long gallery In a moment, quite alone, a figure clothed in simple white garments was seen approaching It was the Pope.

"We all dropped on our knees as he entered, with one of the sweetest smiles I have ever seen on a man's face he greeted us, and coming over to me he extended his hand, and I kissed his ring, then, nodding to the rest, he announced that he was ready for the operation

"His Holiness was delightful to photograph He made such a splendid picture, with his fine muscular frame and massive head Plate after plate was exposed, the Pope watching the operations with the greatest interest and making continual comments to his private secretary

"Once when he was sitting I ejaculated, 'Oh, if he would only keep that pleasant expression for a moment.' The secretary at once translated it into Italian, and his Holiness went off into a hearty roar of laughter 'Too bad,' he said, 'don't I always look pleasant?'

"Then I asked if he would consent to wear a 'cope' over his white cassock He is most simple in his dress, in fact, the Pope is by far the most plainly dressed man in all his gorgeous court

He consented, and a magnificent robe was arranged around him.

"I ventured to request that he would allow me to take a picture of him conferring his blessing

"In absolute silence the Pontiff rose from the throne, and, descending, placed his hands on me and blessed me, then glided silently from the room

Diplomat Who Has Seen Service in Russia Declares That All the Stories Point Ominously to Ruler's Tragic Removal

Special Cable to Boston American.

Berlin, April 15.—Rumors that the Czar is losing his mind will not down, particularly since various German insanity experts have gone on mysterious missions to St Petersburg. It is claimed that Grand Duke Paul admitted to a friend that the Czar is suffering "from a deep mental depression" that brought on a long fit of sleeplessness. Insomnia, he said, sapped the Czar's bodily and mental strength to the point of exhaustion

From another source it is learned that among the symptoms submitted to a well known expert was this The Czar spends hours kneeling before his ikons, mumbling prayers. When his wife or Ministers suggest the pressure of business he flies into paroxysms of rage.

It is reported that when M. Witte talked to the Czar earnestly the other day on the necessity of making peace, Nicholas interrupted him with the words: "Stop your noise—it hurts my head" Witte felt so insulted that he replied "Under these circumstances it will be very hard for Your Majesty's Ministers to discharge their duties."

During the same session he called his Ministers liars, accusing them of withholding the truth from him These and similar fits of temper are steadily on the increase

The Czar characterizes his more or less voluntary stay at the country seat as imprisonment imposed by a clique of scheming politicians, and he seems to have confidence in no one but John of Kronstadt, who is forever inventing new prayers for the Emperor

When these reports were submitted to a diplomat who has seen much service in Russia, he said "Such stories and rumors coming from Russia are most ominous They indicate that the clique of Grand Dukes and other leading politicians intend to get rid of the monarch Just before Czar Paul was throttled to death by his own officers, every European court echoed with stories of the 'eccentricities' and 'despotism' of the Czar Knowing Nicholas as I do, I feel inclined to believe the stories [illegible] [illegible] weakness being the main characteristic of his mind and body, it would be but natural, if both were giving away at the same time Physically and mentally he is a most pitiable object yet the world will shudder when it hears that he paid the usual penalty"

Paris, April 15.—Duse and Bernhardt, erstwhile the best of friends, have had a falling out, and now they coldly bow as they pass by

When the Italian tragedienne was here before, Madame Bernhardt lent her theatre to Signora Duse; since then, however, Sarah has published her memoirs, and in them appears an article criticizing the Duse's acting. For this the beautiful Italian will never forgive her French friend, and when Madame Bernhardt wrote to her offering her playhouse again, for the series of performances which Eleanore Duse is now giving here, she received the following reply

"I shall never forget your hospitality. You had accustomed me to a gentle intimacy, which on my part had become a deep and respected admiration Alas! Why! oh, why! madame, can my heart no longer go out to yours? I cannot ignore the opinion expressed by you on my art. I can neither ignore, nor accept, nor forget it.

"On the other hand, the remembrance of your little judgment on me must not cause me to forget your early kindness I keep both the memory of one and of the other."

Big Auto Races Are Planned at Morris Park Track This Season

Special to the Sunday American.

New York, April 15.—Great racing is promised by amateur autoists at Morris Park track this Summer. The Morris Park Motor Racing Club has decided to promote contests of speed between its members on the only exclusively automobile race course in the world.

A flood of applications for membership have been received at this early date and the limit of 250 will be reached long before the opening meeting on May 20. Although the full list of officials has not been completed, it has been learned that among the governors are Colonel John Jacob Astor, William S. Fanshawe, Albert R. Shattuck, Winthrop E. Scarritt, William C. Reick, Robert Lee Morrell, Jay Cooke, 3d, Edmund Randolph, Arthur Iselin, William P. Hamilton, J. Horace Harding and Dave Hennen Morris.

It is now planned to offer a silver trophy for the championship of the club. Contests will be arranged between members at frequent intervals, and the prize will be awarded to the members scoring the greatest number of points during the season, counting four points for finishing first, two points for second and one for third.

This remarkable baseball picture was taken at Soldiers Field just before the Harvard squad left on their Southern trip. As may be seen in the snapshot, Charley Leonard, the former Newton High lad and most promising candidate for third base honors, to take the place of "Shorty" Carr, has just bunted the ball in front of the pitcher's box. Stone, who is also a newcomer for backstop laurels, is just running down for the ball in order to nail the batter at first. These two players are among the most promising on the Crimson nine at present, and it would not be surprising if they developed into real diamond stars. Leonard, at least, is a player of great ability, and will undoubtedly make third permanently.

Pitcher Jackson, Besides Striking Out Ten New York Batsmen, Scored a Victory with His Timely Three-Bagger

Special to the Sunday American.

New Haven, April 15.—Yale defeated Columbia in a close and hard-fought game at Yale Field this afternoon. The score was 2 to 1 in favor of the Elis, and all the scoring was done in the fifth inning. SULLIVAN TO MEET GARDNER IN RING AT NEW BEDFORD.

One of the best battles that has taken place in New England for many days is slated at New Bedford on Wednesday night when Jimmy Gardner, the stellar lightweight of Lowell, meets Peter Sullivan, the pride of Fall River, in a fifteen round bout. The Whale City sports will have the benefit of seeing Gardner for the last time [illegible] before he leaves for the West to fight for the lightweight championship with Jimmy Britt, who is picked to beat Jabez White, the Englishman. Sullivan will be a tough man for Gardner as he will have whatever advantage there is in weight and his two victories over Jimmy Briggs shows something of his mettle. His own city will back him heavily on the result as they believe that he is a coming champion in his class. Gardner is training at Highland Lake for the bout.

Another important event is scheduled for Patriot's Day afternoon at Lawrence at the West End [illegible] A. C., as Young Kenney of Lawrence and Chief Tucker of New York will meet for a twelve round mill to a decision.

If Kenney can defeat Tucker he will be at the head of the New England featherweights, as Tucker won decisively from [illegible] and has had hot bouts with [illegible] Briggs. Kenney is coming along fast and gives much promise with a little more experience. The other bouts are [illegible] Boston vs. Willie Mack, [illegible] Jack Grant, Haverhill, vs. Bill Keefe, Lawrence; Jack Sealy vs. Kid [illegible]

JUNIORS WON AT WESLEYAN

Middletown, April 15.—The Wesleyan interclass track meet was held on Andrews Field [illegible] morning, and resulted in a victory for the juniors, who secured 54 points. The sophomores were second with 24 points, the seniors third with 29 points and the freshmen fourth with 12 points. [illegible] broke the college record of [illegible] feet 11 inches in the shot putting, but [illegible] refused to give his exact [illegible] of the figures of the meet.

ORMONDE'S RIGHT LEADS THE FIELD HOME IN RICH CARTA HANDICAP

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, April 15.—The eleventh annual Carter Handicap for three-year-olds and upwards at seven furlongs, worth considerably over $8,000, was run and won here this afternoon. More than 20,000 spectators wildly acclaimed Ormonde's Right the winner over the much touted Roseben, with Little Em third. Eighteen horses started.

The time was 1.26 4-5, which is four-fifths of a second slower than Israelite's track record made November 5, 1904.

From the head of the stretch [illegible] Ormonde's Right [illegible] at the first [illegible] price of 4 to 1, and Roseben [illegible] Johnson's colors and ridden by [illegible] whose price had soared from [illegible] to 1 to 10 to 1, coupled up at the head of the [illegible] stretch.

The air was warm, the sun shone bright, the track was fast and 20,000 people crowded the [illegible] grand stand, swarmed over the lawns and into the paddock and betting ring.

The New Jockey Club rule, barring betting commissioners and messengers from the grand stand, cast a temporary damper on the spirits of hundreds of women, but the "professional escort" solved the problem for the unescorted woman who wanted to put down a bet.

The Results:

FIRST RACE—Selling, three-year-olds and upward, five furlongs. Consideration, 107 (Hildebrand), 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; Right and True, 107 (Crimmins), 9 to 1 and 3 to 1, second; Tea-cress, 104 (W. Davis), 2 to 1 and even, third. Time—1.01 4-5. King Pepper, Monte Carlo, Emergency, Miss Modesty, Minnesqua, Tim Hurst, Essie L., Carrie Jones, Memphis, Fairy Dance, Et Tu Brute, Tommy Waddell and Race Queen also ran.

SECOND RACE—[illegible]

THIRD RACE—[illegible] Arsenal, 111 [illegible] Hoffman [illegible] Palette, Merrimana, [illegible] also ran.

FOURTH RACE—The Carter handicap, three-year-olds and upwards, seven furlongs. Ormonde's Right, 110 (W. Davis), [illegible] to 1 and 2 to 1, won; [illegible] 10 to 1 and 4 to 1, second; [illegible] dox, Diamond Flush, Leonidas, Toscan, Santa Catalina, Jack Ratlin, W. [illegible] Floral King [illegible] also ran.

FIFTH RACE—[illegible] four furlongs [illegible] 102 [illegible] and 10 to 1, won; Kenyon J., 94 (Gamb) 4 to 1 and 8 to 5, second; Special License, 97 (M. Daniel), 8 to 1 and 3 to 1, third. Time—.50 3-5. Verdant, Odd Ella, All Pins, Nellie Burn, First Word, Ethel Hayman, Rickey, Belamo, Jassamine, Dr. Coffey, Montau, Grafton also ran.

SIXTH RACE—Three-year-olds, six furlongs. Sir Brillar, 110 (J. Kelly), 7 to 1 and 9 to 5, won; Confessor, 104 (Kent), 12 to 1 and 2 to 1, second; Jerry C., 110 (Hildebrand), 5 to 1 and 4 to 5, second. Belle Strome, Oro also ran.

High Wind Marred Yale's Spring Athletic Contests

Special to the Sunday American.

New Haven, April 15.—Yale track athletes held their annual Spring meet today, and, with the wind strong against them, made first class time in the running events. Charley Hall, a sophomore, made the best showing of the day by taking the mile run from the favorite, Charley Alcott, in four minutes and thirty-five seconds. Bob Twitchell [illegible] sprints by his [illegible] from [illegible] baseball [illegible] vault with eleven feet [illegible] of the surprises of the [illegible] summary:

220-yard dash—Won by [illegible] Robinson, third, H. G. Alexander, 1907. Time [illegible]

ROSLINDALE TO HAVE STRONG BALL TEAM

Roslindale will probably have the strongest team on the diamond this season that has ever represented that burg. Last season they defeated most of the strong semi-professional organizations in this district, and [illegible] this year [illegible] will start off their [illegible] with the fast travelling Woburn team on Patriots' Day. They desire to arrange other games, also. Billy Ferris has been selected as manager. PRINCETON AFTER HARD STRUGGLE BEAT BROWN.

Dickinson's Muff of Hayes's Throw to Second Let Heine Cross Plate with Only Tally of Game—Tigers Won 1 to 0

Providence, R. I., April 15.—In a game which was characterized by clean and snappy fielding on both sides and also by Brown's weakness at the bat, Princeton defeated Brown by a single run scored in the ninth inning.

In the ninth inning, Heine opened up with a double into deep left and Wells followed with a pretty single. McLean and Cooney were easily disposed of, the former popping a fly to Barod and the latter sending [illegible] grounder [illegible] An [illegible] was made [illegible] Heine napping on third and failing [illegible] in this Hayes [illegible] ball to Dickinson [illegible] second base. [illegible] pretty well [illegible] Dickinson muffed the ball and Heine scored. Score:

Five times they took desperate chances in stealing when they should have waited for a hit and each time a runner was lost. Trinity put up no star game, but managed to win out by a little hard work.

[illegible] grounds, Philadelphia, Pa., [illegible] Champs were beaten [illegible] of [illegible] in a sensational finish. [illegible] Parent, usually so reliable, [illegible] grounders get away from him in the [illegible] came along a couple of [illegible] deed was done, score 6 to 5.

The Bostons started off like race horses and had five runs to their credit before an Athletic [illegible] crossed the plate. Tannehill [illegible] getting along nicely, and [illegible] over the centre field fence [illegible] did not worry the world [illegible]

[illegible] the Athletics went after [illegible] and came within an [illegible] They knocked in [illegible] four hits, including [illegible] and then Collins sent him to the [illegible]

Gibson Called Upon to Pitch.

Gibson was called upon to save the day, and [illegible] he did right nobly [illegible] Then the Athletics [illegible] the first man up. [illegible] Gibson and was thrown [illegible] came to the [illegible] toward second base [illegible] got the ball but [illegible]

Lave Cross Singled.

[illegible] fouled a couple, and it looked [illegible] but he finally planted a [illegible] to left field, and Long, [illegible] came home with the [illegible]

[illegible] up from the 11,369 [illegible] fans and they rushed on the [illegible] the winning ball players [illegible] picked up their [illegible] into their has and went [illegible] They will have something [illegible] over Sunday [illegible] essayed to fool the [illegible] at the start off [illegible] nothing mysterious about [illegible] after the Bostons had pounded [illegible] was passed to the woods, [illegible] Rube Waddell went to the [illegible]

Rube' Did Very Well.

[illegible] did very well, the Champs getting only four hits off his delivery in six innings. The Bostons came within a small margin of getting the game on ice in their half of the sixth inning. With two down, [illegible] around to third when [illegible] Topsey Hartsel's [illegible]

[illegible] to the left field [illegible] looked good for the [illegible] ground [illegible] Hoffman raced back and the crowd [illegible] for him. As he reached the [illegible] high in the air and pulled [illegible] with one hand, rolling over [illegible] the catch.

In the [illegible] with one down, Burkett and Parent [illegible] singled but Stahl fouled [illegible] Collins sent a fly to Seybold.

Champs Had Good Start.

The Champs opened the game in a [illegible] manner. Burkett laced a sharp grounder past the third bag. Parent sacrificed him to second and he scored on Stahl's stinging line single to right. [illegible] drew a base on balls. Freeman [illegible] between Davis and Murphy on which Stahl crossed the plate. Lachance put a [illegible] hit right in Seybold's hands and Ferris fanned.

There was nothing doing in the second, but in the third the Champs enjoyed a [illegible] jubilee. Stahl, the first man up, cracked a safe liner to right. Seybold got his mitt on it, but it was too hot to hold. Collins followed with a two base drive to the right field fence. Freeman scored both men with another single between Davis and Murphy. "Buck" raced to second on the throw in and took third on Lachance's sacrifice bunt.

Ferris struck out again, but Farrell, who replaced Doran on account of an injury to the latter's finger dumped a Texas Leaguer into left field sending Freeman across the plate. Tannehill was third out on a long fly to Hartsel.

Harry Davis's Homer.

The Athletics could not get a safe hit until the third, when, with two down, Harry Davis smashed the ball over the centre field fence for a home run. Lave Cross followed with a single to right, but was [illegible] off trying by Tannehill.

[illegible] Waddell relieved Coakley in the fourth and easily disposed of the three Bostonians. Then the Athletics came in [illegible] Tannehill to the bench, nearly tying the score with [illegible] swats.

Seybold led off with a single over second base. Murphy advanced him on a grounder to Ferris. Knight came to the front with [illegible] scoring Seybold. Schreck [illegible] and Knight [illegible] although Parent might have caught him had he received the ball instead of [illegible] Waddell fanned, but Hartsel sent Schreck home with a single over second. Hoffman ended the agony by striking out for [illegible] time.

NEW YORK, 4; WASHINGTON, 0.

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Fully 4,000 fans braved chilling weather this afternoon to see the second game between Washington and New York. They were rewarded by a great contest, it being a pitchers' battle between [illegible] and Orth. Batting of Williams for New York and [illegible] for Washington were features of the game. [illegible] had his hand badly split in the [illegible] inning by a line drive [illegible] retired the [illegible] when game was called on account of darkness. Score:

CLEVELAND 6; DETROIT 2.

Cleveland, April 15.—Cleveland defeated Detroit in the opening game of the American League season this afternoon, due to the clever pitching of Moore. He worked the spit ball at all times and with men on bases was effective.

McIntyre was the only man who appeared to be able to solve his delivery. Cleveland batted Mullen when hits meant runs. Manager Lajoie's system of [illegible] was responsible for five of the first six [illegible] the team work being a most perfect. Despite the [illegible] there were fully 7,000 people present to witness the initial game. A snow storm at noon nearly prevented all chances for the opening, but Manager Lajoie wanted to play the game at all hazards. Score:

SOME DIAMOND DUST.

* * *

Hoffman evidently remembered the time last Spring when Tannehill nearly killed him with a pitched ball. When he first stepped to the plate he stood away back and allowed Tannehill to fool him on three wide benders which [illegible] at weakly.

* * *

Monte Cross was out of the game on account of injury the first time in eighteen years.

* * *

* * *

Doran split the middle finger of his throwing hand on a third strike, and retired from the game, Farrell taking his place. The Duke cracked out a single the first time up.

* * *

Doran will be out of it for three or four days. It was hard luck. The Champs batted hard all the time. Harry Davis only had seven put-outs.

* * *

"The season is young yet," said Collins after supper. "It isn't often that Freddy Parent goes astray, especially in a pinch."

* * *

Both games were hard to lose. Ninety nine times out of a hundred the Bostons would have won them both. The Champs will journey to Newark on Sunday for an exhibition game with the Eastern Leaguers.

* * *

Another game here on Monday, and then the Bostons will tackle the E. Z. Marks at Washington.

HARVARD DEFEATS WEST POINT NINE

HOBE FERRIS SECOND BASEMAN, OF HUB CHAMPS.

Ferris, who lives in Providence, is one of the most popular men, both with the fans and with baseball players themselves, on the diamond to-day. When it came to a shake-down last season, despite the fact that he had been hitting weakly all season, Ferris proved that he could swat the ball.

This picture shows "Hobe" Ferris, the crack second-baseman of the Champs, during practice at Philadelphia, where he was snapped especially for the Boston American. "Hobe" hasn't displayed any of his old-time form, as yet, and the fans are hoping that he will get into trim, so that he and Fred Parent can work their familiar double plays.

RACES AT OLD SAUGUS.

Saugus, April 15.—W. F. Hitchings says that the six early closing classes for the July meeting at Old Saugus and the four early closing classes for the August meeting at Dover have filled well. The classes at Old Saugus has received the best entry in the history of these summer events.

Now [illegible] she is rejoicing in the happiness of a reunion with the husband she has never ceased to love, she is bending every energy to help the woman who [illegible] separation.

By letters full of pity and love, she tries to comfort her.

"She needs so much pity, so much help," said Mrs. Drake. "Poor girl! What a price she is paying! But it will be the making of her.

"She will come out of this a better, stronger, [illegible] more intelligent woman. Some day I hope she will know the greatness of a pure love. I feel like a sister to her.

"From the very first, I have loved and pitied her as I would my sister."

Soon Mr. and Mrs. Drake will take possession of a new home in East Weymouth, where they will begin life anew.

"Mr. Drake knows the truth now," she says. "It will make us both so much happier. Perhaps this was a great test, and probably I needed it.

It was all for the best for each one of the three of us. Time will prove it so."

THEY'RE OFF! FOR ONE OF HOVEY'S HOUSE LOTS

GREAT HOUSE LOT SALE AT LAKE VIEW PARK

Grand Opening Day, April 19

PATRIOTS' DAY,

BUT YOU CAN BUY NOW

$59—HOUSE LOTS—$59

ONLY $2 DOWN AND $1 A WEEK.

FREE EXCURSION

EVERY DAY.

LAKE VIEW PARK is located on the line of the Boston & Worcester Electric cars, and one of the prettiest suburbs of Boston, bordering on one of the finest lakes in Mass. Grand chance for camping, boating and fishing. The lots are all high, dry and level as a house floor. All surveyed, staked off, and numbers painted on every stake. The streets are all made, and rolled, and are as smooth as a race track. Lake View Park is a perfect paradise, and you will say so when you see it. We sell you a first-class house lot for $59, only $2 down and $1 per week. Water front lots a little higher in price; $5 down and $2 a week. We ask for no notes; no mortgages; no interest; no taxes; all we do ask of you is to give us a chance to show you Lake View Park at our expense. We shall run a free excursion every day, commencing to-day; but don't fail to be with us April 19th (Patriots' Day). Take no man's word, where your money is concerned; depend on your own judgment; and see what you can see. Put your money into something right near your home, where you can see and judge for yourself; something you can see growing in value from day to day; something you know something about, and something that will increase your dividends more and more as the years roll by. Call at our office any day for free round trip tickets. Free tickets for all. Remember and don't forget to be with us Wednesday, April 19th (Patriots' Day). A good nice lunch will be served at the park. T. F. HOVEY, 89 Court st., room 2; office tel. Haymarket No. 110; home telephone, Brookline 1034-4.

NAHANT AND NANTASKET may be illuminated this summer with electricity generated by the Wave-Power Accumulator, soon to be incorporated under the name of The Ocean Electric Power Company, with a capital of $5,000,000, two-fifths of which, $2,000,000, to be applied to planting generating batteries at favorable points along the coast. Eminent engineers believe that the Wave-Power Accumulator will bring the cost of generating electricity down to a figure where it can economically be used not only for power and illumination, but also for warming houses and cooking. It is calculated that a 500-horsepower battery at Nantasket Beach would add 100,000 people annually to its visiting list, an item of no small importance to the Park Commission, the hotel people, cottage rental and to steamboat and railroad owners. The inventor desires a gentleman of some means, known and respected, to join him in forming a board of directors and in promoting the enterprise. Address O. E. P. C., 262 Washington st., room 39, when an interview will be arranged and full particulars confided.

$35—BAY MARE

HERE IS A BARGAIN.

THE MASSACHUSETTS BAKING CO.'S entire stock of horses for sale at an enormous sacrifice; this company is in the hands of a trustee; he has put the lot in our hands for immediate sale at the lowest prices ever quoted in Boston; we must turn these horses into money at once; the lot comprises 10 head, ranging in weight from 1,200 to 1,500 lbs.; this concern had only used these horses about 7 months when they became involved in financial difficulties; if you want a horse of any kind at bottom price you can surely find one to suit you among this lot; trial allowed; in order to secure any of these horses you must come early the coming week. 32 Cambridge st., Charlestown.

LOOK, $85.

NICE family and business mare; has been driven by the owner for the past two years; color bay, weight 1,070 lbs., 7 years old; only reason for selling is that the owner leaves for the West and needs ready money; anyone desiring an honest horse that will road 10 miles an hour should not fail to look at this mare; will allow thorough trial to intending purchaser. 32 Cambridge st., Charlestown.

BAY CHUNK, $100.

AGE 7; sound and kind in every respect; true to work double or single; weighing 1,400 lbs.; short legged; in fact, the best looking Canada chunk in Boston to-day; if you are looking for a bargain in horse flesh here it is; just the horse for trucking or farm work; right as a clock. 32 Cambridge st., Charlestown.

Ice Cream or Baker's Wagon

ALSO horse and harness; $85 buys whole team; horse warranted and two weeks' trial allowed. 32 Cambridge st., Sullivan sq., Charlestown.

WHOLE OUTFIT.

CHESTNUT HORSE; weight 1,000 lbs., 15 hands high; carriage and harness; gentle and stylish; nice family horse; anyone can drive him; we will allow two weeks' trial to any responsible party. 32 Cambridge st., Charlestown.

A GRAND PAIR FOR THE FARM.

THIS PAIR weighs 2,800 lbs., will work single or double, 8 and 9 years old; as true a pair as ever hitched to a wagon; has been used on a newspaper delivery wagon; trial allowed. 32 Cambridge st., Charlestown.

P. S.—We have 100 head of horses and mares of all descriptions in matched pairs and single too numerous to mention here, which we will be pleased to show to intending purchasers, and if you travel the State over you will not find a better lot of acclimated horses; we warrant them as we represent them, and allow two weeks' trial on all horses; anyone having horses to sell will do well to have them consigned to us, as we are the largest dealers in Massachusetts, having anywhere from 150 to 200 head on hand at all times; come in and look our stock over before buying; we are always glad to see old customers, and also to make new ones.

Do You Want a Harness?

WE have 20 sets of second hand harness, both single and double, in A1 shape; if you want a harness of any kind for almost nothing here is the chance; these harnesses will go like hot cakes; if you want them do not delay. 32 Cambridge st., Charlestown.

Start an Express Business.

WE have a full express rig all ready to put to work, comprising bay horse, wagon and harness; just the thing for a man to use in the express business; the owner of this outfit has been ordered to go South by his doctor at once and is sadly in need of the money to pay his expenses, and has left it with us to sell at once. 32 Cambridge st., Charlestown.

$165

This outfit cost its owner $325 8 months ago; reason for selling is that the owner's contract with the city has run out and he must turn it into dollars at once; pair weighs 2,700 lbs, 8 and 9 years old; will work single or double.

$1000 FOR A BUST!

Ladies, this is no idle talk! We will give you $1,000 for a case (not deformed) in which we cannot enlarge and develop the bosom of any female of a reasonable age. Bring the lady to our office and we will treat her; if we don't enlarge her bust from 4 to 10 inches, we will cheerfully pay the money. Dr. Conway's Bust Tablets is the only remedy that will do it without injury. A scientific medical triumph; an internal remedy; the only way it can be done; it never fails. By the use of Dr. Conway's Bust Tablets, flat-chested women and girls are developed, breasts lost by nursing are restored, flabby breasts are hardened, and the acme of perfection in woman, a perfectly developed bosom, is obtained. 18 YEARS WITHOUT A FAILURE PROVES IT. Sealed facts, 4c. stamps. CONWAY SPECIFIC CO., 15 Temple Place, Boston, Elevator, 9 to 5 Daily.

MOTOR BUREAU

A Practical Plan for the Sale and Purchase of Second-Hand Cars.

MOTOR, the National Magazine of Motoring, has established a BUREAU as an aid to those who intend to buy or to sell second-hand cars.

It is the purpose of MOTOR BUREAU to bring the buyer and the seller together quickly by listing their "wants" and telling the buyers what the sellers have, and the sellers what the buyers want.

The details of all second-hand cars listed in MOTOR BUREAU for sale are sent to all intending purchasers.

A small fee of $1 to cover the incidental expenses of the BUREAU is required for listing each second-hand car or for listing the want of an intending purchaser. The fee also entitles the buyer or the seller, as the case may be, to a "want" or a "for sale" advertisement in MOTOR.

For buyers not having the time or the skill to make a satisfactory selection, MOTOR'S consulting engineer, Herbert L. Towle, a well known motor car expert, will make examinations, tests and selections at a fair rate for the time spent in such work.

IF YOU WANT TO SELL OR WANT TO BUY A SECOND-HAND CAR

SELLERS	BUYERS
Should also give a description of the car for sale, including full particulars as to age, model, running condition, and all general conditions and other necessary details.	Should also give particulars as to the kind of car, whether gasoline, steam or electric is preferred, if the car is to be used on good or bad roads, for city use or touring, and other details necessary to a satisfactory purchase.

FILL OUT—CUT OUT—MAIL TO-DAY.

MOTOR BUREAU, 1789 Broadway, New York City:

For the enclosed $1 list my "want" attached hereto, in MOTOR BUREAU, according to your advertisement. It is understood that you will write a "want" advertisement from the details enclosed and publish it in MOTOR.

Our Easter Greeting

AN ARRAY OF BARGAINS

THE one great day of the year that all women look forward to for "style day" is Easter Sunday—we have made unusual preparations to meet the wants of the Easter season. Every department is filled with the rarest bargains of the year—exclusive styles and bargain inducements abound throughout the store.

We invite you to this great sale that will excel in money-saving opportunities any sale that has ever been offered here.

Grand Easter Offering to the Mothers and Boys of New England

Thousands of suits and little topcoats at the biggest disccount from regular prices. Up to date styles in reliable makes, were never offered so early in the season.

Messrs. Kahn, Wertheimer & Smith, makers of this famous clothing for boys, have accepted our offer for their surplus stock of spring clothing, as their twenty-eight salesmen, covering nearly every state in the Union, start at once with their winter lines, and empty racks are now the rule in all well conducted wholesale houses before entering upon another season's business.

This most timely purchase gives you an opportunity to fit out your boys, either with better clothing than you had intended to buy, or with the same quality for a great deal less than you had expected to pay.
